come.

27 19 Wherefore, whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink the cup of the Lord ^k unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.

28 * 20 Let ^l every man therefore examine * 2 Cor. 13.
himself, and so let him eat of this bread, and 5.
drink of this cup.

29 For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh his own damnation, because he ^m discerneth not the Lord's body.

30 21 For this cause many are weak and sick among you, and many sleep.

31 For if we would ⁿ judge ourselves, we should not be judged.

32 But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, because we should not be condemned with the world.

33 22 Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another.

34 And

per, out of the institution of it, the parts whereof are these, touching the pastors, to shew forth the Lord's death by preaching his word: to bless the bread and the wine by calling upon the name of God, and together with prayers to declare the institution thereof: and finally, to deliver the bread broken to be eaten, and the cup received to be drunken with thanksgiving. And touching the flock, that every man examine himself, that is to say, to prove both his knowledge, and also faith, and repentance: to shew forth the Lord's death, that is, in true faith to yield unto his word and institution: and last of all, to take the bread at the minister's hand, and to eat it and to drink the wine, and give God thanks: this was Paul's and the apostles manner of ministering.

ⁱ This word (Broken) noteth out unto us Christ's manner of death, for although his legs were not broken, as the thieves legs were, yet was his body very sore tormented, and torn, and bruised.

¹⁹ Whosoever contemn the holy sacraments, that is, use them not aright, are guilty not of the bread and wine, but of the thing itself, that is, of Christ, and shall be grievously punished for it.

^k Otherwise than meet is such mysteries should be handled.

²⁰ The examination of a man's self, is of necessity required in the supper, and therefore they ought not to be admitted unto it, which cannot examine themselves: as children, furious and mad men, also such as either have no knowledge of Christ, or not sufficient, although they profess Christian religion and other such like.

^l This place beateth down the faith of credit, or unwrap-ped faith, which the papists maintain.

^m He is said to discern the Lord's body, that hath consideration of the worthiness of it, and therefore cometh to eat of this meat with great reverence.

²¹ The prophaning of the body and blood of the Lord in his mysteries, is sharply punished of him, and therefore such a mischief ought diligently to be prevented by judging and correcting of a man's self.

ⁿ Try and examine ourselves, by faith and repentance, separating ourselves from the wicked.

²² The supper of the Lord is a common action of the whole church, and therefore there is no place for private suppers.

A. D. 59. 34 ²³ And if any man be hungry, let him eat at home, that ye come not together unto condemnation. ²⁴ Other things will I set in order when I come.

C H A P. XII.

1 To draw away the Corinthians from contention and pride, he sheweth that spiritual gifts are therefore diversely bestowed, 7 that the same being jointly to each other employed, 12 we may grow up together into one body of Christ, in such equal proportion and measure, 20 as the members of man's body do.

NOW ¹ concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ² ignorant.

2 ² Ye know that ye were ³ Gentiles, and were carried away unto the dumb idols, as ye were led.

3 ³ Wherefore, I declare unto you, that no man ⁴ speaking by the Spirit of God, calleth Jesus ⁵ execrable: also no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost.

4 ⁴ Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit.

5 And there are diversities of administrations, but the same Lord.

6 And there are diversities of ⁶ operations, but God is the same, which worketh all in all.

7 But the manifestation of the Spirit is ⁷ given to every man, to ⁸ profit withal.

8 ⁸ For to one is given by the Spirit the word of ⁹ wisdom: and to another, the word of knowledge, by the same Spirit:

9 And to another ⁹ is given faith, by the same Spirit: and to another, the gifts of healing, by the same Spirit:

10 And to another, the ¹⁰ operations of great works: and to another, ¹¹ prophecy: and to another, the ¹² discerning of spirits: and to another, diversities of tongues: and to another, the interpretation of tongues.

11 ¹¹ And all these things work one and the self-same Spirit, distributing to every man severally ¹² as he will.

12 ¹² For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of the body which is one, though they be many, yet are but one body: ¹³ even so is ¹⁴ Christ.

13 For by one Spirit are we all baptized into ¹⁵ one body, whether we be Jews or Grecians, whether we be bond or free, and have been all made to ¹⁶ drink into one Spirit.

14 ¹⁴ For the body also is not one member, but many.

15 ¹⁵ If the foot would say, Because I am not of the hand, I am not of the body, is it therefore not of the body?

16 And if the ear would say, Because I am not of the eye, I am not of the body, is it therefore not of the body?

17 ¹⁷ If the whole body were an eye, where were

¹ Now he entereth into the third part of this treatise, touching the right use of spiritual gifts, wherein he giveth the Corinthians plainly to understand that they abused them: for they that excelled, bragged ambitiously of them, and so robbed God of the praise of his gifts: and having no consideration of their brethren, abused them to a vain ostentation, and so robbed the church of the use of those gifts. On the other side, the inferior sort envied the better, and went about to make a departure, so that all that body was as it were scattered and rent in pieces. So then going about to remedy these abuses, willet them first to consider diligently, that they have not these gifts of themselves, but from the free grace and liberality of God, to whose glory they ought to bestow them all.

² Ignorant to what purpose these gifts are given you.

² He reproveth the same, by comparing their former state with that wherein they were at this time indued with those excellent gifts.

³ As touching God's service and the covenant, mere strangers.

³ The conclusion: Know you therefore that you cannot so much as move your lips to honour Christ withal, but by the grace of the Holy Ghost.

⁴ Doth curse him, or by any means whatsoever diminish his glory.

⁴ In the second place, he layeth another foundation, to wit, that these gifts are diverse as the functions also are diverse, and their offices diverse, but that one self-same Spirit, Lord and God, is the giver of all these gifts, and that to one end, to wit, for the profit of all.

⁵ The Spirit is plainly distinguished from the gifts.

⁵ So Paul calleth that inward force which cometh from the Holy Ghost, and maketh men fit to wonderful things.

⁷ To the use and benefit of the church.

² Foretelling of things to come.

³ Whereby false prophets are known from true, wherein Peter passed Philip in discovering Simon Magus, Acts 8. 20.

⁴ He addeth moreover something else, to wit, that although that these gifts are unequal, yet they are most wisely divided, because the will of the Spirit of God is the rule of this distribution.

⁶ The applying of the similitude. So must we also think, saith he, of the mystical body of Christ: for all we that believe, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, are by one self-same baptism, joined together with our head, that by that means there may be framed one body, compact of many members: and we have drunk one self-same Spirit, that is to say, a spiritual feeling, perception, and motion common to us all out of one cup.

⁷ Christ joined together with his church.

⁸ To become one body with Christ.

⁹ By one quickening drink of the Lord's blood, we are made partakers of his only Spirit.

⁹ He amplifieth that which followed of the similitude, as if he should say, The unity of the body is not only not let by this diversity of members, but also it could not be a body, if it did not consist of many, and those diverse members.

¹⁰ Now he buildeth his doctrine upon the foundations which he hath laid: and first of all he continueth in his purposed similitude, and afterward he goeth to the matter rarely and simply. And first of all, he speaketh unto them which would have separated themselves from those whom they envied, because they had not such excellent gifts as they: now this is, saith he, as if the foot should say, it were not of the body, because it is not the hand: or the ear, because it is not the eye. Therefore all parts ought rather to defend the unity of the body, being coupled together to serve one another.

¹¹ Again speaking to them, he sheweth them, that if that should come to pass which they desire, to wit, that all should be equal one to another, there would follow a destruction of the whole body, yea and of themselves: for it could

A. D. were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, gifts of healing? do all speak with tongues? A. D.
 59. where were the smelling? do all interpret? 59.
 18 But now hath God disposed the members every one of them in the body at his own pleasure.
 19 For if they were all one member, where were the body?
 20 But now are there many members, yet but one body.
 21 ¹² And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee: nor the head again to the feet, I have no need of you.
 22 Yea, much rather those members of the body, which seem to be ^p more feeble, are necessary.
 23 And upon those members of the body, which we think most dishonest, put we more ^q honesty on: and our uncomely parts have more comeliness on.
 24 For our comely parts need it not: but God hath tempered the body together, and hath given the more honour to that part which lacked,
 25 Lest there should be any division in the body: but that the members should have the same ^r care one for another.
 26 ¹³ Therefore if one member suffer, all suffer with it: if one member be had in honour, all the members rejoice with it.
 27 Now ye are the body of Christ, and members for your ^s part.
 28 ^{* Eph. 4. 11.} ¹⁴ And God hath ordained some in the church: as first apostles, secondly prophets, thirdly teachers, then them that do miracles: after that, the gifts of healing, ^t helpers, ^u governors, diversity of tongues.
 29 Are all apostles? are all prophets? are all teachers?
 30 Are all doers of miracles? have all the gifts of healing? do all speak with tongues? A. D.

 31 ¹⁴ But desire you the best gifts, and I will yet shew you a more excellent way.

CHAP. XIII.

¹ He sheweth that there are no gifts so excellent, which in God's sight are not corrupt, if charity be away: 4 and therefore he digresseth unto the commendation of it.

THOUGH ¹ I speak with the tongues of men and ² angels, and have not love, I am as sounding brass, or a ^b tinkling cymbal.

² And though I had the gift of prophecy, and knew all secrets, and all knowledge, yea, if I had all ^c faith, so that I could remove ^{} mountains, and had not love, I were nothing. ^{ Matt. 17, 20.}

³ And though I feed the poor with all my goods, and though I give my body that I be burned, and have not love, it profiteth me nothing.

⁴ ² Love ^d suffereth long: it is bountiful: love envieth not: love doth not boast itself: it is not puffed up:

⁵ It doeth ^e no uncomely thing: it seeketh not her own things: it is not provoked to anger: it thinketh not evil:

⁶ It rejoiceth not in iniquity, but ^f rejoiceth in the truth:

⁷ It suffereth all things: it believeth all things: it hopeth all things: it endureth all things.

⁸ ³ Love doth never fall away, though that prophecyings be abolished, or the tongues cease, or ^g knowledge vanish away.

⁹ ⁴ For we know in ^h part, and we prophesy in part.

could not be a body, unless it were made of many members knit together, and diverse one from the other. And that no man might find fault with this division as unequal, he addeth, that God himself hath coupled all these together. Therefore all must remain coupled together, that the body may remain in safety.
¹² Now on the other side, he speaketh unto them which were indued with more excellent gifts, willing them not to despise the inferiors as unprofitable, and as though they served to no use: for God, saith he, hath in such sort tempered this inequality, that the more excellent and beautiful members can in no wise lack the more abject, and such as we are ashamed of, and that they should have more care to see unto them and to cover them: that by this means the necessity which is on both parts, might keep the whole body in peace and concord: that although if each part be considered apart, they are of divers degrees and conditions, yet because they are joined together, they have a community both in commodities and discommodities.
^p Of the smallest and vilest offices, and therefore smally accounted of, of the rest.
^q We more carefully cover them.
^r Should bestow their operation and offices to the profit and preservation of the whole body.
¹³ Now he applieth this same doctrine to the Corinthians, without any allegory, warning them, that seeing there are diverse functions and diverse gifts, it is their duty not to offend one against another, either by envy or ambition, but rather that they being joined together in love and charity one with another, every one of them bestow to the profit of all, that which he hath received, according as his ministry doth require.
^s For all churches, wheresoever they are dispersed through the whole world, are diverse members of one body.
^t The office of deacons.
^u He setteth forth the order of elders, which were the maintainers of the church's discipline.
¹⁴ He teacheth them that are ambitious and envious, a certain holy ambition and envy, to wit, if they give themselves to the best gifts, and such as are most profitable to the church, and so if they contend to excel one another in love, which far passeth all other gifts.

¹ He reasoneth first of charity, the excellence whereof he first sheweth by this, that without it, all other gifts are as nothing before God: which thing he proveth partly by an induction, and partly also by an argument taken of the end, wherefore those gifts are given. For to what purpose are those gifts but to God's glory, and the profit of the church, as is before proved? so that those gifts without charity, have no right use.
² A very earnest kind of amplifying a matter, as if he said, If there were any tongues of angels, and I had them, and did not use them to the benefit of my neighbour, it were nothing else but a vain and prattling kind of babbling.
^b That giveth a rude and no certain sound.
^c By faith, he meaneth the gift of doing miracles, and not that faith which justifieth, which cannot be void of charity, as the other may.
² He describeth the force and nature of charity, partly by a comparison of contraries, and partly by the effects of itself: whereby the Corinthians may understand, both how profitable it is in the church, and how necessary: and also how far they are from it, and therefore how vainly and without cause they are proud.
^d Word for word, deferreth wrath.
^e It is not conumelious.
^f Rejoiceth at righteousness in the righteous. For the Hebrews mean by truth, righteousness.
³ Again he commendeth the excellency of charity in that, that it shall never be abolished in the saints; whereas the other gifts, which are necessary for the building up of the church, so long as we live here, shall have no place in the world to come.
^g The way to get knowledge by prophesying.
⁴ The reason: because we are now in that state that we have need to learn daily, and therefore we have need of those helps, to wit, of the gift of tongues, and knowledge, and also of them that teach them: But to what purpose serve they then, when we have obtained and gotten the full knowledge of God which serveth now but for them which are imperfect, and go by degrees to perfection?
^h We learn imperfectly.

A. D. 59. 10 But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be abolished.

11 When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things.

12 For now we see through a glass darkly: but then shall we see face to face. Now I know in part: but then shall I know even as I am known.

13 And now abideth faith, hope, and love, these three: but the chiefest of these is love.

C H A P. XIV.

1 He commendeth the gift of prophesying: 7 and by a similitude taken of the musical instruments, 12 he teacheth the true use of interpreting the scriptures:

17 He taketh away the abuse: 34 and forbidteth women to speak in the congregation.

FOLLOW after love, and covet spiritual gifts, and rather that ye may prophesy.

2 For he that speaketh a strange tongue, speaketh not unto men, but unto God: for no man heareth him: howbeit in the Spirit he speaketh secret things.

3 But he that prophesieth, speaketh unto men to edifying, and to exhortation, and to comfort.

4 He that speaketh strange language, edifieth himself: but he that prophesieth, edifieth the church.

5 I would that ye all spake strange languages,

He setteth forth that, that he said, by an excellent similitude. comparing this life to our infancy or childhood, wherein we stagger and stammer rather than speak, and think and understand childish things, and therefore have need of such things as may form and frame our tongue and mind: but when we become men, to what purpose should we desire that stammering, those childish toys, and such like things, whereby our childhood is framed by little and little?

The applying of the similitude of our childhood to this present life, wherein we darkly behold heavenly things, according to the small measure of light which is given us, through the understanding of tongues, and hearing the teachers and ministers of the church: of our man's age and strength, to that heavenly and eternal life, wherein when we behold God himself present, and are lightened with his full and perfect light, to what purpose would we desire the voice of man, and those worldly things which are most imperfect? But yet then, shall all the saints be knit both with God, and between themselves, with most fervent love, and therefore charity shall not be abolished but perfected, although it shall not be shewed forth, and entertained by such manner of duties as peculiarly and only belong to the infirmity of this life.

All this must be understood by comparison.

The conclusion: as if the apostle should say, Such therefore shall be our condition then: but now we have three things, and they remain sure if we be Christ's, as without which, true religion cannot consist, to wit, faith, hope, and charity. And among these, charity is the chiefest, because it ceaseth not in the life to come as the rest do, but is perfected and accomplished. Foreseeing that faith and hope tend to things which are promised and are to come, when we have presently gotten them, to what purpose should we have faith and hope? but yet there at length shall we truly and perfectly love both God and one another.

He inferreth now of that he spake before: therefore being charity is the chiefest of all, before all things: let it be before you as chief and principal: and so esteem those things as most excellent, which profit the greater part of men: (as prophesy, that is to say, the gift of teaching and applying the doctrine: which was contemned in respect of other gifts, although it be the chiefest and most necessary for the church) and not those which for a shew seem to be marvellous, as the gifts of tongues, when a man was suddenly indued with the knowledge of many tongues, which made men greatly amazed, and yet of itself was not greatly to any use, unless there were an interpreter.

What prophesy is, he sheweth in the third verse.

He reprehendeth their perverse judgment touching the gift of tongues. For why was it given: to wit, to the in-but rather that ye prophesied: for greater is he that prophesieth, than he that speaketh divers tongues, except he expound it, that the church may receive edification.

6 And now, brethren, if I come unto you, speaking divers tongues, what shall I profit you, except I speak to you either by revelation, or by knowledge, or by prophesying, or by doctrine?

7 Moreover things without life which give a sound, whether it be a pipe or an harp, except they make a distinction in the sounds, how shall it be known what is piped or harped?

8 And also if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to battle?

9 So likewise you, by the tongue, except ye utter words that have signification, how shall it be understood what is spoken? for ye shall speak in the air.

10 There are so many kinds of voices (as it cometh to pass) in the world, and none of them is dumb.

11 Except I know then the power of the voice, I shall be unto him that speaketh a barbarian, and he that speaketh, shall be a barbarian unto me.

12 Even so, forasmuch as ye covet spiritual gifts, seek that ye may excel unto the edifying of the church.

13 Wherefore, let him that speaketh a strange tongue, pray that he may interpret.

14 For if I pray in a strange tongue, my spirit tent that the mysteries of God might be the better known to a greater sort. Thereby it is evident that prophecy, whereunto the gift of tongues ought to serve, is better than this: and therefore the Corinthians did judge amiably, in that they made more account of the gift of tongues than of prophesying: because forsooth the gift of tongues was a thing more to be bragged of. And hereupon followed another abuse of the gift of tongues, in that the Corinthians used tongues in the congregation without an interpreter. Which thing altho' it might be done to some profit of him that spake them, yet he corrupted the right use of that gift, because there came thereby no profit to the hearers: and common assemblies were instituted and appointed not for any private man's commodity, but for the profit of the whole company.

A strange language which no man can understand without an interpreter.

By that inspiration which he hath received of the Spirit, which notwithstanding he abuseth, when he speaketh mysteries which none of the company can understand.

Which may further men in the study of godliness.

The company.

He setteth forth that which he said by a similitude, which he borroweth and taketh from instruments of music, which although they speak not perfectly, yet they are distinguished by their sounds, that they may be the better used.

That do fitly utter the matter itself.

He proveth that interpretation is necessarily to be joined with the gift of tongues, by the manifold variety of languages, inasmuch that if one spake to another without an interpreter, it is as if he spake not.

As the papists in all their sermons, and they that ambitiously pour out some Hebrew or Greek words in the pulpit before the unlearned people, thereby to get them a name of vain learning.

The conclusion: if they will excel in those spiritual gifts, as it is meet, they must seek the profit of the church, and therefore they must not use the gift of tongues, unless there be an interpreter to expound the strange and unknown tongue, whether it be himself that speaketh, or another interpreter.

Pray for the gift of interpretation.

A reason: because it is not sufficient for us to speak to in the congregation, that we ourselves do worship God in spirit, that is, according to the gift which we have received; but we must also be understood of the company, lest that be unprofitable to other, which we have spoken.

If I pray, when the church is assembled together, in a strange tongue.

A. D. 59. Spirit prayeth: but mine understanding is without fruit.
 15 What is it then? I will pray with the spirit, but I will pray with the understanding also: I will sing with the spirit, but I will sing with the understanding also.
 16 ⁷ Else, when thou blest with the spirit, how shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned, say Amen at thy giving of thanks, seeing he knoweth not what thou sayest?
 17 For thou verily givest thanks well, but the other is not edified.
 18 I thank my God, I speak languages more than ye all.
 19 Yet had I rather in the church to speak five words with mine understanding, that I might also instruct others, than ten thousand words in a strange tongue.
 20 Brethren, be not children in understanding, but as concerning maliciousness be children: but in understanding be of a ripe age.
 21 In the law it is written, * By men of other tongues, and by other languages will I speak unto this people: yet so shall they not hear me, saith the Lord.
 22 Wherefore strange tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not: but prophesying serveth not for them that believe not, but for them which believe.
 23 If therefore, when the whole church is come together in one, and all speak strange tongues, there come in they that are unlearned, or they which believe not, will they not say, that ye are out of your wits?
 24 But if all prophesy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is rebuked of all men, and is judged of all:
 25 And so are the secrets of his heart made manifest, and so he will fall down on his face and worship God, and say plainly that God is in you indeed.
 26 What is to be done then, brethren? when ye come together, according as every one of you hath a psalm, or hath doctrine, or hath a tongue; or hath revelation, or hath interpretation, let all things be done unto edifying.

 27 If any man speak a strange tongue, let it be by two, or at the most by three, and that by course, and let one interpret.
 28 But if there be no interpreter, let him keep silence in the church, which speaketh languages, and let him speak to himself, and to God.
 29 Let the prophets speak, two or three, and let the other judge.
 30 And if any thing be revealed to another that fitteth by, let the first hold his peace.
 31 For ye may all prophesy one by one, that all may learn, and all may have comfort.
 32 And the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets.
 33 For God is not the author of confusion; but of peace, as we see in all the churches of the saints.
 34 * Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak: but they ought to be subject, as also the law saith.
 35 And if they will learn any thing, let them ask their husbands at home: for it is a shame for a woman to speak in the church.
 36 Came the word of God out from you? either came it unto you only?
 37 If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you, are the commandments of the Lord.
 38 And if any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant.
 39 Wherefore, brethren, covet to prophesy, and forbid not to speak languages.
 40 Let all things be done honestly, and by order.

A. D. 59.

* 1 Tim. 4. 12.

* Gen. 3. 16.

3 E CHAP.

* The gift and inspiration which the Spirit giveth me, doth his part, but only to myself.
 1 No fruit cometh to the church by my prayers.
 2 So that I may be understood of others, and may instruct others.
 3 Another reason: seeing that the whole congregation must agree to him that speaketh, and also witness this agreement, how shall they give their assent or agreement which know not what is spoken?
 4 Only, without all consideration of the hearers.
 5 He that sitteth as a private man.
 6 So then one uttered the prayers, and all the company answered, Amen.
 7 He propoundeth himself for an example, both that they may be ashamed of their foolish ambition, and also that he may eschew all suspicion of envy.
 8 A very few words.
 9 Now he reproveth them freely for their childish folly, which see not how this gift of tongues, which was given to the profit of the church, is turned by their ambition into an instrument of cursing, seeing that the same also is contained among the punishments wherewith God punished the stubbornness of his people, that he dispersed them amongst strangers whose language they understood not.
 10 By the law he understandeth all the whole scripture.
 11 The conclusion: therefore the gift of tongues serveth to punish the unfaithful and unbelievers, unless it be referred to prophecy (that is to say, to the interpretation of scripture) and that, that which is spoken be by that means understood of the hearers.
 12 Another argument: the gift of tongues without prophecy is not only unprofitable to the faithful, but also doth much hurt: as well to them as to the unfaithful, which should be won in the public assemblies. For by this means it cometh to pass, that the faithful seem to others to be mad, much less can the unfaithful be instructed thereby.

 13 Look Acts 4. 13.
 14 The conclusion. The edifying of the congregation is a rule and square of the right use of all spiritual gifts.
 15 The manner how to use the gift of tongues. It may be lawful for one or two, or at the most for three, to use the gift of tongues, one after another, in an assembly, so that there be some to expound the same: but if there be none to expound, let him that hath that gift speak to himself alone.
 16 The manner of prophesying: let two or three propound, and let the other judge of that that is propounded, whether it be agreeable to the word of God or no: if in this examination the Lord give any man ought to speak, let them give him leave to speak. Let every man be admitted to prophesy, severally, and in his order, so far forth as it is requisite for the edifying of the church: let them be content to be subject each to other's judgment.
 17 The doctrine which the prophets bring; which are inspired with God's Spirit.
 18 Women are commanded to be silent in public assemblies, and they are commanded to ask of their husbands at home.
 19 A general conclusion of the treatise of the right use of spiritual gifts in assemblies: with a sharp reprehension, lest the Corinthians might alone seem to themselves to be wise.
 20 Skilful in knowing and judging spiritual things.
 21 The church ought not to care for such as be stubbornly ignorant, and will not abide to be taught, but to go forward, notwithstanding, in those things which are right.
 22 Prophecy ought simply to be retained and kept in congregations: the gift of tongues is not to be forbidden, but all things must be done orderly.

59. 1 The gospel that Paul preached. 3 The death and resurrection of Christ. 8 Paul saw Christ. 9 He had persecuted that church, whereof afterward he was made a minister. 12 Christ first rose again, and we all shall rise by him. 26 The last enemy, death. 29 To be baptized for the dead. 32 At Ephesus Paul fought with beasts. 35 How the dead are raised. 45 The first Adam. The last Adam. 47 The first and second man. 51 We shall all be changed, we shall not all sleep. 55 Death's sting. 57 Victory. 58 Constancy and steadfastness.

MOREOVER, ¹ * brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which ye have also received, and wherein ye ² continue,

2 And whereby ye are saved, if ye keep in memory after what manner I preached it unto you, ³ except ye have believed in vain.

3 For first of all, I delivered unto you that which I received, how that Christ died for our sins, according to the ⁴ scriptures,

4 And that he was buried, and that he arose the third day, according to the ⁵ scriptures.

5 And that he was seen of Cephas, then of the ⁶ twelve.

6 After that, he was seen of more than five hundred brethren at ⁷ once: whereof many remain unto this present, and some also are asleep.

7 After that, he was seen of James: then of all the apostles.

8 And last of all, he was seen also of me, as of one born out of due time.

9 * For I am the least of the apostles, which am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God.

¹ The sixth treatise of this epistle, concerning the resurrection: and he useth a transition, or passing over from one matter to another, shewing first, that he bringeth no new thing, to the end that the Corinthians might understand that they had begun to swerve from the right course: and next, that he goeth not about to intreat of a trifling matter, but of another chief point of the gospel, which if it be taken away, their faith must needs come to nought. And so at the length he beginneth this treatise at Christ's resurrection, which is the ground and foundation of ours, and confirmeth it, first, by the testimony of the scriptures, and by the witness of the apostles, and of more than five hundred brethren, and last of all by his own.

² In the profession whereof you continue yet.

³ Which is very absurd, and cannot be but that they that believe must reap the fruit of faith.

⁴ Of those twelve picked and chosen apostles, which were commonly called twelve, though Judas was put out of the number.

⁵ Not at several times, but together and at one instant.

⁶ He maintaineth by the way, the authority of his apostleship, which was requisite to be in good credit among the Corinthians, that this epistle might be of force and weight amongst them. In the mean season he compareth himself in such sort after a certain divine art, with certain others, that he maketh himself inferior to them all.

⁸ The second, by an absurdity: if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is not Christ risen again.

⁹ The proof of that absurdity, by other absurdities: if Christ be not risen again, the preaching of the gospel is in vain, and the credit that you gave unto it, is vain, and we are liars.

¹⁰ He repeateth the same argument taken out of an absurdity, purposing to shew how faith is in vain, if the resurrection of Christ be taken away.

¹¹ First, seeing death is the punishment of sin, in vain should we believe that our sins were forgiven us, if they remain: but they do remain, if Christ rose not from death.

¹² They are yet in their sins, which are not sanctified, nor have obtained remission of their sins.

¹³ Secondly, unless that this be certain that Christ rose again, all they which died in Christ are perished. So then what profit cometh of faith?

10 * But by the grace of God, I am that I am: and his grace which is in me, was not in vain: but I laboured more abundantly than they all: yet not I, but the grace of God which is with me.

11 Wherefore, whether it were I, or they, so we preach, and so have ye believed.

12 ¶ ³ Now if it be preached, that Christ is risen from the dead, how say some among you, that there is no resurrection of the dead?

13 ⁴ For if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen:

14 ⁵ And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain:

15 And we are found also false witnesses of God: for we have testified of God, that he hath raised up Christ: whom he hath not raised up, if so be the dead be not raised.

16 ⁶ For if the dead be not raised, then is Christ not raised.

17 And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain: ⁷ ye are ⁸ yet in your sins.

18 ⁸ And so they which are asleep in Christ, are perished.

19 ⁹ If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men the most miserable.

20 ¹⁰ But now is Christ risen from the dead, ¹¹ and was made the ¹² first fruits of them that slept.

21 ¹² For since by man ¹³ came death, by man ¹⁴ came also the resurrection of the dead.

22 For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be ¹⁵ made alive.

23 ¹³ But every man in his ¹⁴ own order: the ¹⁵ first fruits ¹⁶ is Christ: afterward, they that are of ¹⁷ Christ, at his coming ¹⁸ shall rise again.

24 ¹⁴ Then ¹⁹ shall be the ²⁰ end, when he hath deli-

⁹ The third argument, which is also taken from an absurdity: for unless there be another life, wherein such as trust and believe in Christ shall be blessed, they were the most miserable of all creatures, because in this life they are the most miserable.

¹⁰ A conclusion of the former argument: therefore Christ is risen again.

¹¹ He putteth the last conclusion for the first proposition of the argument that followeth. Christ is risen again: therefore shall we, the faithful (for of them he speaketh), rise again. Then followeth the first reason of this consequence: for Christ is set forth unto us to be considered of, not as a private man apart and by himself, but as the first fruits: and he taketh that which was known to all men, to wit, that the whole heap is sanctified in the first-fruits.

¹² He alludeth to the first-fruits of corn, the offering whereof sanctified the rest of the fruits.

¹³ Another confirmation of the same consequence: for Christ is to be considered as opposite to Adam, that as from one man, Adam, sin came over all, so from one man, Christ, life cometh unto all: that is to say, that all the faithful, as they die, because by nature they were born of Adam, so because in Christ they are made the children of God by grace, they are quickened and restored to life by him.

¹⁵ He doeth two things together: for he sheweth that the resurrection is in such sort common to Christ with all his members, that notwithstanding he far passeth them, both in time (for he was the first that rose again from the dead) and also in honour, because that from him and in him is all our life and glory. Then by this occasion he passeth to the next argument.

¹⁶ The fourth argument, wherewith also he confirmeth the other, hath a most sure ground, to wit, because that God must reign. And this is the manner of his reign, that the Father will be shewed to be King of his Son, who was made man, to whom all things are made subject (the promises only excepted) to the end that the Father may afterward triumph in his Son the Conqueror. And he maketh two parts of this reign and dominion of the Son: wherein the Father's glory consisteth, to wit, the overcoming of his enemies (whereof some must be deprived of all power, as Satan and all the wicked, be they never so proud and mighty, and others must be utterly abolished, as death) and a plain and full delivery of the godly from all enemies, that by this means 25 For he must reign till he hath put all enemies ^k under his feet.

26 The ^l last enemy that shall be destroyed, is death, ri 8. 6. 11. 2. 3. 27 * For he hath put down all things under his feet. (And when he saith that all things are subdued to him, it is manifest that he is excepted, which did put down all things under him.)

28 And when all things shall be subdued unto him, ^m then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that did subdue all things under him, that ⁿ God may be all in all.

29 ^o Else what shall they do which are baptized ^p for dead? if the dead rise not at all, why are they then baptized for dead?

30 ^q Why are we also in jeopardy every hour?

31 By our ^r rejoicing which I have in Christ Jesus our Lord, I die daily.

11. 22. 32 ^s If I have fought with beasts at Ephesus ^t after the manner of men, what advantageth it me, if the dead be not raised up? * ^u let us ^v eat and drink: for to-morrow we shall die.

33 ^w Be not deceived: evil speakings corrupt good manners.

34 Awake to live righteously, and sin not:

A. D. 59. for some have not the knowledge of God, I speak this to your shame.

35 ²⁰ But some man will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body come they forth?

36 ²¹ O fool, that which thou sowest, is not quickened, except it die.

37 And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare corn as it falleth, of wheat, or of some other.

38 ²² But God giveth it a body at his pleasure, even to every seed his own body.

39 All flesh is not the same flesh: but there is one flesh of men, and another flesh of beasts, and another of fishes, and another of birds.

40 There are also heavenly bodies, and earthly bodies: but the glory of the heavenly is one; and the glory of the earthly is another.

41 There is another glory of the sun, another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory.

42 ²³ So also is the resurrection of the dead. The body is ^s sown in corruption, and is raised in incorruption.

43 It is sown in ^t dishonour, and is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness, and is raised in ^u power.

44 ²⁴ It is sown a natural body, and is raised a spirimeans God may fully set forth in the body of the church cleaving fast to their head Christ, his kingdom and glory, as a King in his subjects. Moreover he putteth the first degree of this kingdom in the resurrection of his Son, who is the Head: and the perfection, in the full conjunction of the members with the head, which shall be in the latter day. Now all these tend to this purpose, to shew that unless the dead do rise again, neither the Father can be King above all, neither Christ be the Lord of all: for neither should the power of Satan and death be overcome, nor the glory of God be full in his Son, nor his Son's in his members.

^k The shutting up and finishing of all things.

^l All his enemies, which shall be spoiled of all the power they have. Psalm 110. 1. Acts 2. 34. Heb. 1. 13. and 10. 13.

^m Christ is considered here as he appeared in the form of a servant, in which respect he ruleth the church as head, and that because this power was given him of his Father.

ⁿ The shutting up of the argument, which is taken from the whole to the part: for if all his enemies shall be put under his feet, then must it needs be that death also shall be subdued under him.

^o Not because the Son was not subject to his Father before, but because his body, that is to say, the church which is here in distress, and not yet wholly partaker of his glory, is not yet fully perfect, and also because the bodies of the saints which be in the graves, shall not be glorified until the resurrection: but Christ as he is God, hath us subject to him as his Father hath, but as he is Priest, he is subject to his Father together with us. August. book 1. chap. 8. of the Trinity.

^p By this high kind of speech, is set forth an incomprehensible glory which floweth from God, and shall fill all of us, as we are joined together with our head, but yet so, that our head shall always reserve his pre-eminence.

^q The fifth argument is taken of the end of baptism, to wit, because that they which are baptized, are baptized for dead: that is to say, that they may have a remedy against death, because that baptism is a token of regeneration.

^r They that are baptized to this end and purpose, that death may be put out in them, or to rise again from the dead, whereof baptism is a seal.

^s The sixth argument: unless there be a resurrection of the dead, why should the apostles so daily cast themselves into danger of so many deaths?

^t As though he said, I die daily, as all the miseries I suffer can well witness, which I may truly boast of that I have suffered amongst you.

^u The taking away of an objection: but thou Paul didst ambitiously, as commonly men are wont to do, when thou didst fight with beasts at Ephesus. That is very like, saith Paul: for what could that advantage me, were it not for the glory of eternal life which I hope for?

^v Not upon any godly motion, nor casting mine eyes upon God, but carried away with vain glory, or a certain headiness.

^w The seventh argument, which dependeth upon the last: If there be no resurrection of the dead, why do we give ourselves to any thing else, save to eating and drinking?

^x These are speeches that epicures use.

^y The conclusion with a sharp exhortation, that they take heed of the naughty company of certain, from whence he sheweth that this mischief sprang: warning them to be wise with sobriety unto righteousness.

^z Now that he hath proved the resurrection, he discovereth their foolishness, in that they scoffingly demanded how it could be that the dead could rise again; and if they did rise again, they asked mockingly, what manner of bodies they should have? Therefore he sendeth these fellows, which seemed to themselves to be marvellous wise and witty, to be instructed of poor rude husbandmen.

^{aa} Thou mightest have learned either of these, saith Paul, by daily experience: for seeds are sown, and rot, and yet notwithstanding so far it is off that they perish, that contrariwise they grow up far more beautiful: and whereas they are sown naked and dry, they spring up green from death by the virtue of God: and doth it seem incredible to thee that our bodies should rise from corruption, and that indued with a far more excellent quality?

^{ab} We see a diversity both in one and the self-same thing which hath now one form and then another, and yet keepeth its own kind: as it is evident in a grain which is sown, bare, but springeth up far after another sort: and also in diverse kinds of one self-same sort, as amongst beasts: and also amongst things of diverse sorts, as the heavenly bodies and the earthly bodies: which also differ very much one from another. Therefore there is no cause why we should reject either the resurrection of the bodies, or the changing of them into a better state, as a thing impossible or strange.

^{ac} He maketh three manner of qualities of the bodies being raised: Incorruption, to wit, because they shall be sound, and altogether of a nature that cannot be corrupt: Glory, because they shall be adorned with beauty and honour: Power, because they shall continue everlasting, without meat, drink, and all other helps, without which this frail life cannot keep itself from corruption.

^{ad} Is buried, and man is hid as the seed in the ground.

^{ae} Void of honour, void of glory and beauty.

^{af} Freed from the former weakness, whereas it is subject to such alteration and change, that it cannot maintain itself without meat and drink, and such other like helps.

^{ag} He sheweth perfectly in one word this change of the quality of the body by the resurrection, when he saith,

A. D. a spiritual body: ²⁵ there is a natural body, and ⁵⁹ there is a spiritual body.

• Gen. 2. 7. 45 As it is also written, The ² first man ² Adam was made a living soul: and the last Adam was made a ⁷ quickening spirit.

46 ²⁹ Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural, and afterward that which is spiritual.

47 The first man is of the earth, ² earthly: the second man is the Lord from ² heaven.

48 ²⁷ As is the earthly, such are they that are earthly: and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly.

49 And as we have borne the ³ image of the earthly, so shall we bear the image of the heavenly.

50 ²³ This I say, brethren, that ^c flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God, neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.

51 ²² Behold, I shew you a ^d secret thing, We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, 52 In ^e a moment, in the twinkling of an eye at the last ^e trumpet: for the trumpet shall blow, and the dead shall be raised up incorruptible, and we shall be changed.

53 For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality.

54 So when this corruptible hath put on incorruption, and this mortal hath put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, ^e Death is swallowed up into victory.

55 O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

56 The sting of death is sin: and the strength of sin is the law.

• 1 John 5. 57 ^e But thanks be unto God, which hath given us victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

58 ²² Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye stedfast, unmoveable, abundant always in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the ^f Lord.

that of a natural body, it shall become a spiritual body: which two qualities being clean different the one from the other, he straightway expoundeth, and setteth forth diligently.

²⁵ That is called a natural body which is quickened and maintained by a living soul only, such as Adam was, of whom all we are born naturally: and that is said to be a spiritual, which together with the soul is quickened with a far more excellent virtue, to wit, with the Spirit of God, which descendeth from Christ the second Adam unto us.

² Adam is called the first man: because he is the root, as it were, from whence we spring, and Christ is the latter man: because he is the beginning of them that are spiritual, and in him we are all comprehended.

⁷ Christ is called a Spirit, by reason of that most excellent nature, that is to say, God who dwelleth in him bodily, as Adam is called a living soul, by reason of the soul which is the best part in him.

²⁹ Secondly, he willet the order of this double state or quality to be observed, that the natural was first, Adam being created of the clay of the earth: and the spiritual followed and came upon it, to wit, when as the Lord being sent from heaven, endued our flesh, which was prepared and made fit for him, with the fulness of the Godhead.

²⁹ Wallowing in dirt, and wholly given to an earthly nature.

² The Lord is said to come down from heaven by that kind of speech, whereby that which is proper to one is vouched of another.

²⁷ He applieth both the earthly naturalness of Adam (if I may so say) to our bodies, so long as they are naturally conversant upon earth, to wit, in this life and in the grave: and also the spirituality of Christ to the same our bodies, after they are risen again: and he saith that that goeth before, and this shall follow.

²³ Not a vain and false image, but such an one as had the truth with it indeed.

C H A P. XVI.

1 He exhorteth them to help the poor brethren of Jerusalem: 10 Then he commendeth Timothy, 13 and so, with a friendly exhortation, 19 and commendations, endeth the epistle.

Concerning ¹ the gathering for the saints, as I have ordained in the churches of Galatia, so do ye also.

2 Every ² first day of the week, let every one of you put aside by himself, and lay up as God hath ^b prospered him, that then there be no gatherings when I come.

3 And when I am come, whomsoever ye shall allow by ^c letters, them will I send to bring your liberality unto Jerusalem.

12 As touching our brother Apollos, I greatly desired him to come unto you with the brethren: but his mind was not at all to come at this ²⁵ The conclusion: We cannot be partakers of the glory of God, unless we put off all that gross and filthy nature of our bodies, subject to corruption, that the same body may be adorned with incorruptible glory.

^c Flesh and blood are taken here for a living body, which cannot attain to incorruption, unless it put off corruption.

²⁹ He goeth further, declaring that it shall come to pass, that they which shall be found alive in the latter day, shall not descend into that corruption of the grave, but shall be renewed with a sudden change, which change is very requisite: and that the certain enjoying of the benefit and victory of Christ, is deferred unto that latter time.

The Second Epistle of the Apostle PAUL to the CORINTHIANS.

C H A P. I.

1 He beginneth with the praise of affliction, 8 declaring what he hath suffered in Asia, 10 and how happily God assisted him. 17 He saith it was not upon any lightness that he came not according to his promise.

PAUL ⁱ an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God, and our brother Timotheus, to the church of God which is at Corinth, with all the saints which are in all Achaia:

2 Grace be with you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 ^{*} ² Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of ^b mercies, and the God of all comfort, 4 Which comforteth us in all our tribulation, ³ that we may be able to comfort them which are in any affliction, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God.

ⁱ See the declaration of such salutation in the former epistles.

² He beginneth after this manner with thanksgiving, which notwithstanding (otherwise than he was wont) he applieth to himself: beginning his epistle with the setting forth of the dignity of his apostleship, constrained (as it should seem) by their importunity which took an occasion to despise him, by reason of his miseries. But he answereth, that he is not so afflicted, but that his comforts do exceed his afflictions, shewing the ground of them, even the mercy of God the Father in Jesus Christ.

^a To him be praise and glory given.

³ The Lord doth comfort us to this end and purpose, that we may so much the more surely comfort others.

^c The miseries which we suffer for Christ, or which Christ suffereth in us.

⁴ He denieth that either his afflictions, wherewith he was often afflicted, or the consolations which he received of 5 For as the ^c sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation aboundeth through Christ.

6 ⁴ And whether we be afflicted, it is for your consolation and salvation, which is ^d wrought in the enduring of the same sufferings which we also suffer: or whether we be comforted, it is for your consolation and salvation.

7 And our hope is steadfast concerning you, in as much as we know, that as ye are partakers of the sufferings, so shall ye be also of the consolation.

8 ⁵ For brethren, we would not have you ignorant of our affliction, which came unto us in Asia, how we were pressed out of measure passing strength, so that we altogether ^e doubted even of life.

9 Yea, we received the sentence of death in ourselves, because we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raised the dead.

10 Who

God, may justly be despised, seeing that the Corinthians both ought and might take great occasion to be confirmed by either of them.

^d Although salvation be given us freely, yet because there is a way appointed us whereby we must come to it, which is, the race of an innocent and upright life, which we must run, therefore we are said to work out our salvation, Phil. 2. 12. And because it is God only that of his free good will worketh all things in us, therefore is he said to work the salvation in us by these self-same things by which we must pass to everlasting life, after that we have once overcome all incumbrances.

⁵ He witnesseth that he is not only not ashamed of his afflictions, but that he desireth also to have all men know the greatness of them, and also his delivery from them, although it be not yet perfect.

^e I knew not at all what to do, neither did I see by man's help which way to save myself.

^f I was resolved within myself to die.

A. D. 60.

A. D. 60. 10 Who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver us: in whom we trust, that yet hereafter he will deliver us.

11 So that ye labour together in prayer for us, that for the gift bestowed upon us for many, thanks may be given by many persons for us.

12 For our rejoicing is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity and godly pureness, and not in fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our conversation in the world, and most of all to you-wards.

13 For we write none other things unto you, than that ye read, or else that ye acknowledge, and I trust ye shall acknowledge unto the end.

14 Even as ye have acknowledged us partly, that we are your rejoicing, even as ye are ours, in the day of our Lord Jesus.

15 And in this confidence was I minded first to come unto you, that ye might have had a double grace:

16 And to pass by you into Macedonia, and to come again out of Macedonia unto you, and to be led forth toward Judea of you.

17 When I therefore was thus minded, did I use lightness? or mind I those things which I mind, according to the flesh, that with me should be Yea, yea, and Nay, nay?

18 Yea, God is faithful, that our word toward you was not Yea, and Nay.

19 For the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, that is, by me, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, was not Yea, and Nay: but in him it was Yea.

20 For all the promises of God in him are Yea, and are in him Amen, unto the glory of God through us.

⁸ From these great dangers.

⁶ That he may not seem to boast himself, he attributeth all to God, and therewith also confesseth that he attributeth much to the prayers of the faithful.

⁵ Secondly, he putteth away another slander, to wit, that he was a light man, and such a one as was not likely to be credited, seeing that he promised to come unto them, and came not. And first he speaketh of the simplicity of his mind, and sincerity, which they knew both by his voice when he was present, and they ought to acknowledge it also in his letters, being absent: and moreover he protesteth that he will never be otherwise.

¹ Trusting to that very wisdom which God of his free goodness hath given me from heaven.

⁴ He saith he writeth barely and simply: for he that writeth in coloured sort, is rightly said to write otherwise than we read: and this he saith the Corinthians shall truly know and like of very well.

³ Perfectly.

² Paul's rejoicing in the Lord was, that he had won the Corinthians: and they themselves rejoiced that such an apostle was their instructor, and taught them so purely and sincerely.

² When he shall sit as judge.

² Another benefit.

⁵ He putteth away their slander and false report by denying it, and first of all, in that that divers went about to persuade the Corinthians, that in preaching of the gospel, Paul agreed not to himself: for this was the matter and the cause.

² As men do which will rashly promise any thing, and change their purpose at every turning of an hand.

³ That I should say and unsay a thing?

¹⁵ He calleth God to witness and for judge, of his constancy in preaching and teaching one self-same gospel.

¹ True, and of whose faithful witness it were horrible wickedness to doubt.

¹⁴ He joineth also with himself, his fellows as witnesses, with whom he fully consented in teaching one self-same

21 And it is God which stablisheth us with you in Christ, and hath anointed us.

22 Who hath also sealed us, and hath given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts.

23 Now, I call God for a record unto my soul, that to spare you, I came not as yet unto Corinth.

24 Not that we have dominion over your faith, but we are helpers of your joy: for by faith ye stand.

CHAP. II.

1 He excuseth his not coming unto them, 2 and privily reprehendeth them. 4 He sheweth that such is his affection towards them; 5 that he never rejoiceth but when they are merry. 6 Perceiving the adulterer (whom he commanded to be delivered up to Satan) to repent, he requesteth that they forgive him. 13 He mentioneth his going into Macedonia.

BUT I determined thus in myself, that I would not come again to you in heaviness.

2 For if I make you sorry, who is he then that should make me glad, but the same which is made sorry by me?

3 And I wrote the same thing unto you, lest when I came, I should take heaviness of them, of whom I ought to rejoice: this confidence have I in you all, that my joy is the joy of you all:

4 For in great affliction, and anguish of heart, I wrote unto you with many tears: not that ye should be made sorry, but that ye might perceive the love which I have, especially unto you.

5 And if any hath caused sorrow, the same hath thing, to wit, one self-same Christ.

⁵ Was not diverse and wavering.

⁶ That is, in God.

¹² Last of all, he declareth the sum of his doctrine, to wit, that all the promises of salvation are sure and ratified in Christ.

⁴ Christ is set forth to exhibit and fulfil them, also most assuredly, and without all doubt.

² Through our ministry.

¹³ He attributeth the praise of this constancy, only to the grace of God, through the Holy Ghost, and therewithal concludeth, that they cannot doubt of his faith and his fellows, without doing injury to the Spirit of God, seeing that they themselves do know all this to be true.

⁷ An earnest, is what ever is given to confirm a promise.

¹⁴ Now coming to the matter, he sweareth that he did not only not lightly alter his purpose of coming to them, but rather that he came not unto them for this cause, that he might not be constrained to deal more sharply with them being present, than he would.

² Against myself, and to the danger of mine own life.

¹⁵ He removeth all suspicion of arrogance, declaring that he speaketh not as a lord unto them, but as a servant, appointed of God to comfort them.

² He setteth the joy and peace of conscience, which God is author of, against tyrannous fear, and therewithal sheweth the end of the gospel.

⁶ Causing grief amongst you, which he should have done, if he had come to them before they had repented them.

² For I trusted that you would take that out of the way forthwith which you knew I was discontented with, considering how you are persuaded that my joy is your joy.

A. D. 60. hath not made ^c me sorry, but ^d partly (lest I should more ^e charge him) you all.

6 It is sufficient unto the same man, that he was rebuked of many.

7 So that now contrariwise ye ought rather to ^f forgive him; and comfort him, lest the same should be swallowed up with overmuch heaviness.

8 Wherefore, I pray you, that you would ^g confirm your love towards him.

9 For this cause also did I write, that I might know the proof of you, whether ye would be obedient in all things.

10 To whom ye forgive any thing, I forgive also: for verily if I forgave any thing, to whom I forgave it, for your sakes forgave I it in the ^h sight of Christ, 11 Lest Satan should circumvent us: for we are not ignorant of his ⁱ enterprises.

12 ¶ ^j Furthermore, when I came to Troas to preach Christ's gospel, and a door was opened unto me of the Lord, 13 I had no rest in my spirit, because I found not Titus my brother, but took my leave of them, and went away into Macedonia.

14 Now thanks be unto God, which always maketh us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the ^k favour of his knowledge by us in every place.

15 ^l For we are unto God the sweet savour of Christ, in them that are saved, and in them which perish.

16 To the one we are the favour of death, unto death; and to the other the favour of life, unto life: ^m and who is sufficient for these things?

17 ⁿ For we are not as many, which make ^o merchandize of the word of God: but as of sincerity, but as of God in the sight of God speak we in Christ.

^c As if he said, All that sorrow is so clean wiped away, as though he had never felt it.

^d As for me (saith Paul) I have no more to do with him.

^e Lest I should overcharge him, who is burdened enough of himself, which I would be glad were taken from him.

^f That whereas before you punished him sharply, you would now forgive him.

^g That at my intreaty, you would declare by the consent of the whole church, that you take him again for a brother.

^h Truly, and from the heart.

ⁱ Of his mischievous counsels and devilish will.

^j He returneth to the confirmation of his apostleship, and bringeth forth the testimonies, both of his labour, and also of God's blessing.

^k He alludeth to the anointing of the priests, and the incense of the sacrifices.

^l He denieth that ought should be taken away from the dignity of his apostleship, because they saw evidently that it was not received with like success in every place, nay rather very many rejected and detested him; seeing that he preached Christ not only as a Saviour of them that believe, but also as a judge of them that contemn him.

^m Again he putteth away all suspicion of arrogancy, attributing all things that he did to the virtue of God, whom he serveth sincerely, and without all dishonest affection: whereof he maketh them witnesses, even to the 6th verse of the next chapter.

ⁿ We do not handle it craftily and covetously, or less sincerely than we ought: and he useth a metaphor which is taken from hucksters, which use to play the false harlots with whatsoever cometh into their hands.

^o The apostle frameth his speech wisely, that by little and little, he may come from the commendation of the person, to the matter itself.

^p Which I took pains to write as it were.

C H A P. III.

A. D. 60.

1 He desireth no other commendation, ² than their continuing in the faith. 6 He is a minister, not of the letter, but of the Spirit. 8 He sheweth the difference of the law, and the gospel. 13 That the brightness of the law doth rather dim the sight than lighten it: 18 but the gospel doth make manifest God's countenance unto us.

DO we begin to praise ourselves again? or need we, as some other, epistles of recommendations unto you, or letters of recommendations from you?

2 Ye are our epistle, written in our hearts, which is understood and read of all men:

3 In that ye are ^a manifest, to be the epistle of Christ, ^b ministered by us, and written, not with ink, but with the Spirit of the ^c living God: ^d not in tables of stone, but in fleshly tables of the heart.

4 And such ^e trust have we through Christ to God:

5 Not that we are sufficient of ourselves, to think any thing as of ourselves: but our ^f sufficiency is of God,

6 ^g Who also hath made us able ministers of the New Testament, not of the ^h letter, but of the Spirit: for the letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life.

7 If then the ministration of death, written with letters ⁱ and ingraven in stones, was ^j glorious, so that the children of Israel could not behold the face of Moses, for the glory of his countenance (which glory is done away)

8 How shall not the ^k ministration of the Spirit be more glorious?

9 For if the ministry of condemnation was glorious, much more doth the ministration of ^l righteousness exceed in glory.

10 For even that which was glorified, was ^m not

^c By the way, he setteth the virtue of God against the ink wherewith epistles are commonly written, to shew that it was wrought by God.

^d He alludeth by the way to the comparison of the outward ministry of the priesthood of Levi, with the ministry of the gospel, and the apostolical ministry, which he handleth afterward more fully.

^e This boldness we shew, and thus gloriously may we boast of the worthiness and fruit of our ministry.

^f In that we are fit and meet to make other men partakers of so great a grace.

^g He amplifieth his ministry and his fellows: that is to say, the ministry of the gospel, comparing it with the ministry of the law, which he considereth in the person of Moses, by whom the law was given: against whom he setteth Christ the author of the gospel. Now this comparison is taken from the very substance of the ministry. The law is as it were a writing of itself dead, and without efficacy: but the gospel, or new covenant, is as it were the very virtue of God itself in renewing, justifying, and saving of men. The law propoundeth death, accusing all men of unrighteousness: the gospel offereth and giveth righteousness and life. The governance of the law served for a time to the promise: the gospel remaineth to the end of the world. Therefore what is the glory of that in comparison of the majesty of this?

ⁱ Imprinted and ingraven: so that by this place we may plainly perceive, that the apostle speaketh not of the ceremonies of the law, but even of the ten commandments.

^j This word, Glory, betokeneth a brightness, and a majesty which was bodily in Moses, but spiritually in Christ.

^k Whereby God offereth, yea, and giveth the Spirit, not as a dead thing, but a quickening spirit, working life.

^l To wit, of Christ, which being imputed to us as our own, we are not only not condemned, but also we are crowned as righteous.

A. D. 60. not glorified in this point, that is, as touching the exceeding glory.

11 For if that which should be ¹ abolished, was glorious, much more shall that which remaineth, be glorious :

12 ³ Seeing then that we have such trust, we use great boldness of speech.

Exod. 34. 34. 13 * + And we are not as Moses, which put a vail upon his face, that the children of Israel should not look unto the ² end of that which should be abolished.

14 Therefore their minds are hardened : for until this day remaineth the same covering undertaken away in the reading of the Old Testament, which vail in Christ is put away.

15 But even unto this day, when Moses is read, the vail is laid over their hearts.

16 Nevertheless, when their heart shall be turned to the Lord, the vail shall be taken away.

17 Now the ³ Lord is the * Spirit : and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.

18 ⁵ But we all behold as in a mirror the glory of the Lord with open face, and are changed into the same image, from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord.

C H A P. IV.

1 He sheweth that he hath so laboured in preaching the gospel, & that such are even blinded of Satan, who do not perceive the brightness thereof. 7 That the same is carried in earthen vessels, 10 who are subject to many miseries: 16 and therefore he exhorteth them by his own example to be courageous, 17 and condemn this present life.

¹ The law, yea, and the ten commandments themselves, together with Moses, is abolished, if we consider the ministry of Moses apart by itself.

³ He sheweth wherein standeth this glory of the preaching of the gospel, to wit, in that that it setteth forth plainly and evidently, that which the law shewed darkly : for it sent them that heard it to be healed of Christ, which was to come, after that it had wounded them.

⁴ He expoundeth by the way the allegory of Moses's covering, which was a token of the darkness and weakness that is in men, which were rather dulled by the bright shining of the law than lightened : which covering was taken away by the coming of Christ, who lighteneth the hearts, and turneth them to the Lord, that we may be brought from the slavery of this blindness, and set in the liberty of the light by the virtue of Christ's Spirit.

⁶ Christ is that Spirit which taketh away that covering, by working in our hearts, whereunto also the law itself called us, though in vain, because it speaketh to dead men, until the Spirit quickeneth us.

⁷ Going forwards in the allegory of the covering, he compareth the gospel to a glass, which although it be most bright and sparkling, yet doth it not only not dazzle their eyes which look in it, as the law doth, but also transformeth them with its beams, so that they also be partakers of the glory and shining of it, to lighten others : as Christ said unto his, " You are the light of the world," whereas he himself was the only light. We are also commanded in another place to shine as candles before the world, because we are partakers of God's Spirit. But Paul speaketh here properly of the ministers of the gospel, as it appeareth by that that goeth before, and that that cometh after, and that setteth them his own example and his fellows.

⁹ Though we are broken in pieces with miseries and calamities, yet we yield not.

¹⁰ Subtily and all kind of deceit which men hunt after, as it were dens and lurking holes to cover their shameless dealings withal.

T Herefore, ¹ seeing that we have this ministry, as we have received mercy, we ² faint not :

2 But have cast from us the ^b cloaks of shame, and walk not in craftiness, neither handle we the word of God ^c deceitfully : but in declaration of the truth we approve ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God.

3 ² If our gospel be then hid, it is hid to them that are lost :

4 In whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds, that is, of the infidels, that the ^d light of the glorious gospel of Christ, which is the ^e image of God, should not shine unto them.

5 ³ For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord, and ourselves your servants for ^f Jesus's sake.

6 For God ^g that commanded the light to shine out of darkness, is he which hath shined in our hearts, to give the ^h light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. * Gen. 1. 5.

7 ⁴ But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, ⁵ that the excellency of that power might be of God, and not of us.

8 We are afflicted on every side, yet are we not in distress : we are in doubt, but yet we despair not.

9 We are persecuted, but not forsaken : cast down, but we perish not.

10 ⁶ Every where we bear about in our body the ⁱ dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life of Jesus might be also made manifest in our bodies.

11 For we which ^k live are always delivered unto

^c This is it that in the former chapter he called, making merchandise of the word of God.

² An objection : Many hear the gospel, and yet are no more lightened thereby, than by the preaching of the law. He answereth, The fault is in the men themselves, whose eyes Satan plucketh out, who ruleth in this world. And yet notwithstanding doth he and his fellows set forth the most clear light of the gospel to be seen and beholden, seeing that Christ whom only they preach, is he in whom only God will be known, and as it were, seen.

^d The light of plain and lightsome preaching, which telleth forth the glory of Christ.

^e In whom the Father setteth forth himself to be seen and beholden.

³ He removeth, according to his accustomed manner, all suspicion of ambition, avouching that he teacheth faithfully, but as a servant; and witnessing that all this light, which he and his fellows give to others, proceedeth from the Lord.

^f To preach this self-same Jesus to you.

⁵ Which made it only with his word.

^h That being lightened of God, we should in like sort give that light to others.

⁴ He taketh away a stumbling-block, by which was darkened amongst some the bright shining of the ministry of the gospel, to wit, because the apostles were the most miserable of all men. Paul answereth, that he and his fellows are as it were earthen vessels, but yet there is in them a most precious treasure.

⁵ He bringeth marvellous reasons why the Lord doth so afflict his chiefest servants, to the end, saith he, that all men may perceive that they stand not by any man's virtue, but by the singular virtue of God, in that they die a thousand times, but never perish.

⁶ An amplification of the former sentence, wherein he compareth his afflictions to a daily death, and the virtue of the Spirit of God in Christ, to life, which oppresseth that death.

ⁱ So Paul calleth that miserable state and condition, that the faithful, but especially the ministers, are in.

^k Which live that life, to wit, by the Spirit of Christ, among so many and so great miseries.

a. D. 60. unto death for Jesus's sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh:

12 ⁷ So then death worketh in us, and life in you.

13 ⁸ And because we have the same ^m spirit of faith, according as it is written, * I believed, and therefore have I spoken: we also believe, and therefore speak.

14 Knowing that he which hath raised up the Lord Jesus, shall raise us up also by Jesus, and shall set us with you.

15 ⁹ For all things are for your sakes, ⁿ that that most plenteous grace by the thanksgiving of many, may redound to the praise of God, 16 Therefore we faint not: ¹⁰ but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is ^o renewed daily.

17 For our ^p light affliction which is but for a moment, causeth unto us a far more excellent and an eternal weight of ^q glory:

18 While we look not on the things which are seen, but on the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen, are temporal: but the things which are not seen, are eternal.

C H A P. V.

1 He continueth in the same argument, 6 touching the certain hope of salvation 8 through faith, 12 not to praise himself, 14 seeing he hath God and his church before his eyes, 17 and esteemeth nothing, but newness of life in Christ.

FOR ^r we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle be destroyed, we have a

⁷ A very cunning conclusion: as if he would say, Therefore to be short, we die that you may live by our death, for that they ventured into all those dangers for the building of the church's sake, and they ceased not to confirm all the faithful with the examples of their patience.

⁸ He declareth the former sentence, shewing that he and his fellows die in a sort, to purchase life to others, but yet notwithstanding they are partakers of the same life with them: because they themselves do first believe that which they propounded to others to believe, to wit, that they also shall be saved together with them in Christ.

^m The same faith, by the inspiration of the same Spirit.

⁹ He sheweth how this constancy is preserved in them, to wit, because they respect God's glory, and the salvation of the church committed unto them.

ⁿ When it shall please God to deliver me, and restore me to you, that exceeding benefit which shall be poured upon me, shall in like sort redound to the glory of God, by the thanksgiving of many.

¹⁰ He addeth as it were a triumphant song, how that he is outwardly afflicted, but inwardly he profiteth daily: and passeth not at all for all the miseries that may be sustained in this life, in comparison of that most constant and eternal glory.

^o Gathereth new strength, that the outward man be not overcome with the miseries which come freshly, one upon the neck of another, being maintained and upholden with the strength of the inward man.

^p Afflictions are not called light, as though they were light of themselves, but because they pass away quickly, when as indeed our whole life is of no great long continuance.

^q Which remaineth for ever firm and stable, and can never be shaken.

^r Taking occasion by the former comparison, he compareth this miserable body, as it is in this life, to a frail and brittle tabernacle, against which he setteth the heavenly tabernacle, so terming that sure and everlasting condition of this same body glorified in heaven, inasmuch, saith he, that we are not only not addicted to this tabernacle, but also do with sobs and sighs desire rather that tabernacle. And to this place also concerning the glory to come, is put within the treatise of the dignity of the ministry, as the other was, whereof we spake in the beginning of the second chapter.

^s He calleth the glory of immortality, which we shall be building given of God, that is, an house not made with hands, but eternal in the heavens. A. D. 60.

2 For therefore we sigh, desiring to be ^a clothed with our house, which is from ^b heaven.

3 ² Because that if we be clothed, we shall not be ^{*} found naked.

4 For indeed we that are in this tabernacle, ¹⁵ sigh and are burdened, because we would not be unclothed, but would be clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life.

5 And he that hath ^c created us for this thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit.

6 ³ Therefore we are alway ^d bold, though we know that while we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord.

7 (For we walk by ^e faith, and not by sight.)

8 Nevertheless, we are ^f bold, and love rather to remove out of the body, and to dwell with the Lord.

9 Wherefore also we ^g covet, that both dwelling at home, and removing from home, we may be acceptable to him.

10 ^{* 4} For we must all ^h appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, that every man may receive the things which are done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or evil. * Rom. 14. 10.

11 ⁵ Knowing therefore that ⁱ terror of the Lord, we persuade men, and we are made manifest unto God, and I trust also that we are made manifest in your consciences.

3 G

as it were clothed with, a garment.

^b Heavenly, not that the substance of it is heavenly, but for the glory of it.

² An exposition of the former saying: We do not without cause desire to be clad with the heavenly house, that is, with that everlasting and immortal glory, as with a garment: for when we depart hence, we shall not remain naked, having once cast off the covering of this body, but we shall take our bodies again, which shall put on as it were another garment besides: and therefore we sigh not for the weariness of this life, but for the desire of a better life: Neither is this desire in vain, for we are made to that life, the pledge whereof we have, even the Spirit of adoption.

^c He meaneth that first creation, to give us to understand that our bodies were made to this end, that they should be clothed with heavenly immortality.

³ He inferreth upon that sentence that went next before, thus. Therefore seeing that we know by the Spirit, that we are strangers so long as we are here, we patiently suffer this triance (for we are now so with God, that we behold him but by faith, and are therefore now absent from him) but so that we aspire and have a longing always to him: therefore also we behave ourselves so, that we may be acceptable to him, both while we live here, and when we go from hence to him.

^d He calleth them (bold) which are always resolved with a quiet and settled mind to suffer what danger soever, nothing doubting but their end shall be happy.

^e Faith, of those things which we hope for, and not having God presently in our view.

^f And yet we are in such sort bold, and do so pass on our pilgrimage with a valiant and a quiet mind, that yet notwithstanding we had rather depart home to the Lord.

^g And seeing it is so, we strive to live so, that both in this our pilgrimage here, we may please him, and that at length we may be received home to him.

^h That no man might think it to pertain to all, which he spake of that heavenly glory, he addeth, that every one shall first render an account of his pilgrimage, after that he is departed from hence.

ⁱ We must all appear personally, and enquiry shall be made of us, that all may see how we have lived.

12 ⁶ For we praise not ourselves again unto you, but give you an occasion to rejoice of us, that ye may have to answer against them which rejoice in the ^k face, and not in the heart.

13 ⁷ For whether we be out of our wit, we are it to God: or whether we be in our right mind, we are it unto you.

14 ⁸ For that love of Christ ¹ constraineth us,

15 Because we thus judge, that if ² one be dead for all, then were all dead: and he died for all, that they which live, should not henceforth ² live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again.

16 ⁹ Wherefore, henceforth know we no man after the flesh: ¹⁰ yea though we had known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more.

17 ¹¹ Therefore if any man be in Christ, let him be ² a new creature. ^{*} Old things are passed away: behold, all things are become new.

18 ¹² And all things are of God, which hath reconciled us unto himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given unto us the ministry of reconciliation.

19 For God was in Christ, and reconciled the world to himself, not imputing their sins unto them, and hath ² committed to us the word of reconciliation

20 Now then are we ambassadors for Christ: as though God did beseech you through us, we pray you in Christ's stead, that ye be reconciled to God.

21 For he hath made him to be ³ sin for us, which ⁴ knew no sin, that we should be made the ⁵ righteousness of God in him.

⁶ He removeth all suspicion of pride, by a new reason, because it is behoveable, not for his part, but for theirs, that his apostleship be counted sincere against the vain ostentation of a few others.

^{*} In outward disguisings, and that coloured shew of man's wisdom and eloquence, and not in true godline's, which is sealed in the heart.

⁷ The meaning is: Even when I am mad (as some men think of me) whilst I seem as a fool to boast myself, I do it for your profit, no less than when I preach the gospel simply unto you.

⁸ He goeth forward in putting away all suspicion of desire of estimation and boasting: for the love of Christ, saith he, compelleth us hereunto, that seeing he died for us all, which were dead when as we lived to ourselves (that is, while we were yet given to these earthly affections) we in like sort should consecrate our whole life, which we have received of him, to him (to wit) being indued with the Holy Ghost, to this end and purpose, that we should meditate upon nothing but that which is heavenly.

³ Look Romans, chap. 6. and 7.

⁴ He sheweth what it is, not to live to ourselves but to Christ, to wit, to know no man according to the flesh, that is to say, to be conversant amongst men, as not to care for those worldly and carnal things, as they do which respect a man's stock, his country, form, glory, riches, and such like, wherein men commonly dote and weary themselves.

⁶ An exhortation for every man which is renewed with the Spirit of Christ, to meditate heavenly things, and not earthly.

⁷ As a thing made anew of God, for though a man be not newly created when God giveth him the spirit of regeneration, but only his qualities are changed, yet notwithstanding it pleased the Holy Ghost to speak so, to teach us that we must attribute all things to the glory of God: not that we are stocks and blocks, but because that God createth in us, both the will to will well, and the power to do well.

⁸ He commendeth the excellency of the ministry of the 3 ³ We give no occasion of offence in any thing, that our ministry should not be reprehended.

4 But in all things we ^b approve ourselves as ^{*} the ministers of God ⁴ in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses, gospel, both by the authority of God himself, who is the author of that ministry, and also by the excellency of the doctrine of it: for it announceth atonement with God, by free forgiveness of our sins, and justification offered unto us in Christ, and that so lovingly and liberally, that God himself doth after a sort pray men by the mouth of his ministers, to have consideration of themselves, and not to despise so great a benefit. And when he so saith, he plainly reprehendeth them which falsely challenged to themselves the name of pastors.

^r Who was clean void of sin.

^s Righteous before God, and that with a righteousness which is not essential to us, but being essential to Christ, God imputeth it to us through faith.

^t Men do not only need the ministry of the gospel, before they have received grace, that they may be partakers of it, but also after they have received grace, that they may continue in it.

² In that that grace is offered, it is of the grace of God, who hath appointed times and seasons to all things, that we may take occasion when it is offered.

³ Which I of my free mercy and love towards thee liked of and appointed: at which time God poured out that his marvellous love upon us.

⁴ He sheweth the Corinthians the pattern of a true minister in his own example and Timotheus's, and Sylvanus's, to the end that (as he purposed from the beginning) he might procure authority to himself, and his like.

^b Declare and shew indeed.

⁴ He first of all reckoneth up those things, which are neither always in the ministers, nor without exception, unless it be according to the affection of the mind, patience only excepted, which also is one of the virtues which ought to be always in a good minister.

^c In tossing to and fro, finding no place of rest and quietness.

⁵ Secondly, he reckoneth up such virtues as are necessary, and ought alway to be in them, and whereby, as by good armour, all lets and hindrances may be overcome.

1 Lest by overmuch urging them he should dismay their tender minds, 2 he proveth that all that he said, 4 proceeded of the great good will he bare unto them: 8 and therefore they should not be offended that he made them sorry, 10 and brought them to repentance not to be repented of.

SEEING then we have these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, and finish our sanctification in the fear of God.

2 Receive us: we have done wrong to no man: we have corrupted no man: we have defrauded no man.

3 I speak it not to your condemnation: for I have said before, that ye are in our hearts, to die and live together.

4 I use great boldness of speech toward you: I rejoice greatly in you: I am filled with comfort, and am exceeding joyous in all our tribulation.

A. D.
60.

5 For when we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on every side, fightings without, and terrors within.

6 But God, that comforteth the abject, comforted us at the coming of Titus:

7 And not by his coming only, but also by the consolation wherewith he was comforted of you, when he told us your great desire, your mourning, your fervent mind to me-ward, so that I rejoiced much more.

8 For though I made you sorry with a letter, I repent not, though I did repent: for I perceive that the same epistle made you sorry, though it were but for a season.

9 I now rejoice, not that ye were sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance: for ye sorrowed godly, so that in nothing ye were hurt by us.

10 For godly sorrow causeth repentance unto salvation, not to be repented of: but the worldly sorrow causeth death.

11 For behold, this thing that ye have been godly sorry, what great care it hath wrought in you: yea, what clearing of yourselves: yea, what indignation: yea, what fear: yea, how great desire: yea, what a zeal: yea, what revenge: in all things ye have shewed yourselves, that ye are pure in this matter.

12 Wherefore, though I wrote unto you, I did it not for his cause that had done the wrong, neither for his cause that had the injury, but that our care toward you in the sight of God might appear unto you.

13 Therefore we were comforted, because ye were comforted: but rather we rejoiced much more for the joy of Titus, because his spirit was refreshed by you all.

14 For if that I have boasted any thing to him of you, I have not been ashamed: but as I have spoken unto you all things in truth, even so our boasting unto Titus was true.

15 And his inward affection is more abundant toward you, when he remembereth the obedience of you all, and how with fear and trembling ye received him.

⁶ Going about to rebuke them, he saith first, that he dealeth with them sincerely, and with an open and plain heart, and therewithal complaineth that they do not the like in loving again their father.

⁸ The opening of the mouth and heart, betokeneth a most earnest affection in him that speaketh, as it saith commonly with them that are in some great joy.

^b You are in my heart, as in a house, and that no narrow or straight house, for I have opened my whole heart to you, but you are inwardly strait-laced to me-ward.

¹ After the manner of the Hebrews, he calleth those tender affections which rest in the heart and bowels.

⁷ Now he rebuketh them boldly, for that they became fellows with infidels in outward idolatry, as though it were a thing indifferent. And this is the fourth part of this epistle, the conclusion whereof is, that such as the Lord hath vouchsafed the name of his children, must keep themselves pure, not only in mind, but also in body, that they may wholly be holy unto the Lord.

^k What can there be between them?

^m God dwelleth with us, because Christ is become God with us.

^a Both of body and soul, that by this means the sanctification may be perfect, consisting in both the parts thereof.

¹ He returneth again from that admonition to his own person, opposing the testimonies both of his faithfulness, and also of his continual good will towards them.

^b Let me have some place amongst you, that I may teach you.

^c To condemn you of unkindness or treachery.

^d Whose hearts are cast down, and are very far spent.

^e With those things which Titus told me of you at his coming, to wit, how fruitfully you read over my letters, moreover, and besides that, I am exceedingly refreshed with his presence.

² An objection. But thou hast handled us roughly: the apostle answereth that he used not this roughness without grief. And he addeth moreover, that he is also glad now that he drove them to that sorrow, although it was against his will, since it was so profitable unto them: for there is a sorrow not only praise-worthy, but also necessary, to wit, whereby repentance groweth by certain degrees, for the which repentance he praiseth them highly. And this is the fifth part of this epistle.

^f Inasmuch that that sorrow did you much good towards the amending of your lewdness and sins.

⁸ Godly sorrow is when we are not terrified with the fear of punishment, but because we feel we have offended God, our most merciful Father. Contrary to this there is another sorrow, that only feareth punishment, or when a man is vexed for the loss of some worldly goods: the fruit of the first is repentance, the fruit of the second is desperation, unless the Lord help speedily.

^h It was not coloured nor counterfeit, but such as I dare stand to before God.

A. D. 60. 16 I rejoice therefore that I may put my confidence in you in all things.

C H A P. VIII.

1 He exhorteth them by the example of the Macedonians, 9 and also even of Christ himself, 14 to be liberal towards the saints: 16 for which purpose he sheweth that Titus 18 and another brother came unto them.

WE do you also to wit, brethren, of the grace of God bestowed upon the churches of Macedonia,

2 Because in great trial of affliction their joy abounded, and their most extreme poverty abounded unto their rich liberality.

3 For to their power (I bear record) yea, and beyond their power, they were willing.

4 And prayed us with great instance, that we would receive the grace, and fellowship of the ministering which is toward the saints.

5 And this they did, not as we looked for: but gave their own selves, first to the Lord, and after unto us by the will of God.

6 That we should exhort Titus, that as he had begun, so he would also accomplish the same grace among you also.

7 Therefore, as ye abound in every thing, in faith and word, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love towards us, even so see that ye abound in this grace also.

8 This say I not by commandment, but because of the diligence of others: therefore prove I the naturalness of your love.

9 For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that he being rich, for your sakes became poor, that ye through his poverty might be made rich.

10 And I shew my mind herein: for this is expedient for you, which have begun not to do only, but also to will, a year ago.

11 Now therefore perform to do it also, that as there was a readiness to will, even so ye may perform it of that which ye have.

12 For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.

13 Neither is it that other men should be eased, and you grieved: but upon like condition, at this time your abundance supplieth their lack:

14 That also their abundance may be for your lack, that there may be equality:

15 As it is written, * He that gathered much, had nothing over: and he that gathered little, had not the less.

16 And thanks be unto God, which hath put in the heart of Titus the same care for you.

17 Because he accepted the exhortation, yea, he was so careful, that of his own accord he went unto you.

18 And we have sent also with him the brother, whose praise is in the gospel throughout all the churches.

19 (And not so only, but is also chosen of the churches to be a fellow in our journey, concerning this grace that is ministered by us unto the glory of the same Lord, and declaration of your prompt mind.)

20 Avoiding this, that no man should blame us in this abundance that is ministered by us.

21 Providing for honest things, not only before the Lord, but also before men.

22 And we have sent with them our brother, whom we have oft-times proved to be diligent in many things, but now much more diligent, for the great confidence which I have in you.

23 Whether any do inquire of Titus, he is my fellow and helper to you-ward: or of our brethren, they are messengers of the churches, and the glory of Christ.

24 Wherefore shew toward them, and before the churches, the proof of your love, and of the rejoicing that we have of you.

C H A P. IX.

1 Why, albeit he think well of their ready wills, 3 yet earnestly exhorteth them: 4 he yieldeth a reason. 6 He compareth alms to seed sowing, 13 which God doth repay with great gains.

FOR

¹ The sixth part of this epistle, containing divers exhortations to stir up the Corinthians to liberality, wherewith the poverty of the church of Jerusalem might be helped in time convenient. And first of all, he setteth out before them the examples of the churches of Macedonia, which otherwise were brought by great misery to extreme poverty, to the end that they should follow them.

² The benefit that God bestowed upon the churches.

³ For those manifold afflictions wherewith the Lord tried them, did not only not quell their joyful readiness, but also made it much more excellent and famous.

⁴ Of their own accord they were liberal.

⁵ He calleth that, Grace, that other men would have called a burden. And this verse is to be expounded by the sixth verse.

⁷ Thirdly, he warneth them that they deceive not their expectation which they have conceived of them.

⁸ At the request of the Macedonians.

⁹ Then appeareth the naturalness of our love, when as indeed, and that frankly and freely, we help our brethren even for Christ's sake.

¹⁰ The fourth argument, taken from the example of Christ.

¹¹ He taketh good heed that he seem not to wrest it out of them by constraint, for unless it be voluntary, God doth not accept it.

¹² Not only to do, but also to do willingly: for he noteth out a ready willingness, without any inforcement by any other men, much less came it of ambition and vain glory.

¹³ Against such as use to excuse themselves because they are not rich, as though it were only proper to rich men to help the poor.

¹⁴ Christian liberality is mutual, that proportion may be observed.

¹⁵ That like as now in your abundance you help others, which are poor, with some part of your goods, so should others in like sort bestow some of theirs upon you.

¹⁶ He commendeth Titus and his two companions for many causes, both that their credit might not be suspected, as though he had sent them slyly to spoil the churches, and also that they might be so much the readier to contribute.

¹⁷ In the preaching of the gospel.

¹⁸ These alms which are bestowed for the relief of the church of Jerusalem.

¹⁹ In this plentiful liberality of the churches, which is committed to our trust.

²⁰ Titus's two companions.

²¹ By whom the glory of Christ is set forth.

²² All churches shall be witnesses of this your godly dealing, in whose presence you are, for so much as you see the messengers whom they have chosen by all their consents, and sent them unto you.

A. D. 60.

A. D. 60.

FOR¹ as touching the ministering to the faints, it is superfluous for me to write unto you.

2 For I know your readiness of mind, whereof I boast myself of you unto them of Macedonia, and say, that Achaia was prepared a year ago, and your zeal hath provoked many.

3 Now have I sent the brethren, lest our rejoicing over you should be in vain in this behalf, that ye (as I have said) be ready:

4 Lest if they of Macedonia come with me, and find you unprepared, we (that we may not say, you) should be ashamed in this my^a constant boasting.

5 Wherefore, I thought it necessary to exhort the brethren to come before unto you, and to finish your benevolence appointed afore, that it might be ready, and come as of benevolence, and not as of^b niggardliness.

6² This yet remember, that he which soweth sparingly, shall reap also sparingly: and he that soweth liberally, shall reap also liberally.

7 As every man^c wisheth in his heart, so let him give, not^d grudgingly, or of^e necessity: ^a for God loveth a cheerful giver.

8 And God is able to make^f all grace to abound toward you, that ye always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound in^g every good work.

9 (^h As it is written, He hath dispersed abroad and hath given to the poor: his benevolence remaineth forⁱ ever.

10 Also he that findeth seed to the sower, will minister likewise bread for food, and multiply your seed, and increase the^j fruits of your benevolence.)

11 That on all parts ye may be made rich unto all liberality, which causeth through us thanksgiving unto God.

12³ For the ministrations of this service not only supplieth the necessities of the faints, but also abundantly causeth many to give thanks to God

13 (Which by the^k experiment of this ministrations praise God for your^l voluntary submission to the gospel of Christ, and for your liberal distribution to them, and to all men), 14 And in their prayer for you, to long after you greatly, for the abundant grace of God in you.

15^m Thanks therefore be unto God for his unspeakable gift.

CHAP. X.

2 He sheweth with what confidence, 4 with what weapons, 6 and with what revenge, he is armed against the cavillations of the wicked: 7 and that, when he is present, his deeds have no less power, 11 than his words have force, when he is absent.

NOW¹ I Paul myself beseech you by the meekness and^a gentleness of Christ, which when I am present among you, am base, but am bold toward you being absent:

2 And this I require you, that I need not to be bold when I am present, with that same confidence, wherewith I^b think to be bold against some, which esteem us as though we walked^c according to the flesh:

3² Nevertheless, though we walk in the flesh, yet we do not war after the flesh.

4 (For the weapons of our warfare are not^d carnal, but mighty through^e God, to cast down holds)

5 Casting down the imaginations, and every high thing that is exalted against the knowledge of God, ³ and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ.

6 And having ready the vengeance against all

3 H dif-

^a Rom. 12. 8. ^b Eccles. 35. 10.

¹ He wisely meeteth with the suspicion which the Corinthians might conceive: as though the apostle, in urging them so carefully, should doubt of their good will. Therefore he witnesseth that he doth it not to teach them that they ought to help the faints, seeing that he had become surety for them to the Macedonians, but only to stir them up which were running of themselves, to the end that all things might both be in a better readiness, and also be more plentiful.

² The word which he useth, signifieth such a stayedness and settledness of mind, as cannot be moved with any terror or fear.

^b As from covetous men.

² Alms must be given neither niggardly, nor with a loathful mind, or hardly: but a frank and free alms is compared to a sowing which hath a most plentiful harvest of most abundant blessing following it:

^c Determineth and appointeth freely with himself.

^d With a sparing and niggardly heart.

^e Against his will, as loth to be evil reported of.

^f All God's bountiful liberality.

³ To help others by all means possible, in doing them good in their necessities.

^h Is everlasting: now David speaketh of a man that feareth God, and loveth his neighbour, who shall never want (saith he) to give to others.

¹ There is none so good an inheritance to the godly, as bountifulness is.

³ Another excellent and double fruit of liberality towards the faints, is this: that it giveth occasion to praise God, and that our faith also is thereby made manifest.

^k By this proof of your liberality in this helping and succouring of them.

^l In shewing with one consent, that you acknowledge that only gospel, which you have willingly submitted yourselves unto, declaring thereby, that you agree with the church of Jerusalem.

¹ He returneth to the defence of his apostleship, but so that he useth his authority therein: for he warneth them earnestly and gravely, using also terrible threatenings, to shew themselves such as are apt to be instructed. And he refelleth certain proud men which made no better account of him, than of a bragging Thraaso, in that he used to be sharp against them when he was absent, because they saw no great majesty in him after the manner of men, and besides had proved his lenity, notwithstanding that in his absence he had written to them sharply. Therefore, first of all, he professeth that he was gentle and moderate, but after the example of Christ: but if they continue to still despise his gentleness, he protesteth unto them that he will shew indeed how far they are deceived, which make that account of the office of an apostle, that they do of worldly offices, that is, according to the outward appearance.

^b As though I had no other aid and help than that which outwardly I seem to have: and therefore Paul setteth his flesh, that is, his weak condition and state against his spiritual and apostolic dignity.

² Secondly, he witnesseth, that although he be like unto other men, yet he cometh furnished with that strength which no holds of man can match, whether they resist by craft and deceit, or by force and might, because he warfares with divine weapons.

^c Are not such as men get them authority withal one of another, and do great acts.

^d Stand upon that infinite power of God.

^e An amplification of this spiritual virtue, which in such sort conquereth the enemies, be they never so crafty and mighty, that it bringeth some of them by repentance unto Christ, and justly revengeth others that are stubbornly obstinate, separating them from the others which suffer themselves to be ruled.

A. D. 60. disobedience, when your obedience is fulfilled.

7 ^a Look ye on things after the ^c appearance? If any man trust in himself that he is Christ's, let him consider this again of ^c himself, that as he is Christ's, even so are we Christ's.

8 For though I should boast somewhat more of our authority, which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your destruction, I should have no shame.

9 ^b Tell I say, that I may not seem as it were to fear you with letters.

10 For the letters, faith ^b he, are sore and strong, but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech is of no value.

11 Let such one think this, that such as we are in word by letters, when we are absent, such will we be also indeed, when we are present.

12 ^c For we ^d dare not make ourselves of the number, or to compare ourselves of them which praise themselves: but they understand not that they measure themselves with ^d themselves, and ^e compare themselves with themselves.

13 But we will not rejoice of things which are not within our ^f measure, ^g but according to the measure of the line whereof God hath distributed unto us a measure to attain even unto you.

14 For we stretch not ourselves beyond our measure, as though we had not attained unto you: for even to you also have we come in preaching the gospel of Christ,

15 Not boasting of things which are ^h without our measure: that is, of other men's labours: and we hope, when your faith shall increase, to be magnified by you, according to our line abundantly.

16 And to preach the gospel in those regions which are beyond you: not to rejoice in ⁱ another man's line, that is, in the things that are prepared already.

17 ^j But let him that rejoiceth, rejoice in the Lord.

18 For he that praiseth himself is not allowed, but he whom the Lord praiseth.

^a He beareth into their heads that same matter, with great weight of words and sentences.

^b Do ye judge of things according to the outward shew?

^c Not being told of it by me.

^d He noteth out some one that was the seeds-man of this speech.

^e Being constrained to reuel the foolish brags of certain ambitious men, he witnesseth that they are able to bring nothing, but that they falsely persuade themselves of themselves: and as for himself, although he brag of excellent things, yet he will not pass the bounds which God hath measured him out, according whereunto he came even unto them in preaching the gospel of Christ, and trusteth that he shall go further, when they have so prouided that he shall not need to tarry any longer amongst them to instruct them. And hereunto is added an amplification, in that he never succeeded other men in their labours.

^f This is spoken after a taunting sort.

^g Upon a vain persuasion that they have of themselves, they take upon them they care not what.

^h They condemn all other, and measure all their doings only by themselves.

ⁱ Of those things which God hath not measured to me.

^j As though God had divided the whole world among the apostles to be husbanded.

In countries which other men have prepared and husbanded with the preaching of the gospel.

^k He somewhat mitigateth that which he spake of himself, and therewith also prepareth the Corinthians to hear other things, witnessing that he seeketh nothing else, but to approve himself to God, whose glory he only seeketh.

^l He granteth that after a sort he playeth the fool in this vaunting of things, but he addeth that he doth it against

CHAPTER XI.

A. D. 60.

2 He testifieth, that for the great love's sake he beareth to the Corinthians, he is compelled 5 to utter his own praises: 9 and that he bestowed his labour on them without any reward, 13 that the false apostles should not surpass him in any thing, 22 whom he far excelled in those things which are praise-worthy indeed.

WOULD ¹ to God, ye could suffer a little my foolishness, and indeed, ye suffer me:

2 For I am jealous over you with ^a godly jealousy: for I have prepared you for one husband, to ^b present you as a pure virgin to Christ:

3 But I fear lest as the ^c serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds should be ^c corrupt from the simplicity that is in ^d Christ:

4 ^e For if he that cometh, preacheth ^e another Jesus whom we have not preached: or if ye receive another spirit whom ye have not received: either another gospel, which ye have not received, ye might well have suffered him.

5 Verily I suppose that I was not inferior to the very chief apostles.

6 ^f And though I be ^f rude in speaking, yet I am not so in knowledge, but among you we have been made manifest to the uttermost, in all things.

7 ^g Have I committed an offence, because I abased myself, that ye might be exalted, and because I preached to you the gospel of God freely?

8 I robbed other churches, and took wages of them to do you service.

9 And when I was present with you, and had need, ^h I was not slothful to the hindrance of any man: for that which was lacking unto me, the brethren which came from Macedonia supplied, and in all things I kept ⁱ and will keep myself, that I should not be grievous to you.

10 The

his will for their profit, because he seeth them deceived by certain vain and crafty men, through the craft and subtilty of Satan.

^a He speaketh as a woer, but yet as one that seeketh them not for himself, but for God.

^b To marry you together.

^c This place is to be marked against them which loath that plain and pure simplicity of the scriptures, in comparison of the colours and paintings of man's eloquence.

^d Which is meet for them that are in Christ.

^e He sheweth that they deceive themselves, if they look to receive of any other man, either a more excellent gospel, or more excellent gifts of the Holy Ghost.

^f A more perfect doctrine of Jesus Christ.

^g He refuteth the slanders of those Thraoes. I grant, faith he, that I am not so eloquent an orator, but ye: they cannot take away the knowledge of the gospel from me, whereof you have had good proof, and that every manner of way.

^h Paul lacked not of that kind of eloquence which is meet for a man, and fit for the gospel, but he willingly wanted that painted kind of speech, which too many nowadays hunt after and follow.

ⁱ Another slander, to wit, that he was a rascal, and lived by the labour of his own hands. But herein, faith the apostle, what can you lay against me, but that I was content to take any pains for your sakes, and when I lacked, to travail for my living with mine own hands in part, and partly also when poverty constrained me, I chose rather otherwise to seek my sustenance, than to be any burden to you, altho' I preached the gospel unto you?

^j An amplification: so far is he from being ashamed of this

A. D. 60. 10 The ^s truth of Christ is in me; that this rejoicing shall not be ^h shut up against me in the regions of Achaia.

11 Wherefore? because I love you not? God knoweth.

12 But what I do, that will I do: that I may cut away occasion from them which desire occasion, that they may be found like unto us in that wherein they ⁱ rejoice.

13 ^o For such false apostles are deceitful workers, and transform themselves into the apostles of Christ.

14 And no marvel: for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of ^k light.

15 Therefore it is no great thing, though his ministers transform themselves, as though they were the ministers of righteousness, whose end shall be according to their works.

16 ^r I say again, Let no man think that I am foolish, or else take me even as a fool, that I also may boast myself a little.

17 That I speak, I speak it not after the Lord: but as it were foolishly in this my great boasting.

18 Seeing that many rejoice after the flesh, I will rejoice also.

19 For ye suffer fools gladly, because that ye are wise.

20 ^s For ye suffer, even as if a man bring you into bondage, if a man devour you, if a man take your goods, if a man exalt himself, if a man smite you on the face.

21 I speak as concerning the ⁱ reproach: as though that we had been ^m weak: but wherein any man is bold (I speak foolishly) I am bold also.

Phil. 3. 5. 22 They are Hebrews, * so am I: they are Israelites, so am I: they are the seed of Abraham, so am I:

23 They are the ministers of Christ (I speak as a fool) I am ⁿ more: in labours more abundant: in stripes above measure: in prison more plenteously: in ^o death oft.

this act, that he hath also resolved with himself to do no otherwile hereafter amongst them, to the intent that it may always be truly said, that he taught in Achaia for nothing not that he disdaineth the Corinthians, but that these Thraesoies may never find occasion which they have already sought for, and he in the mean season may set something before them to follow, that at length they may truly say, that they are like to Paul.

^s This is a form of an oath; as if he said, Let me not be thought to have any truth in me.

^h Shall be always open to me.

ⁱ Paul's adversaries sought all occasions they could to be equal to him. And therefore seeing they had rather eat up the Corinthians, than preach to them for nothing, they sought another occasion, to wit, to make Paul to take something: which thing if he had done, then hoped they by that means to be equal to him: for they made such a shew of zeal and knowledge, and set it forth with such a glowing kind of eloquence, that some of them even despised Paul: but he sheweth that all this is nothing but colours and painting:

^o Now at length he painteth out these fellows in their colours, forewarning, that it will come to pass, that they will at length betray themselves, what countenance soever they make of the zeal that they have of God's glory.

^k By light is meant the heavenly glory, whereof the angels are partakers.

^r He goeth forward boldly, and using a vehement irony, or kind of taunting, desireth the Corinthians to pardon him, if for a time he contend as a fool before them being wise, with those jolly fellows touching those external things, to wit, touching his stock, his ancestors and valiant acts.

^s Before he cometh to the matter, he toucheth the Corinthians, who persuading themselves to be very wise men, did not mark, in the mean season, that those false apostles abused their simplicity for advantage.

25 I was ^q thrice * beaten with rods: I was * once stoned: I suffered thrice * shipwreck: night and day have I been in the deep sea. * Acts 16. 23. * Acts 14. 19. * Acts 27. 14.

26 In journeying I was often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils of mine own nation, in perils among the Gentiles, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren.

27 In weariness and ^r painfulness, in watching often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and in nakedness.

28 ^o Beside the things which are outward, I am cumbered daily, and have the care of all the churches.

29 Who is weak, and I am not weak? Who is offended, and I burn not?

30 ^o If I must needs rejoice, I will rejoice of mine infirmities.

31 The God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which is blessed forevermore, knoweth that I lye not.

32 In ^{*} Damascus the governor of the people under king Aretas, laid watch in the city of the Damascenes, and would have caught me. * Acts 9. 24.

33 But at a window was I let down in a basket through the wall, and escaped his hands.

CHAP. XII.

1 He doth even unwillingly make rehearsal ³ of the heavenly visions, ⁴ that were revealed unto him, ⁶ for which, though he might indeed glory, yet he will not, ¹⁰ being privy of his own infirmities: ¹¹ but they drive him to this kind of folly; ²⁰ in that they give ear to certain vain-glorious persons, who draw them from Christ.

IT is not expedient for me no doubt to rejoice: for I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord.

2 I know a man ^a in Christ above fourteen years

¹ As if he said, In respect of that reproach which they do unto you (I speak it) which surely is as evil as if they did beat you.

^m Paul is called weak, in that he seemeth to the Corinthians a vile and abject man, a beggarly artificer, a most wretched and miserable ideot, whereas notwithstanding, therein God's mighty power was made manifest.

ⁿ Paul being honourable indeed, defendeth his ministry openly, not for his own sake, but because he saw his doctrine come into hazard.

^o In danger of present death.

^p He alludeth to that that is written, Deut. 25. 3. and moreover this place sheweth us, that Paul suffered many things which Luke passed over.

^q Of the Roman magistrates.

^r Painfulness is a troublesome sickness, as when a man is weary and would rest, he is constrained to fall to new labour.

^s He addeth this in conclusion further, that the Corinthians might be ashamed to despise him, upon whose care almost all churches depended; as it was plainly seen by experience.

^t He turneth that against the adversaries, which they objected against him: as if he should say; They alledged my calamities, to take away my authority from me: but if I would boast myself, I would take no better argument: and God himself is my witness that I devise and forge nothing.

^u He goeth forward in his purpose, and because those bragging mates boasted of revelations, he reckoneth up those things which lift him up above the common capacity of men: but he useth a preface, and excuseth himself advisedly.

^v I speak this in Christ, that is, be it spoken without vain-glory, for I seek nothing but Christ Jesus only.

A. D. 60. years ago (whether be were in the body, I cannot tell, or out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth) which was taken up into the ^b third heaven.

3 And I know such a man (whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth)

4 How that he was taken up into ^c Paradise, and heard words which ^d cannot be spoken, which are not ^e possible for man to utter.

5 ^f Of such a man will I rejoice: of myself will I not rejoice, except it be of mine infirmities.

6 For though I would rejoice, I should not be a fool, for I will say the truth: but I refrain, lest any man should think of me above that he seeth in me, or that he heareth of me.

7 And lest I should be exalted out of measure through the abundance of revelations, there was given unto me a ^g prick in the flesh, the messenger of ^h Satan to buffet me, because I should not be exalted out of measure.

8 For this thing I besought the Lord ⁱ thrice that it might depart from me.

9 And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my power is made perfect through weakness. ^k Very gladly therefore will I rejoice rather in mine infirmities, that the power of Christ may ^l dwell in me.

10 Therefore I take ^m pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in anguish for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong.

11 I was a fool to boast myself: ye have compelled me: ⁿ for I ought to have been commended of you: for in nothing was I inferior unto the very chief apostles, though I be nothing.

12 The ^o signs of an apostle were wrought among you with all patience, with signs, and wonders, and great works.

13 For what is it wherein ye were inferiors unto other churches, ^p except that I have not been ^q slothful to your hindrance? forgive me ^r this wrong.

14 Behold, the third time I am ready to come unto you, and yet will I not be slothful to your hindrance: for I seek not yours, but you: for the children ought not to lay up for the fathers, but the fathers for the children.

15 And I will most gladly bestow, and will be bestowed for your souls: though the more I love you, the less I am loved.

16 ^s But be it that I charged you not: yet forasmuch as I was crafty, I took you with guile.

17 Did I pill you by any of them whom I sent unto you?

18 I have desired Titus, and with him I have sent a brother: did Titus pill you of any thing? walked we not in the self-same spirit? walked we not in the same steps?

19 ^t Again, think ye that we excuse ourselves unto you? we speak before God in ^u Christ, but we do all things, dearly beloved, for your edifying.

20 ^v For I fear lest, when I come, I shall not find you such as I would: and that I shall be found unto you such as ye would not, and lest there be strife, envying, wrath, contentions, backbitings, whisperings, swellings, and discord.

21 I fear lest, when I come again, my God abase me among you, and I shall bewail many of them which have sinned already, and have not repented of the uncleanness and fornication, and wantonness, which they have committed.

CHAP. XIII.

1 Coming the third time, 2 he denounceth the sharper vengeance towards them, 5 who have a perfect trial of the power of Christ in his apostleship: 10 at length he prayeth for their repentance, 11 and wisheth them prosperity.

LO

^a Into the highest heaven: for we need not to dispute subtilly upon the word (Third) but yet this place is to be marked against them, which would have heaven to be every where.

^b So the Grecians name that, which we call a Park, that is to say, a place where trees are planted, and wild beasts kept, by which name they that translated the Old Testament out of Hebrew into Greek, called the garden Eden, whereinto Adam was put straight after his creation, as a most delicate and pleasant place. And hereupon grew it, that that blessed seat of the glory of God is called by that name.

^d Which the saints themselves are not by any means able to express, because it is God himself. Thus doth Clemens Alexandrinus expound this place. Strom. 5.

^e To remove all suspicion of ambition he witnesseth that he braggeth not of those things, as of his own, but as out of himself, and yet notwithstanding feigneth nothing, lest by this occasion other men should attribute unto him more than indeed he is: and therefore he had rather glory in his miseries.

^f An excellent doctrine: why God will even have his best servants to be vexed of Satan, and by all kind of temptations: to wit, lest they should be too much puffed up, and also that they may be made perfect by that continual exercise.

^g He meaneth concupiscence, that sticketh fast in us, as it were a prick, insomuch as it constrained Paul himself being regenerate, to cry out, I do not that good that I would, &c. And he calleth that a prick, by a borrowed kind of speech taken from thorns, or stumps, which are very dangerous and hurtful for the feet, if a man walk through woods that are cut down.

^h Which setteth those lusts on fire.

ⁱ Oft.

^k He concludeth, that he will only set his miseries against the vain brags of the false apostles, and therewith also excuseth himself, for that by their importunity he was constrained to speak so much of those things as he did: to wit, because that if his apostleship were subverted, his doctrine must needs fall.

^l That I might feel the virtue of Christ more and more: for the weaker that our tabernacles are, the more doth Christ's virtue appear in them.

^m I do not only take them patiently, and with a good heart, but also I take great pleasure in them.

ⁿ Again he maketh the Corinthians witnesses of those things whereby God had sealed his apostleship amongst them; and again, he declareth by certain arguments how far he is from all covetousness, and also how he is affectioned towards them.

^o The arguments whereby it may well appear, that I am indeed an apostle of Jesus Christ.

^p I was not slothful in getting my living with mine own hands, that I might not be burthenome to you.

^q He putteth away another most grievous slander, to wit, that he did subtilly, and by others, make his gain and profit of them.

^r He concludeth that he writeth not these things unto them, as though he needeth to defend himself, for he is guilty of nothing: but because it is behoveable for them to doubt nothing of his fidelity, who instructed them.

^s As it becometh him to speak truly and sincerely, that professeth himself to be in Christ, that is to say, to be a Christian.

^t Having confirmed his authority unto them, he rebuketh them sharply, and threateneth them also like an apostle, shewing that he will not spare them hereafter, unless they repent, seeing that this is the third time that he hath warned them.

A. D. 60. LO this is the third time that I come unto you. * In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word stand.

2 I told you before, and tell you before: as though I had been present the second time, so write I now being absent, to them which heretofore have sinned, and to all others, that if I come again, I will not spare,

3 ¹ Seeing that ye seek experience of Christ, that speaketh in me, which toward you is not weak, but is ² mighty in you.

4 For though he was crucified concerning ^b his infirmity, yet liveth he through the power of God. And we no doubt are weak in him, but we shall live with him, through the power of God toward you.

5 * ² Prove yourselves whether ye are in the faith: examine yourselves: know ye not yourselves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?

6 ³ But I trust that ye shall know that we are not reprobates.

7 Now I pray unto God that ye do none evil, not that we should seem approved, but that ye should do that which is honest: though we be as ^c reprobates.

¹ A most sharp reprehension, for that while they despise the apostles' admonitions, they tempt Christ's own patience: and also while they contemn him as wretched and miserable, they lay nothing herein against him, which is not common to him with Christ.

² And will be most mighty to be revenged of you when need shall be.

^b As touching that base form of a servant which he took upon him when he abased himself.

² He confirmeth that which he spake of the virtue of God appearing in his ministry, and he gathereth by the mutual relation between the people's faith, and the ministers preaching, that they must either reverence his apostleship, upon whose doctrine their faith is grounded, or they must condemn themselves of infidelity, and must confess them-

8 For we cannot do any thing against the truth, but for the truth. A. D. 60.

9 For we are glad when we are weak, and that ye are strong: this also we wish for, even your ^d perfection.

10 Therefore write I these things being absent, lest when I am present, I should use sharpness, according to the power which the Lord hath given me, to edification, and not to destruction.

11 ⁴ Finally, brethren, fare ye well: be perfect: be of good comfort: be of one mind: live in peace, and the God of love and peace shall be with you.

12 ⁵ Greet one another with an * holy kiss. * 1 Cor. 16: 20. All the saints salute you.

13 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen.

¶ The second epistle to the Corinthians, written from Philippi, a city in Macedonia; and sent by Titus and Lucas.

selves not to be of Christ's body.

² He mitigateth the sharpness, trusting that they will shew themselves toward their faithful apostles, apt and willing to be taught: adding this moreover, that he passeth not for his own fame and estimation, so that he may serve to their salvation, which is the only mark that he shooteth at.

^c In men's judgment.

^d That all things may be in good order amongst you, and the members of the church restored into their place, which have been shaken and out of place.

⁴ A brief exhortation, but yet such an one as comprehendeth all the parts of a christian man's life.

⁵ He saluteth them familiarly, and in conclusion wisheth well unto them.

The Epistle of the Apostle PAUL to the GALATIANS.

C H A P. I.

A. D. 58. I Straight after the salutation. 6 he reprehendeth the Galatians for revolting 9 from his gospel, 15 which he received from God, 17 before he had communicated with any of the apostles.

Tit. 1. 3. PAUL ¹ an apostle (not ^a of men, neither by ^b man, * but by ^c Jesus Christ, and God the Father which hath raised him from the dead)

2 And all the brethren which are with me, unto the churches of Galatia:

¹ A salutation, comprehending in few words the sum of the apostle's doctrine, and also besides, straightway from the beginning, shewing the gravity meet for the authority of an apostle, which he had to maintain against the false apostles.

² He sheweth who is the author of the ministry generally: for herein the whole ministry agreeth, that whether they be apostles, or shepherds, or doctors, they are appointed of God.

^b He toucheth the instrumental cause: for this is a peculiar prerogative to the apostles, to be called immediately from Christ.

^c Christ no doubt is man, but he is God also, and Head of the church, and in this respect to be exempted out of the number of men.

3 Grace be with you, and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ, A. D. 58.

4 ² Which gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us * from this present evil ^d world, according to the will of God even our Father. * Luke 1, 74.

5 To whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

6 ¹ I marvel that ye are so soon ^e removed away unto another gospel, from him that had called you in the grace of Christ,

7 Which

² The sum of the true gospel is this, that Christ by his only offering saveth us, being chosen out from the world, by the free decree of God the Father.

^d Out of that most corrupt state which is without Christ.

³ The first part of the epistle, wherein he witnesseth that he is an apostle, nothing inferior to those chief disciples of Christ, and wholly agreeing with them, whose names the false apostles did abuse. And he beginneth with chiding, reproving them of lightness, for that they gave ear so easily unto them which perverted them and drew them away unto a new gospel.

^e He useth the passive voice to cast the fault upon the false apostles, and he useth the time that now is, to give them to understand, that it was not already done, but in doing.

A. D. 58. 7 * Which is not another gospel, save that there be some which trouble you, and intend to pervert the gospel of Christ.

8 But though that we, or an angel from heaven, preach unto you otherwise than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.

9 As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach unto you otherwise than that ye have received, let him be accursed.

10 * For now preach I ^a man's doctrine, or God's? or go I about to please men? for if I should yet please men, I were not the servant of Christ.

11 * Now I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me, was not after man.

12 For neither received I it of man, neither was I taught it but by the ¹ revelation of Jesus Christ.

13 * For ye have heard of my conversation in time past, in the Jewish religion, how that * I persecuted the church of God extremely, and wanted it, 14 And profited in the Jewish religion above many of my companions of mine own nation, and was much more zealous of the * traditions of my fathers.

15 But when it pleased God (which had ¹ separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace)

16 To reveal his Son ⁼ in me, that I should preach him * among the Gentiles, immediately I communicated not with ^a flesh and blood:

17 Neither came I again to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me, but I went unto Arabia, and turned again unto Damascus.

* He warneth them in time to remember that there are not many gospels, and therefore whatsoever these false apostles pretend which had the law, Moses, and the fathers, in their mouths, yet they are indeed so many corruptions of the true gospel, inasmuch that he himself, yea, and the very angels themselves (and therefore much more these false apostles) ought to be holden accursed, if they go about to change the least jot that may be in the gospel that he delivered to them before.

* For there is nothing more contrary to faith or free justification, than justification by the law, or by our deservings.

Look Rom. 9. 5.

* A confirmation taken both from the nature of the doctrine itself, and also from the manner which he used in teaching: for neither, saith he, did I teach those things which pleased men, as these men do, which put a part of salvation in external things, and works of the law, neither went I about to procure any man's favour: And therefore the matter itself sheweth that that doctrine which I delivered unto you, is heavenly.

* He telleth the false apostles, who had nothing but men in their mouths, and he, though he would derogate nothing from the apostles, preacheth God, and not men.

* A second argument to prove that his doctrine is heavenly, because he had it from heaven, from Jesus Christ himself, without any man's help, wherein he excelleth them whom Christ taught here on earth, after the manner of men.

* This place is to be understood of an extraordinary revelation, for otherwise the Son alone revealed his gospel by his Spirit, although by the ministry of men, which Paul sheweth not here.

* He proveth that he was extraordinarily taught of Christ himself, by the history of his former life, which the Galatians themselves knew well enough: for, saith he, it is well known in what school I was brought up, even from a child, to wit, amongst the deadly enemies of the gospel. And that no man may cavil and say, That I was a scholar of the Pharisees in name only, and not in deed, no man is ignorant how that I excelled in Pharisaism, and was suddenly made of a Pharisee, an apostle of the Gentiles, so that I had no space to be instructed of men.

* He calleth them the traditions of his fathers, because he was not only a Pharisee himself, but also had a Pharisee

18 Then after three years I came again to Jerusalem to visit Peter, and abode with him fifteen days.

19 And none other of the apostles saw I, save James the Lord's brother.

20 Now the things which I write unto you, behold, I witness ^o before God, that I lye not.

21 After that, I went into the coasts of Syria and Cilicia: for I was unknown by face unto the churches of Judea, which were in Christ.

22 But they had heard only some say, He which persecuted us in time past, now preacheth the ^p faith which before he destroyed.

23 And they glorified God for me.

C H A P. II.

1 That the apostles did nothing disagree from his gospel, 3 he declareth by the example of Titus being uncircumcised, 11 and also by his avouching the same against Peter's dissimulation: 17 and so he passeth to the handling of our free justification by Christ, &c.

THEN ¹ fourteen years after, I went up again to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and took with me Titus also.

2 And I went up by revelation, and declared unto them that gospel which I preach among the Gentiles, but particularly to them that were the chief, lest by any means I should run, or had run ² in vain:

3 But neither yet Titus which was with me, though he were a Grecian, was compelled to be circumcised,

4 To wit, for the ^b false brethren which were craftily to his father.

¹ He speaketh of God's everlasting predestination, whereby he appointed him to be an apostle, whereof he maketh three degrees; the everlasting counsel of God, his appointing from his mother's womb, and his calling: here is no mention at all, we see, of works foreseen.

² To me: and this is a kind of speech which the Hebrews use, whereby this is given us to understand, that this gift cometh from God.

³ Because it might be objected, that indeed he was called of Christ in the way, but afterward was instructed of the apostles and others, whose names (as I said before) the false apostles abused to destroy his apostleship, as though he delivered another gospel than the true apostles did, and as though he were not of their number, which are to be credited without exception: therefore Paul answereth, that he began straightway after his calling to preach the gospel at Damascus and in Arabia, and was not from that time in Jerusalem but only fifteen days, where he saw only Peter and James, and afterwards he began to teach in Syria and Cilicia, with the consent and approbation of the churches of the Jews, which knew him only by name: so far off was it, that he was there instructed of men.

^o This is a kind of oath.

^p The doctrine of faith.

² Now he sheweth how he agreeth with the apostles, with whom he granteth that he conferred touching his gospel which he taught among the Gentiles, fourteen years after his conversion, and they allowed it, in such sort, that they constrained not his fellow Titus to be circumcised, although some tormented themselves therein, which traiterously laid wait against him, but in vain: neither did they add the least jot that might be to the doctrine which he had preached, but contrariwise they gave to him and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship, and acknowledged them as apostles appointed of the Lord to the Gentiles.

³ Unfruitful, for as touching his doctrine, Paul doubteth not of it, but because there were certain reports cast abroad of him, that he was of another opinion than the rest of the apostles were, which thing might have hindered the course of the gospel, therefore he laboureth to remedy this fore.

^b Which by deceit and counterfeit holiness crept in amongst the faithful.

A. D. 58. craftily sent in, and crept in privily to spy out our liberty, which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage:

5 To whom we gave not place by^c subjection for an hour, that the^d truth of the gospel might continue with^e you.

6 But by them which seemed to be great, I was not taught (whatsoever they were in time passed, I am nothing the better: * God accepteth no man's person) for they that are the chief, did add nothing to me above that I had.

7 But contrariwise, when they saw that the gospel over the^f uncircumcision was committed unto me, as the gospel over the circumcision was unto Peter:

8 (For he that was mighty by Peter in the apostleship over the circumcision, was also mighty by me toward the Gentiles)

9 And when James, and Cephas, and John, knew of the grace that was given unto me, which are^g counted to be pillars, they gave to me and to Barnabas the right^h hands of fellowship, that we should preach unto the Gentiles, and they unto the circumcision,

10 Warning only that we should remember the poor: which thing also I was diligent to do.

11 ¶ And when Peter was come to Antioch, I withstood him to hisⁱ face: for he was to be condemned.

12² For before that certain came from James, he ate with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he withdrew and separated himself, fearing them which were of the circumcision.

13 And the other Jews played the hypocrites likewise with him, insomuch that Barnabas was^k led away with them by that their hypocrisy.

14 But when I saw, that they went not the right way to the^m truth of the gospel, I said unto Peter before all men, If thou being a Jew livest as the Gentiles, and not like the Jews, whyⁿ constraineth thou the Gentiles to do like the Jews?

15³ We which are^o Jews by nature, and not sinners of the Gentiles, 16 Know that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith^q of Jesus Christ, even we, I say, have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: no flesh shall be justified.

17^{*4} If then while^r we seek to be made righteous by Christ, we ourselves are found sinners, is Christ therefore the minister of sin? God forbid.

18 For if I build again the things that I have destroyed, I make myself a trespasser.

19 For I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God.

20 I am crucified with Christ: but I live, yet not^u I any more, but Christ liveth in me: and in that that I now live in the^x flesh, I live by the faith in the Son of God, who hath loved me, and given himself for me.

21⁵ I do not abrogate the grace of God: for if righteousness be by the law, then Christ died without a^y cause.

C H A P. III.

1 He rebuketh them for suffering themselves to be drawn from the grace of free justification in Christ, most lively set out unto them. 6 He bringeth in Abraham's example, 10 declaring the effect 21 and causes of the giving of the law.

O Foolish

^c By submitting ourselves to them, and betraying our own liberty.

^d The true and sincere doctrine of the gospel, which remained safe from being corrupt with any of those men's false doctrines.

^e Under the Galatians name, he understandeth all nations.

^f Among the Gentiles, as Peter had to preach it among the Jews.

^g Whom alone and only, these men count for pillars of the church, and whose name they abuse to deceive you.

^h They gave us their hand, in token that we agreed wholly in the doctrine of the gospel.

ⁱ Before all men.

² Another most vehement proof of his apostleship, and also of that doctrine which he had delivered concerning free justification by faith only, because for that this thing only he reprehended Peter at Antioch, who offended herein, in that for a few Jews sakes which came from Jerusalem he played the Jew, and offended the Gentiles which had believed.

^m He calleth the truth of the gospel, both the doctrine itself, and also the use of the doctrine, which we call the practice.

ⁿ He saith they were constrained, which played the Jews by Peter's example.

³ The second part of this epistle, the state whereof is this: we are justified by faith in Christ Jesus, without the works of the law. Which thing he propoundeth in such sort, that first of all he meeteth with an objection (for I also, saith he, am a Jew, that no man may say against me, that I am an enemy to the law), and afterward he confirmeth it by the express witness of David.

^o Although we be Jews, yet we preach justification by faith, because we know undoubtedly, that no man can be justified by the law.

^p So the Jews called the Gentiles, because they were strangers from God's covenant.

^q In Jesus Christ.

^r No man, and in this word (flesh) there is a great vehemency, whereby is meant that the nature of man is utterly corrupt.

⁶ The law that terrifieth the conscience, bringeth us to Christ, and he only causeth us to die to the law indeed, because that by making us righteous, he taketh away from us the terror of conscience; and by sanctifying us, causeth, through the mortifying of lust in us, that it cannot take such occasion to sin by the restraint which the law maketh, as it did before, Rom. 7. 10, 11.

^u The same that I was before.

^x In this mortal body.

⁷ The second argument taken of an absurdity: If men may be justified by the law, then was it not necessary for Christ to die.

^y For there was no cause why he should do so.

58.

O Foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth, to whom Jesus Christ before was described in your sight, and among you crucified?

² This only would I learn of you, Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith preached?

³ Are ye so foolish, that after ye have begun in the Spirit, ye would now be made perfect by the flesh?

⁴ Have ye suffered so many things in vain? if so be it be even in vain.

⁵ He therefore that ministereth to you the Spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doth he it through the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith preached?

⁷ Know ye therefore that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham.

⁸ For the scripture foreseeing, that God would justify the Gentiles through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all the Gentiles be blessed.

⁹ So then they which be of faith, are blessed with faithful Abraham.

¹¹ And that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident: for the just shall live by faith.

¹² And the law is not of faith: but the man that shall do these things, shall live in them.

¹³ Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us, for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree.

¹⁴ That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Christ Jesus, that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith.

¹⁶ Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to the seeds, as

¹ The third reason, or argument, taken of the gifts of the Holy Ghost, wherewith they were endued from heaven after they had heard and believed the gospel by Paul's ministry: which seeing they were so evident to all men's eyes, that they were, as it were, lively images, wherein they might behold the truth of the doctrine of the gospel, no less than if they had beheld with their eyes Christ himself crucified, in whose only death they ought to have their trust, he marvelleth how it could be that they could be so bewitched by the false apostles.

² Christ was laid before you so notably and so plainly, that you had his lively image, as it were, represented before your eyes, as if he had been crucified before you.

³ Those spiritual graces and gifts which were a seal, as it were, to the Galatians, that the gospel which was preached to them was true.

⁴ Of the doctrine of faith.

⁵ The fourth argument mixed with the former: and it is double. If the law be to be joined with faith, this were not to go forward, but backward, seeing that those spiritual gifts which were bestowed upon you are more excellent than any that could proceed from your elves. And moreover, it should follow, that the law is better than Christ, because it should perfect and bring to an end that which Christ began only.

⁶ By the (flesh) he meaneth the ceremonies of the law, against which he setteth the Spirit, that is, the spiritual working of the gospel.

⁷ An exhortation by manner of upbraiding, that they do not in vain suffer so many conflicts.

⁸ He repeateth the third argument, which was taken of the effects, because he had interlaced certain other arguments by the way.

⁹ The first argument, which is of great force, and hath three grounds. The first, that Abraham was justified by faith, to wit, by free imputation of righteousness according to the promise apprehended by faith, as Moses doth most plainly witness.

¹⁰ Look Romans 4.

¹¹ The second, that the sons of Abraham must be esteemed and accounted of by faith.

¹² The third, that all people that believe, are without exception comprehended in the promise of the blessing.

¹³ A proof of the first and second ground, out of the words of Moses.

¹⁴ Blessing, in this place, signifieth the free promise by faith.

¹⁵ The conclusion of the fifth argument: Therefore as Abraham is blessed by faith, so are all his children (that is to say, all the Gentiles that believe) blessed, that is to say, freely justified.

¹⁶ With faithful Abraham, and not by faithful Abraham, to give us to understand that the blessing cometh not from Abraham, but from him by whom Abraham and all his posterity are blessed.

¹⁷ The sixth argument, the conclusion whereof is also in the former verse taken of contraries, thus: They are accursed which are of the works of the law, that is to say, which value their righteousness by the performance of the law. Therefore they are blessed which are of faith, that is, they which have righteousness by faith.

¹⁸ A proof of the former sentence or proposition, and the proposition of this argument is this: Cursed is he that fulfilleth not the whole law.

²⁰ Here is a reason shewed of the former consequence: Because the law promiseth life to all that keep it, and therefore if it be kept, it justifieth and giveth life. But the scripture attributing righteousness and life to faith, taketh it from the law, seeing that faith justifieth by imputation, and the law by the performing of the work.

²¹ A preventing of an objection: How then can they be blessed, whom the law pronounceth to be accursed? Because Christ sustained the curse which the law laid upon us, that we might be quit from it.

²² A proof of the answer by the testimony of Moses.

²³ Christ was accursed for us, because he bare the curse that was due to us, to make us partakers of his righteousness.

²⁴ A conclusion of all that was said before in the handling of the fifth and sixth reasons, to wit, that both the Gentiles are made partakers of the free blessing of Abraham in Christ, and also that the Jews themselves, of whose number the apostle counteth himself to be, cannot obtain that promised grace of the gospel, which he calleth the Spirit, but only by faith. And the apostle doth severally apply the conclusion, both to the one and to the other, preparing himself a way to the next argument, whereby he declareth that that one only seed of Abraham, which is made of all people, can no otherwise be joined and grow up together but by faith in Christ.

²⁵ He putteth forth two general rules before the next argument, which is the seventh in order: The one is, that it is not lawful to break covenants and contracts which are justly made, and according to law, among men, neither may any thing be added unto them: the other is, that God did so make a covenant with Abraham, that he would gather together his children which consist both of Jews and Gentiles into one body (as appeareth by that which hath been said before). For he did not say, that he would be the God of Abraham and of his seeds, (which thing notwithstanding should have been said, if he had many and divers seeds, as the Gentiles apart, and the Jews apart) but that he would be the God of Abraham, and of his seed, as of one.

²⁶ I will use an example which is common among you, that you may be ashamed that you give not so much to God's covenant as you do to man's.

²⁷ Authentical, as we call it.

A. D. 58. as speaking of many: but, And to thy seed, as of one, ¹⁸ which is ¹ Christ.

17 ¹⁹ And this I say, that the covenant that was confirmed afore of God ^m in respect of Christ, the ²⁰ law which was four hundred and thirty years after cannot disanul, that it should make the promise of none effect.

18 ²¹ For if the ⁿ inheritance be of the law, it is no more by the promise, but God gave it freely unto Abraham by promise.

19 ²² Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of the ^o transgressions, ^p till the seed came, unto the which the promise was made: ²³ and it was ^q ordained by ^r angels in the hand of a mediator.

20 Now a mediator is not a mediator of one: ²⁴ but God is one.

21 ²⁵ Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: For if there had been a law given which could have given life, surely righteousness should have been by the law.

⁶Rom. 5. 9. 22 But the ^s scripture hath ^{*} concluded ^t all under sin, that the ^u promise by the faith of Jesus Christ should be given to them that believe.

23 ²⁶ But before faith came, we were kept under the law; as under a garison, and shut up unto ^x that faith, which should afterward be revealed. A. D. 58.

24 Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ, that we might be made righteous by faith.

25 But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster.

26 ²⁷ For ye are all the sons of God by faith, in Christ Jesus.

27 ²⁸ For all ye that are ^y baptized into Christ, have ^z put on Christ.

28 There is neither Jew nor Grecian: there is neither bond nor free: there is neither male nor female: for ye are all ^a one in Christ Jesus.

29 And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs by promise.

C H A P. IV.

1 Being delivered from the bondage of the law, 4 by Christ's coming, who is the end thereof, 9 it is very absurd to slide back to beggarly ceremonies: 13 he calleth them again therefore to the purity of the doctrine of the gospel, 21 confirming his discourse with a fine allegory.

3 K

THEN

¹⁸ He putteth forth the sum of the seventh argument, to wit, that both the Jews and the Gentiles grow together in one body of the seed of Abraham, in Christ only, so that all are one in Christ, as it is afterward declared, ver. 28.

¹ Paul speaketh not of Christ's person, but of two peoples, which grew together in one, in Christ.

¹⁹ The eighth argument taken of comparison, thus: It a man's covenant (being authentical) be firm and strong, much more God's covenant. Therefore the law was not given to abrogate the promise made to Abraham, which had respect to Christ, that is to say, the end whereof did hang on Christ.

²⁰ Which tended to Christ.

²⁰ An enlarging of that argument, thus: Moreover and besides that the promise is of itself firm and strong, it was also confirmed with the prescription of long time, to wit, of four hundred and thirty years, so that it could in no wise be broken.

²¹ An objection: We grant that the promise was not abrogated by the covenant of the law, and therefore we join the law with the promise. Nay, saith the apostle, these two cannot stand together, to wit, that the inheritance should both be given by the law and also by promise, for the promise is free: whereby it followeth that the law was not given to justify, for by that means the promise should be broken.

ⁿ By this word (inheritance) is meant the right of the seed, which is, that God should be our God, that is to say, that by virtue of the covenant that was made with faithful Abraham, we that be faithful, might by that means be blessed of God as well as he.

²² An objection which riseth from the former answer: If the inheritance be not by the law (at least in part) then why was the law given after that the promise was made? therefore saith the apostle, to reprove men of sin, and to teach them to look unto Christ, in whom at length that promise of saving all people together should be fulfilled, and not that the law was given to justify men.

^o That men might understand, by discovering of their sins, that they are saved by the only grace of God, which he revealed to Abraham, and that in Christ.

^p Until the partition wall was broken down, and that full seed sprang up, framed of two peoples, both of Jews and Gentiles: for by this word Seed, we may not understand Christ alone by himself, but coupled and joined together with his body.

²³ A confirmation of the former answer taken from the manner and form of giving the law: for it was given by angels, striking a great terror into all, and by Moses, a mediator, coming between. Now they that are one, need no mediator, but they that are twain, at the least, and that are at variance one with another. Therefore the law itself, and the mediator, were witnesses of the wrath of God, and not that God would by this means reconcile men to himself, and abolish the promise, or add the law unto the promise.

^r By the service and ministry.

²⁵ The conclusion uttered by a manner of asking a question, and it is that same that was uttered before, ver. 17. but proceeding of another rule: so that the argument is new, and is this: God is always like unto himself: therefore the law was not given to abolish the promises. But it should abolish them if it gave life, for by that means it should justify, and therefore it should abolish that justification, which was promised to Abraham and to his seed by faith. Nay, it was rather given to bring to light the guiltiness of all men, to the end that all believers fleeing to Christ promised, might be freely justified in him.

^s By this word Scripture, he meaneth the law.

^u In every one of these words there lieth an argument against the merit of works: for all these words, promise; faith, Christ, might be given to believers, are against merits, and not one of them can stand with deserving works.

²⁶ Now there followeth another handling of the second part of this epistle: the state whereof was this: Although the law, (that is, the whole government of God's house according to the law) do not justify, is it therefore to be abolished, seeing that Abraham himself was circumcised, and his posterity held still the use of Moses's law? Paul affirmeth that it ought to be abolished, because it was instituted for that end and purpose, that it should be, as it were, a schoolmaster and keeper to the people of God, until the promise appeared in deed; that is to say, Christ, and the gospel manifestly published with great efficacy of the Spirit.

²⁷ Because age changeth not the condition of servants; he addeth that we are free by condition, and therefore, seeing we are out of our childhood, we have no more need of a keeper and schoolmaster.

²⁸ Using a general particle, lest the Jews at the least should not think themselves bound with the band of the law, he pronounceth that baptism is common to all believers, because it is a pledge of our deliverance in Christ, as well to the Jews as to the Grecians, that by this means all may be truly one in Christ, that is to say, that promised seed to Abraham, and inheritors of eternal life.

^y He setteth baptism secretly against circumcision, which the false apostles so much bragged of.

^z The church must put on Christ, as it were a garment, and be covered with him, that it may be thoroughly holy and without blame.

^a You are all as one: and so is this great knot and conjunction signified.

A. D. 53. THEN I say, that the heir, as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a servant, though he be Lord of all.

2 But is under tutors and governors, until the time appointed of the father.

3 Even so we, when we were children, were in bondage under the rudiments of the world.

4 But when the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his Son made of a woman, and made under the law :

5 That he might redeem them which were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of the sons.

6 And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, which crieth, Abba, Father.

7 Wherefore, thou art no more a servant, but a son: now if thou be a son, thou art also the heir of God through Christ.

8 But even then, when ye knew not God, ye did service unto them which by nature are not gods :

9 But now seeing ye know God, yea, rather are known of God, how turn ye again unto impotent and beggarly rudiments, whereunto as from the beginning ye will be in bondage again ?

10 Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years.

11 I am in fear of you, lest I have bestowed on you labour in vain.

12 Be ye as I (for I am even as you) brethren, I beseech you: ye have not hurt me at all.

13 And ye know, how through infirmity of the flesh, I preached the gospel unto you at the first.

14 And the trial of me, which was in my flesh, ye despised not, neither abhorred: but ye received me as an angel of God, yea as Christ Jesus.

15 What was then your felicity? for I bear you record, that if it had been possible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes, and have given them unto me.

16 Am I therefore become your enemy, because I tell you the truth?

17 They are jealous over you amiss: yea they would exclude you, that ye should altogether love them.

18 But it is a good thing to love earnestly always in a good thing, and not only when I am present with you.

19 My little children, of whom I travail in birth again, until Christ be formed in you.

20 And I would I were with you now, that I might change my voice: for I am in doubt of you.

21 Tell me, ye that would be under the law, do ye not hear the law?

22 For it is written, that Abraham had two sons,

1 He declareth that by another double similitude, which he said before concerning the keeper and schoolmaster. For he saith that the law, (that is, the whole government of God's house according to the law) was as it were a tutor or overseer appointed for a time, until such time as that protection and overseeing, which was but for a time, being ended, we should at length come to be at our own liberty, and should live as children, and not as servants. Moreover, he sheweth by the way, that that governance of the law was as it were an A B C, and as certain principles, in comparison of the doctrine of the gospel.

2 This is added, because he that is always under a tutor or governor, may hardly be counted a freeman.

3 The law is called rudiments, because that by the law God instructed his church as it were by rudiments, and afterward poured out his Holy Spirit most plentifully in the time of the gospel.

4 He uttereth and declareth many things at once, to wit, that this tutorship was ended at his time: that curious men may leave to ask, why that schoolmastership lasted so long. And moreover, that we are not sons by nature, but by adoption, and that in that Son of God, who therefore took upon him our flesh, that we might be made his brethren.

5 The time is said to be full, when all parts of it are past and ended, and therefore Christ could not have come either sooner or later.

6 He calleth Mary a woman, in respect of the sex, and not as the word is used in a contrary sense to a virgin, for she remained a virgin still.

7 The adoption of the sons of God is from everlasting, but is revealed and shewed in the time appointed for it.

8 He sheweth that we are in such sort free and set at liberty, that in the mean season we must be governed by the Spirit of Christ, which reigning in our hearts, may teach us the true service of the Father. But this is not to serve, but rather to enjoy true liberty, as it becometh sons and heirs.

9 By that that followeth, he gathereth that that went before: for if we have his Spirit, we are his sons; and if we are his sons, then are we free.

10 The Holy Ghost, who is both of the Father, and of the Son: but there is a peculiar reason why he is called the Spirit of the Son, to wit, because the Holy Ghost sealth up our adoption in Christ, and maketh us a full assurance of it.

11 The word, servant, is not taken here for one that liveth in sin, which is proper to the infidels, but for one that is yet under the ceremonies of the law, which is proper to the Jews.

12 Partaker of his blessings.

4 He applieth the former doctrine to the Galatians, with a peculiar reprehension: for in comparison of them, the Jews might have pretended some excuse as men that were born and brought up in that service of the law. But seeing that the Galatians were taken and called out of idolatry to Christian liberty, what pretence might they have to go back to those impotent and beggarly rudiments?

5 They are called impotent and beggarly ceremonies, being considered apart by themselves without Christ: and again, for that by that means they gave good testimony that they were beggars in Christ, whenas notwithstanding, for men to fall back from Christ to ceremonies, is nothing else but to cast away riches, and to follow beggary.

6 By going backward.

7 He mitigateth and qualifyeth those things, wherein he might have seemed to have spoken somewhat sharply, very artificially and divinely, declaring his good will toward them in such sort, that the Galatians could not but either be utterly desperate when they read these things, or acknowledge their own lightness with tears, and desire pardon.

8 Many afflictions.

9 Those daily troubles wherewith the Lord tried me amongst you.

10 For my ministry's sake.

11 What a talk was there abroad in the world amongst men, how happy you were?

12 For they are jealous over you for their own commodity.

13 That they may convey all your love from me, to themselves.

14 He setteth his own true and good love, which was earnestly bent toward them, against the naughty vicious love of the false apostles.

15 Use other words among you.

16 Because the false apostles urged this, that unless the Gentiles were circumcised, Christ could profit them nothing at all, and this dissension of them which believed of the circumcision, against them which believed of the uncircumcision, was full of offence: the apostle, after divers arguments, whereby he hath refuted their error, bringeth forth an allegory, wherein he saith, The Holy Ghost did shadow out unto us, all these mysteries: to wit, that it should come to pass, that two sorts of sons should have Abraham a father common to them both: but not with like success, for as Abraham begat Ishmael, by the common course of nature, of Agar his bond-maid, and a stranger, and begat Isaac of Sarah, a free woman, by the virtue of the promise, and by grace only; and the first was not only, not heir, but also persecuted

A. D. 58. Ions, * one by a servant, and * one by a free woman.

23 But he which was of the servant, was born after the * flesh: and he which was of the free woman, was born by ^y promise:

24 By the which things another thing is meant: for ^a these mothers are the ^a two testaments, the one which is Agar of mount ^b Sinai, which genereth unto bondage,

25 (For Agar, or Sinai, is a mountain in Arabia, and it ^c answereth to Jerusalem which now is) and ^d she is in bondage with her children:

26 But Jerusalem, which is ^e above, is free: which is the mother of us all.

27 ^f For it is written, * Rejoice, thou barren that bearest no children: break forth, and cry, thou that travailest not: for the ^g desolate hath many more children than she which hath an husband.

28 * Therefore, brethren, we are, after the ^h manner of Isaac, children of the ^h promise.

29 But as then he that was born after the ⁱ flesh, persecuted him that was born after the ^k Spirit, even so, it is now.

30 But what saith the scripture? * Put out the servant and her son: for the son of the servant shall not be heir with the son of the free woman.

31 ^l Then, brethren, we are not children of the servant, but of the free woman.

A. D. 58.

C H A P. V.

1 Having declared that we came of the free woman; he sheweth the price of that freedom, 13 and how we should use the same, 16 that we may obey the Spirit, 19 and resist the flesh.

STAND fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not intangled again with the yoke of bondage.

2 ¹ * Behold, I Paul say unto you, that if ye be ^a circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing.

3 For I testify again to every man which is circumcised, that he is bound to keep the whole law.

4 Ye are ^b abolished from Christ, whosoever are ^c justified by the law: ye are fallen from grace: ^{1 Cor. 1. 17.}

5 ² For we through the ^d Spirit wait for the hope of righteousness through faith.

6 ³ For in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth any thing, neither ^e uncircumcision, ⁵ but ^e faith which worketh by love.

7 ⁶ Ye did run well: who did let you, that ye did not obey the truth?

8 ⁷ It is not the persuasion of ^f him that calleth you.

9 ⁸ * A little leaven doth leaven the whole ^{1 Cor. 5. 6.} lump. 10 I have cuted the heir: so there are two covenants, and as it were, two sons born to Abraham of those two covenants, as it were of two mothers. The one was made in Sinai, without the land of promise, according to which covenant Abraham's children, according to the flesh, were begotten: to wit, the Jews, which seek righteousness by that covenant, that is, by the law: but they are not heirs, nay they shall at length be cast out of the house, as they that persecute the true heirs. The other was made in that high Jerusalem, or in Sion (to wit, by the sacrifice of Christ) which begetteth children of promise, to wit, believers by the virtue of the Holy Ghost, which children, (as Abraham) do rest themselves in the free promise, and they only by the right of children shall be partakers of the father's inheritance, and those servants shall be shut out.

^u That desire so greatly.

^x As all men are, and by the common course of nature.

^y By virtue of the promise, which Abraham laid hold on for himself and his true seed, for otherwise Abraham and Sarah were past begetting and bearing of children.

^z These do represent and shadow forth.

^a They are called two covenants, one of the Old Testament, and another of the New: which were not two indeed, but in respect of the times, and the diversity of the government.

^b He maketh mention of Sinai, because that covenant was made in that mountain, of which mountain Agar was a shadow.

^c Look how the case standeth between Agar and her children, even so standeth it between Jerusalem and hers.

^d That is, Sinai.

^e Which is excellent and of great account.

^f He sheweth that in this allegory, he hath followed the steps of Isaiah, who foretold that the church should be made and consist of the children of barren Sarah, that is to say, of them which only spiritually should be made Abraham's children by faith, rather than of fruitful Agar, even then foreshewing the casting off of the Jews, and calling of the Gentiles.

^g She that is destroyed and wasted.

^h After the manner of Isaac, who is the first begotten of the heavenly Jerusalem, as Ishmael is of the slavish synagogue.

ⁱ That seed unto which the promise belongeth.

^j By the common course of nature.

^k By the virtue of God's promise, and after a spiritual manner.

^l The conclusion of the former allegory, that we by no means procure and call back again the slavery of the law, seeing that the children of the bondmaid shall not be heirs.

¹ Another obtestation, wherein he plainly witnesseth that justification of works, and justification of faith, cannot stand together, because no man can be justified by the law, but he that doth fully and perfectly fulfil it. And he taketh the example of circumcision, because it was the ground of all the service of the law, and was chiefly urged of the false apostles.

² Circumcision is in other places called the seal of righteousness, but here we must have consideration of the circumstance of the time, for now had baptism come in the place of circumcision. And moreover Paul reasoneth according to the opinion that his enemies had of it, which made circumcision a piece of their salvation.

³ That is, as he himself expoundeth it afterward; Ye are fallen from grace.

⁴ That is, seek to be justified by the law, for indeed no man is justified by the law.

⁵ He privily compareth the new people with the old: for it is certain that they also did ground all their hope of justification and life in faith, and not in circumcision, but so, that their faith was wrapped in the external and ceremonial worship: but our faith is bare, and content with spiritual worship.

⁶ Through the Spirit which engendereth faith.

⁷ He addeth a reason, for that now circumcision is abolished, seeing that Christ is exhibited unto us with full plenty of spiritual circumcision.

¹⁰ So is true faith distinguished from counterfeit faith: for charity is not joined with faith, as a fellow cause, to help forward our justification with faith.

¹² He playeth the part of an apostle with them, and useth his authority, denying that that doctrine can come from God, which is contrary to his.

¹³ Of God.

¹⁴ He addeth this, that they may not seem to contend upon a trifle, warning them diligently (by a similitude, which he borroweth of leaven, as Christ himself also did) not to suffer the purity of the apostolical doctrine to be infected with the least corruption that may be.

A. D. 10 * I have trust in you through the Lord, 52 that ye will be none otherwise minded: but he that troubleth you, shall bear his condemnation, whosoever he be.

11 * And, brethren, if I yet preach circumcision, why do I yet suffer persecution? Then is the slander of the cross abolished.

12 * Would to God they were even cut off which do^e disquiet you.

13 For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty: ¹² only use not your liberty as an occasion unto the flesh, but by love serve one another.

14 * For^e all the law is fulfilled in one word, which is this, * Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

15 * If ye bite and devour one another, take heed lest ye be consumed one of another.

16 * Then I say, * Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lusts of the flesh.

17 For the^e flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary one to another, so that ye cannot do the same things that ye would.

18 And if ye be led by the Spirit, ye are not under the law,

19 ¹⁹ Moreover the works of the flesh are manifest, which are adultery, fornication, unclea-ness, wantonness,

20 Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, debate, emulation, wrath, contentions, seditions, heresies,

21 Envy, murders, drunkenness, gluttony, and such like, whereof I tell you before, as I also have told you before, that they which do such things, shall not inherit the kingdom of God.

22 But the^e fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, A. D.

faith, 58.

23 Meekness, temperance: ¹⁷ against such there is no law.

24 For they that are Christ's, have crucified the flesh, with the affections and the lusts.

25 If we^e live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit.

26 ¹³ Let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another.

CHAP. VI.

1 Now he entreateth particularly of charity toward such as offend, 6 toward the ministers of the word, 10 and those that are of the household of faith: 11
Not like unto such who have a counterfeit zeal of the law, 13 glorying in the mangling of the flesh, 14 and not in the cross of Christ.

Brethren, ¹ if a man be ² suddenly taken in any offence, ye which are ³ spiritual, ⁴ restore such one with the ⁵ spirit of meekness, ⁶ considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.

2 ³ Bear ye one another's burden, and so fulfil the ⁴ law of Christ.

3 For if any man seem to himself that he^e is somewhat, when he is nothing, he deceiveth himself in his imagination.

4 But let every man prove his own work: and then shall he have rejoicing in himself only, and not in another.

5 ⁶ For every man shall bear his own burden. 1 Cor. 9. 7.

6 ⁵ Let him that is taught in the word, make him that hath taught him partaker of ⁶ all his ⁷ goods. 1 Cor. 9. 7.

7 ⁶ Be not deceived: God is not mocked:
for

⁹ He mitigateth the former reprehension, casting the fault upon the false apostles, against whom he denounceth the horrible judgments of God.

¹⁰ He willeth them to consider how that he seeketh not his own profit in this matter, seeing that he could eschew the hatred of men, if he would join Judaism with Christianity.

¹¹ An example of a true pastor: inflamed with the zeal of God, and love of his flock.

¹² They that preach the law, cause men's consciences always to tremble.

¹³ The third part of this epistle, shewing that the right use of Christian liberty consisteth in this, that being delivered and set at liberty from the slavery of sin, and the flesh, and being obedient to the Spirit, we should serve unto one another's salvation through love.

¹⁴ He propoundeth the love of our neighbour, as a mark whereunto all Christians ought to refer all their actions, and thereunto he citeth the testimony of the law.

¹⁵ This particle (All) must be restrained to the second table.

¹⁶ An exhortation to the duties of charity, by the profit that cometh thereof, because that no men provide worse for themselves than they that hate one another.

¹⁷ He acknowledgeth the great weakness of the godly, for that they are but in part regenerate: but he willeth them to remember that they are endued with the Spirit of God, which hath delivered them from the slavery of sin, and 10 of the law, so far forth as it is the virtue of sin, that they should not give themselves to lusts.

¹⁸ For the flesh dwelleth even in the regenerate man, but the Spirit reigneth, although not without great strife, as is largely set forth, Rom. 7.

¹⁹ He setteth out that particularly, which he spake generally, reckoning up some chief effects of the flesh, and opposing them to the fruits of the Spirit, that no man may pretend ignorance.

²⁰ Therefore they are not the fruits of free will, but so far forth as our will is made free by grace.

²¹ I tell that any man should object that Paul playeth the doublet, as one who urging the Spirit, urgeth nothing but that which the law commandeth, he sheweth that he requireth, not that literal and outward obedience, but spiritual, which proceedeth not from the law, but from the Spirit of Christ, which doth beget us again, and must and ought to be the ruler and guider of our life.

¹ If we be indeed endued with the quickening Spirit, which causeth us to die to sin, and live to God, let us shew it in our deeds, that is, by holiness of life.

¹⁵ He addeth peculiar exhortations, according as he knew the Galatians subject to divers vices: and first of all, he warneth them to take heed of ambition, which vice hath two fellows, backbiting and envy, out of which two it cannot be but many contentions must needs arise.

² He condemneth importunate rigour, because that brotherly reprehensions ought to be moderated and tempered by the spirit of meekness.

³ Through the malice of the flesh, and the devil.
⁴ Which are upholden by the virtue of God's Spirit.

⁵ Labour to fill up that that is wanting in him.
⁶ This is a kind of speech which the Hebrews use, giving to understand thereby, that all good gifts come from God.

⁷ He toucheth the fore: for they commonly are most severe judges which forget their own infirmities.

⁸ He sheweth that this is the end of reprehensions, to raise up our brother which is fallen, and not proudly to oppress him. Therefore every one must seek to have commendation of his own life by approving of himself, and not by reprehending others.

⁹ Christ, in plain and flat words, calleth the commandment of charity his commandment.

¹⁰ A reason wherefore men ought to have the greatest eye upon themselves, because that every man shall be judged before God, according to his own life, and not by comparing himself with other men.

¹¹ It is meet that masters should be found by their scholars so far forth as they are able.

¹² Of whatsoever he hath, according to his ability.

¹³ He commendeth liberality towards the poor, and first of all chideth them which were not ashamed to pretend themselves

A. D. 58. for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.

8 For he that soweth to his ^s flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption: but he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting.

9 * 7 Let us not therefore be weary of well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not.

10 ^s While we have therefore time, let us do good unto all men, but specially unto them which are of the household of faith.

11 ¶ Ye see how large a letter I have written unto you with mine own hand.

12 As many as desire to make a ⁿ fair shew in ^t the flesh, they constrain you to be circumcised, only because they would not suffer persecution for the ^k cross of Christ.

13 For they themselves which are circumcised keep not the law, but desire to have you circumcised, that they might rejoice in ^l your flesh.

14 ¹⁰ But God forbid that I should ^m rejoice, but in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, whereby the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world.

15 For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature.

16 And as many as walk according to this rule, peace shall be upon them, and mercy, and upon the ⁿ Israel of God.

17 ¹¹ From henceforth let no man put me to business: for I bear in my body the ^o marks of the ^p Lord Jesus.

18 ¹² Brethren, the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your ^q spirit. Amen.

¶ Unto the Galatians, written from Rome.

this and that, and all because they would not help their neighbours, as though they could deceive God: and afterward compareth alms to a spiritual sowing which shall have a most plentiful harvest, so that it shall be very profitable: and compareth covetous niggardliness to a carnal sowing, whereof nothing can be gathered but such things as fade away, and perish by and by.

^s To the commodities of this present life.

⁷ Against such as are liberal at the beginning, but continue not, because the harvest seemeth to be deferred very long, as though the seed time and the harvest were at one instant.

⁹ The fourth and last part of the epistle, wherein he returneth to his principal end and purpose, to wit, that the Galatians should not suffer themselves to be led out of the way by the false apostles: and he painteth out those false apostles in their colours, reproving them of ambition, as men that do not that which they do, for any affection or zeal they have to the law, but only for this purpose, that they may purchase themselves favour amongst their own sort, by the circumcision of the Galatians.

^h He setteth a fair shew against the truth.

ⁱ In keeping of ceremonies.

^k For the preaching of him that was crucified.

^l That they have entangled you in Judaism, and yet he harpeth on the form of circumcision.

¹⁰ He sticketh not to compare himself with them, shewing, that, on the contrary part, he rejoiceth in those afflictions which he suffereth for Christ's sake, and as he is despised of the world, so doth he in like sort esteem the world as nought: which is the true circumcision of a true Israelite.

^m When Paul useth this word in good sense, or part, it signifieth to rest a man's self wholly in a thing, and to content himself therewith.

ⁿ Upon the true Israel, whose praise is of God, and not of man, Rom. 2. 19.

¹¹ Continuing still in the same metaphor, he opposeth his miseries and the marks of those stripes which he bare for Christ's sake, against the scar of the outward circumcision, as a true mark of his apostleship.

^o Marks which are burnt into a man's flesh, as they used in old time to mark their servants that had run away from them.

^p For it importeth much, whose marks we bear: for the cause maketh the martyr, and not the punishment.

¹² Taking his farewell of them, he wisheth them grace, and the Spirit, against the deceits of the false apostles, which laboured to beat those outward things into their brains.

^q With your minds and hearts.

The Epistle of PAUL to the EPHESIANS.

C H A P. I.

A. D. 64. 1 After the salutation, 4 he entreateth of the free election of God, 5 and adoption, 7, 13 from whence man's salvation floweth, as from the true and natural fountain: and because so high a mystery cannot be understood, 16 he prayeth that the full 20 knowledge of Christ may by God be revealed unto the Ephesians.

¹ The inscription and salutation, whereof we have spoken in the former epistles.

² This is the definition of the saints, shewing what they are.

³ The first part of the epistle, wherein he handleth all the parts of our salvation, propounding the example of the Ephesians, and using divers exhortations, and beginning after his manner with thanksgiving.

⁴ The efficient cause of our salvation is God, not considered confusedly and generally, but as the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

PAUL ¹ an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, to the ² saints which are at Ephesus, and to the ³ faithful in Christ Jesus:

2 Grace be with you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 * ⁴ Blessed be God, ⁵ and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, ⁶ which hath blessed us with ⁷ all spiritual blessing in ⁸ heavenly things in ⁹ Christ: 3 L 4 As ⁴ The next final cause, and in respect of us, is our salvation, all things being bestowed upon us which are necessary to our salvation, which kind of blessing is heavenly, and proper to the elect.

⁵ With all kind of gracious and bountiful goodness, which is heavenly indeed, and from God only.

⁶ Which God our Father gave us from his high throne from above: or because the saints have those gifts bestowed on them, which belong properly to the citizens of heaven.

⁷ The matter of our salvation is Christ, in whom only we are endued with spiritual blessing and unto salvation.

A. D. 64.

1 Cor. 1. 2.

1 Cor. 1. 5.

1 Pet. 1. 3.

A. D. 4⁵ As he hath chosen us in^d him, before the foundation of the world, ^e that we^f should^g be holy, and without blame^h before him in love:

5⁵ Who hath predestinate us to be adopted through Jesus Christ^h in himself, according to the good pleasure of his will,

6⁵ To theⁱ praise of the glory of his^j grace^k, wherewith he hath made us freely accepted in his Beloved:

7⁵ By whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins according to his rich grace:

8⁵ Whereby he hath been abundant toward us in^l all wisdom and understanding,

9 And hath opened unto us the^m mystery of his willⁿ according to his good pleasure, which he hath purposed in him,

10⁵ That in the dispensation of the fulness of the times, he might^o gather together in one all things, both which are in heaven, and which are in earth, even in Christ:

11⁵ In whom also we are chosen when we were predestinate, according to the purpose of him which worketh^p all things after the counsel of his own will,

12 That we, which^q first trusted in Christ, should be unto the praise of his glory:

⁵ He declareth the efficient cause, or by what means God the Father saveth us in his Son: Because, saith he, he chose us from everlasting in his Son.

⁶ To be adopted in him.

⁷ He expoundeth the next final cause, which he maketh double, to wit, sanctification and justification, whereof he will speak hereafter. And hereby also two things are to be noted, to wit, that holiness of life cannot be separate from the grace of election: and again, what pureness soever is in us, is the gift of God, who hath freely of his mercy chosen us.

⁸ Then God did not chuse us, because we were, or otherwise should have been holy, but to the end we should be holy.

⁹ Being clothed with Christ's righteousness.

¹⁰ Truly and sincerely.

¹¹ Another plainer exposition of the efficient cause, and also of eternal election, whereby God is said to have chosen us in Christ, to wit, because it pleased him to appoint us out when we were not yet born, whom he would make to be his children by Jesus Christ: so that there is no reason here of our election to be sought, but in the free mercy of God; neither is faith which God foresaw, the cause of our predestination, but the effect.

¹² God respecteth nothing, either that present is, or that is to come, but himself only.

¹³ The uttermost and chiefest final cause is the glory of God the Father, who saveth us freely in his Son.

¹⁴ That as his bountiful goodness deserveth all praise, so also it should be set forth and published.

¹⁵ Another final cause more near is our justification, while that he freely accounteth us for just in his Son.

¹⁶ An expounding of the material cause, how we are made acceptable to God in Christ, for it is he only whose sacrifice by the mercy of God is imputed unto us, for forgiveness of sins.

¹⁷ Now he cometh at length to the formal cause, that is to say, to vocation or preaching of the gospel, whereby God executeth that eternal counsel of our free reconciliation and salvation in Christ, and putting in place of the gospel all wisdom and understanding, he sheweth how excellent it is.

¹⁸ By which gracious goodness and bountifulness.

¹⁹ In perfect and sound wisdom.

²⁰ For unless the Lord had opened unto us that mystery, we could never have so much as dreamed of it ourselves.

²¹ Not only the election, but also the vocation proceedeth of meer grace.

²² The Father exhibited and gave Christ, who is the head of all the elect, unto the world, at that time which was convenient, according as he most wisely disposed all times from everlasting. And Christ is he, in whom all the elect from the beginning of the world, (otherwise wandering and separated from God) are gathered together: of which some were then in heaven, when he came into the earth, (to wit, such as by faith in him to come, were gathered together) and other being found upon the earth,

13¹⁶ In whom also ye have trusted, after that ye heard the^r word of truth, even the gospel of your salvation: wherein also after that ye believed; ye were^s sealed with the holy^t Spirit of promise, 14 Which is the earnest of our inheritance, for the^u redemption of that liberty purchased unto the praise of his glory.

15¹⁷ Therefore also after that I heard of the faith which ye have in the Lord Jesus, and love toward all the saints, 16 I cease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers.

17¹⁸ That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, that Father of^v glory, might give unto you the Spirit of wisdom and revelation through the^w acknowledging of him,

18 That the eyes of your understanding may be lightened, that ye may know what the^x hope is of his calling, and what the riches of his glorious inheritance is in the saints,

19¹⁹ And what is the exceeding greatness of his power toward us which believe, ^y according to the working of his mighty power,

20²⁰ Which he wrought in Christ, when he raised were gathered together of him, and the rest are daily gathered together.

¹³ The faithful are said to be gathered together in Christ, because they are joined together with him through faith, and become as it were one man.

¹⁴ He applieth severally the benefit of vocation to the believing Jews, going back to the very fountain, that even they also may not attribute their salvation, neither to themselves, nor to their stock, nor any other thing, but to the only grace and mercy of God, both because they were called, and also because they were first called.

¹⁵ All things are attributed to the grace of God without exception, and yet for all that, we are not stocks, for he giveth us grace both to will, and to be able to do those things that are good, Phil. 2. 13.

¹⁶ He speaketh of the Jews.

¹⁷ Now he maketh the Ephesians (or rather all the Gentile:) equal to the Jews, because that notwithstanding they came last, yet being called by the same gospel, they embraced it by faith, and were sealed up with the same Spirit, which is the pledge of election, until the inheritance itself be seen, that in them also the glory of God might shine forth and be manifested.

¹⁸ That word which is truth indeed, because it cometh from God.

¹⁹ This is a borrowed kind of speech taken of a seal, which being put to any thing, maketh difference between those things that are authentic, and others that are not.

²⁰ With that Spirit, which bringeth not the law, but the promise of free adoption.

²¹ Full and perfect.

²² He returneth to the former gratulation, concluding two things together of those things that went before: the first is, that all good things come to us from God the Father in Christ, and by Christ, that for them he may be praised of us. The second is, that all those things (which he bringeth to two heads, to wit, faith and charity) are increased in us by certain degrees, so that we must desire increase of his grace, from whom we have the beginning, and of whom we hope for the end.

²³ The causes of faith, are God the Father lightening our minds with his Holy Spirit, that we may embrace Christ opened unto us in the gospel, to the obtaining of everlasting life, and the setting forth of God's glory.

²⁴ Full of majesty.

²⁵ For it is not enough for us to have known God once, but we must know him every day more and more.

²⁶ What blessings they are which he calleth you to hope for, whom he calleth to Christ.

²⁷ The excellency of faith is declared by the effects, because the mighty power of God is set forth and shewed therein.

²⁸ The apostle willeth us to behold in our most glorious Christ, with the eyes of faith, that most excellent power and glory of God, whereof all the faithful are partakers, although it be as yet very dark in us, by reason of the ignominy of the cross, and the weakness of the flesh.

A. D. 64. raised him from the dead, and set him at his right hand in the heavenly places, 21 Far above all principality, and power, and might, and domination; and every name that is named, not in this world only, but also in that that is to come :
 22 And hath made all things subject under his feet, and hath given him over all things to be the head to the church,
 23 Which is his body, even the fulness of him that filleth all in all things.

CHAP. II.

2 The better to set out the grace of Christ, he useth a comparison, calling them to mind, 5, 12 that they were altogether cast-aways and aliens: 8 that they are saved by grace, 13 and brought near, 16 by reconciliation through Christ, 17 published by the gospel.

Coloss. 2. 13. AND * you hath be quickened, that were dead in trespasses and sins,
 2 Wherein, in times past, ye walked, according to the course of this world, and after the prince that ruleth in the air, even the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience,
 3 Among whom we also had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, in fulfilling the will of the flesh, and of the mind, and were by nature the children of wrath, as well as others.

A. D. 64. 4 But God which is rich in mercy, through his great love wherewith he loved us,
 5 Even when we were dead by sins, hath quickened us together in Christ, by whose grace ye are saved,
 6 And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus.
 7 That he might shew in the ages to come the exceeding riches of his grace, through his kindness toward us in Christ Jesus.
 8 For by grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God:
 9 Not of works, lest any man should boast himself:
 10 For we are his workmanship created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath ordained, that we should walk in them.
 11 Wherefore remember that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, and called uncircumcision, of them which are called circumcision in the flesh, made with hands:
 12 That ye were, I say, at that time without Christ, and were aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and were strangers from the covenants of promise, and had no hope, and were without God in the world. *Rom. 9. 4.
 13 But now in Christ Jesus, ye which once were far off, are made near by the blood of Christ.
 14 For

² To be set on God's right hand, is to be partaker of the sovereignty which he hath over all creatures.
² Every thing whatsoever it be, or above all things, be they of never so much power or excellency.
²¹ That we should not think that that excellent glory of Christ is a thing wherewith we have nought to do, he witnesseth, that he was appointed of God the Father, head of all the church, and therefore the body must be joined to this head, which otherwise would be a maimed thing without the members: which notwithstanding is not of necessity (seeing that the church is rather quickened and sustained by the only virtue of Christ, so far off is it, that he needeth the fulness thereof) but of the infinite good will and pleasure of God, who vouchsafeth to join us to his Son.
^b Infomuch that there is nothing but is subject unto him.
^c For the love of Christ is so great towards the church, that though he do fully satisfy all with all things, yet he esteemeth himself but a maimed and imperfect head, unless he have the church joined to him as his body.
¹ He declareth again the greatness of God's good will by comparing that miserable state wherein we are born, with that dignity whereunto we are advanced by God the Father in Christ. So that he describeth that condition in such sort, that he saith, that touching spiritual motions we are not only born half dead, but wholly and altogether dead.
^a Look Rom. 6. 2. So then he calleth them dead, which are not regenerate: for as the immortality of them which are damned is no life, so this knitting together of body and soul, is properly no life but death in them which are not ruled by the Spirit of God.
² He sheweth the cause of death, to wit, sins.
³ He proveth, by the effects, that all were spiritually dead.
⁴ He proveth this evil to be universal, infomuch as all are slaves of Satan.
⁵ At the pleasure of the prince.
⁵ Men are therefore slaves to Satan, because they are willingly rebellious against God.
^c They are called the children of disobedience, which are given to disobedience.
⁶ After that he hath severally condemned the Gentiles, he confesseth that the Jews, amongst whom he numbereth himself, are not a whit better.
^d By the name of flesh, in the first place, he meaneth the whole man, which he divideth into two parts: into the flesh, which is the part that the philosophers term without reason; and into the thought, which they call reasonable: so that he leaveth nothing in man half dead, but concludeth that the whole of man is of nature the son of wrath.

⁷ The conclusion: All men were born subject to the wrath and curse of God.
^c Men are said to be the children of wrath passively, that is to say, guilty of everlasting death, by the judgment of God, who is angry with them.
^f Prophane people which knew not God.
⁸ Now hereof followeth another member of the comparison, declaring our excellency, to wit, that by the virtue of Christ we are delivered from that death, and made partakers of eternal life, to the end that at length we may reign with him. And by divers and sundry means he beatech this into their heads, that the efficient cause of this benefit is the free mercy of God: and Christ himself is the material cause: and faith is the instrument, which also is the free gift of God: and the end is God's glory.
⁸ To wit, as he addeth afterwards, in Christ, for as yet this is not fulfilled in us, but only in our head, by whose Spirit we have begun to die to sin, and live to God, until that work be fully brought to an end: but yet the hope is certain, for we are as sure of that we look for, as we are of that we have received already.
^b So then, grace, that is to say, the gift of God, and faith, do stand one with another, to which two, these are contrary, To be saved by ourselves, or by our works. Therefore what mean they which would join together things of contrary nature?
⁹ He taketh away expressly, and namely from our works, the praise of justification, seeing that the good works themselves are the effects of grace in us.
¹ He speaketh here of grace, and not of nature: therefore be the works never so good, look what they are, it is of grace.
¹⁰ Applying the former doctrine to the Gentiles, he sheweth that they were not only as the Jews by nature, but also after an especial sort, strangers and without God: therefore, they ought so much the rather remember that same so great a benefit of God.
^k You were called no otherwise than Gentiles, that all the world might witness of your uncleanness.
¹ Of the Jews which were known from you by the mark of circumcision, the mark of the covenant.
^m He beginneth first with Christ, who was the end of all the promises.
ⁿ You had no right or title to the commonwealth of Israel.
¹¹ Christ is the only bond of the Jews and Gentiles: whereby they be reconciled to God.

A. D. 64. 14¹² For he is our peace, which hath made of both one, and hath broken the stop of the partition wall, 15 In abrogating through his flesh the hatred, that is, the law of commandments which standeth in ordinances, for to make of twain one new man in himself, so making peace:
 16 And that he might reconcile both unto God in ^o one body by his cross, and ² slay hatred thereby:
 17 ³ And came, and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were near.
 18 For ⁴ through him we have both an entrance unto the Father by one Spirit.
 19 ⁴ Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners: but citizens with the saints, and of the household of God,
 20 ⁵ And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the ⁶ chief corner stone, 21 In whom all the building ⁷ coupled together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord:
 22 In whom ye also are built together to be the habitation of God by the Spirit.

CHAP. III.

1 He doleth that therefore he suffered many things of the Jews, 3 because he preached the mystery touching the salvation of the Gentiles, 8 at God's commandment. 13 After, he desired the Ephesians not to faint for his afflictions: 14 and for this cause he purgeth unto God, 18 that they may understand the great love of Christ.

FOR ¹ this cause, I Paul am the ² prisoner of Jesus Christ for you Gentiles,
 2 If ye have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God, which is given me to you-ward,
 3 That is, that God by revelation hath shewed this mystery unto me (as I wrote above in few words, 4 Whereby when ye read, ye may know mine understanding in the mystery of Christ) A. D. 64.

 5 Which in ^b other ages was not opened unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit,
 6 That the Gentiles should be inheriters also, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel,
 7 Whereof I am made a minister by the gift of the grace of God given unto me through the effectual working of his power:
 8 Even unto me the least of all saints is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ,
 9 And to make clear unto all men what the fellowship of the mystery is, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who hath created all things by Jesus Christ,
 10 ² To the intent that now unto principalities and powers in heavenly places, might be known by the church the ^c manifold wisdom of God,
 11 According to the ² eternal purpose which he wrought in Christ Jesus our Lord:
 12 By whom we have boldness and entrance with confidence, by faith in him.
 13 Wherefore I desire that ye faint not at my tribulations for your sakes, which is your glory.
 14 ³ For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, 15 (Of whom is named the whole ^c family in heaven and in earth)
 16 That he might grant you according to the riches of his glory, that ye may be strengthened by his Spirit in the ² inner man,
 17 That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith:
 18 That ye, being rooted and grounded in ^b love, may be able to comprehend with all saints ¹ what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height:
 19 And

¹² As by the ceremonies and worship appointed by the law, the Jews were divided from the Gentiles, so now Christ, having broken down the partition wall, joineth them both together, both in himself, and betwixt themselves, and to God. Wherby it followeth, that whosoever establisheth the ceremonies of the law, maketh the grace of Christ void, and of none effect.
¹³ He alludeth to the sacrifices of the law, which represented that true and only sacrifice.
¹⁴ For he destroyed death by death, and fastened it, as it were, to the cross.
¹⁵ The preaching of the gospel, is an effectual instrument of this grace, common as well to the Jews, as to the Gentiles.
¹⁶ Christ is the gate, as it were, by whom we come to the Father, and the Holy Ghost, is as it were, our load-man who leadeth us.
¹⁸ The conclusion: The Gentiles are taken into the fellowship of salvation, and he describeth the excellency of the church, calling it the city and house of God.
¹⁹ The Lord committed the doctrine of salvation, first to the prophets, and then to the apostles, the end whereof, and matter, as it were, and substance, is Christ. Therefore that is indeed the true and catholic church, which is builded upon Christ by the prophets and apostles, as a spiritual temple consecrated to God.
²⁰ That is, the head of the building, for the foundations are, as it were, the heads of the building.
²¹ So that God is the workman not only of the foundation, but also of the whole building.
²² He maintaineth his apostleship against the offence of the cross, whereon also he taketh an argument to confirm himself, affirming that he was not only appointed an apostle by the mercy of God, but was also particularly appointed to the Gentiles to call them on every side to salvation, because God had so determined it from the beginning, although he deferred a great while the manifestation of that his counsel.

² These words, the prisoner of Jesus Christ, are taken passively, that is to say, I Paul am cast into prison for maintaining the glory of Christ.
^b He meaneth not that none knew the calling of the Gentiles before, but because very few knew of it, and they that did know of it, as the prophets, had it revealed unto them very darkly and under figures.
² The unlooked-for calling of the Gentiles, was as it were a glass to the heavenly angels, wherby they might behold the marvellous wisdom of God.
^c God never had but one way only to save men by: but it had divers fashions and forms.
^d Which was before all beginnings.
³ He teacheth by his own example, that the efficacy of the doctrine dependeth upon the grace of God, and therefore we ought to join prayers with the preaching and hearing of the word: which are needful not only to them which are younglings in religion, but even to the oldest also, that they growing up more and more by faith in Christ, being confirmed with all spiritual gifts, may be grounded and rooted in the knowledge of that immeasurable love wherewith God the Father hath loved us in Christ, seeing that the whole family, whereof part is already received into heaven, and part is yet here on earth, dependeth upon that adoption of the heavenly Father, in his only Son.
^c All that whole people which had but one household-Father, and that is the church, which is adopted in Christ.
^f According to the greatness of his mercy.
⁸ Look Rom. 7. 22.
^b Wherewith God loveth us, which is the root of our election.
ⁱ How perfect that work of Christ is in every part.

A. D.
64.

19 And to know the^k love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye may be filled with all^m fulness of God.

20⁺ Unto him therefore that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, 21 Be praise in the church by Christ Jesus, throughout all generations for ever. Amen.

C H A P. IV.

These three last chapters contain precepts of manners.

1 He exhorteth them to mutual love. 7 Sundry gifts are therefore bestowed of God, 16 that the church may be built up. 18 He calleth them from the vanity of the infidels, 25 from lying, 29 and from filthy talking.

I Therefore, being prisoner in the Lord, pray you that ye walk worthy of the^a vocation whereunto ye are called:

2² With all humbleness of mind and meekness, with^b long suffering, supporting one another through love, 3³ Endeavouring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.

4⁴ There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your vocation.

5 There is one Lord, one faith, one baptism,

6 One God and Father of all, which is^c above all, and^d through all, and^e in you all.

^k Which God hath shewed us in Christ.

¹ Which passeth all the capacity of man's wit to comprehend it fully in his mind: for otherwise who so hath the Spirit of God, perceiveth so much (according to the measure that God hath given him) as is sufficient to salvation.

^m So that we have abundantly in us, whatsoever things are requisite to make us perfect with God.

⁺ He breaketh forth into a thanksgiving, whereby the Ephesians also may be confirmed to hope for any thing of God.

¹ Another part of the epistle, containing precepts of Christian life, the sum whereof is this, that every man behave himself as it is meet for so excellent grace of God.

² By this is meant the general calling of the faithful, which is this, to be holy, as our God is holy.

² Secondly, he commendeth meekness of the mind, which is shewed forth by bearing one with another.

³ Thirdly, he requireth perfect agreement, but yet such as is knit with the band of the Holy Ghost.

⁺ An argument of great weight, for an earnest entertaining of brotherly love and charity one with another, because we are made one body, as it were, of one God and Father, by one Spirit, worshipping one Lord with one faith, and consecrated to him with one baptism, and hope of one self-same glory, whereunto we are called. Therefore whosoever breaketh charity, breaketh all these things asunder.

^d Who only poureth forth his providence, through all the members of the church.

^e Who only is joined together with us in Christ.

⁵ He teacheth us, that we indeed are all one body, and that all good gifts proceed from Christ only, who reigneth in heaven, having mightily conquered all his enemies (from whence he heapeth all gifts upon his church): but yet notwithstanding these gifts are diversly and sundry ways divided according to his will and pleasure, and therefore every man ought to be content with that measure that God hath given him, and to bestow it to the common profit of the whole body.

^f Which Christ hath given.

^g A multitude of captives.

^h Down to the earth, which is the lowest part of the world.

ⁱ Fill with his gifts.

^k The church.

⁶ First of all he reckoneth up the ecclesiastical functions, which are partly extraordinary and for a season, as apostles, prophets, evangelists, and partly ordinary and perpetual, as pastors and doctors.

7⁵ But unto every one of us is given grace, according to the measure of the^f gift of Christ. A. D. 64.

8 Wherefore he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led^g captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men

9 (Now, in that he ascended, what is it but that he had also descended first into the^h lowest parts of the earth?

10 He that descended, is even the same that ascended, far above all heavens, that he might fill^k all things).

11⁶ He therefore gave some to be¹ apostles, and some^m prophets, and someⁿ evangelists, and some^o pastors and teachers:

12⁷ For the repairing of the saints, for the work of the ministry, and for the edification of the^p body of Christ,

13⁸ Till we all meet together (in the^q unity of faith, and that acknowledging of the Son of God) unto a perfect man, and unto the measure of the^r age of the fulness of Christ:

14⁹ That we henceforth be no more children, ¹⁰ wavering and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the^s deceit of men, and with craftiness, whereby they lay in wait to deceive.

15¹¹ But let us follow the truth in love, and in all things grow up into him which is the head, that is, Christ:

16 By whom all the body being coupled and knit together by every joint, for the furniture

¹ The apostles were those twelve, unto whom Paul was afterward added, whose office was to plant churches throughout all the world.

^m The prophet's office was one of the chiefest, which were men of a marvellous wisdom, and some of them could foretel things to come.

ⁿ These the apostles used as fellows in the execution of their office, being not able to answer all places themselves.

^o Pastors are they which govern the church, and teachers are they which govern the schools.

⁷ He sheweth the end of ecclesiastical functions, to wit, that by the ministry of men all the saints may so grow up together, that they may make one mystical body of Christ.

⁸ The use of this ministry is perpetual, so long as we are in this world, that is, until that time that having put off the flesh, and thoroughly and perfectly agreeing betwixt ourselves, we shall be joined with Christ our head. Which thing is done by that knowledge of the Son of God increasing in us, and he himself by little and little growing up in us, until we come to be a perfect man, which shall be in the world to come, when God shall be all in all.

⁹ In that most near conjunction which is knit and fastened together by faith.

^r Christ is said to grow up to full age, not in himself, but in us.

⁹ Betwixt our childhood (that is to say, a very weak state, while as yet we do altogether waver) and our perfect age, which we shall have at length in another world, there is a mean, to wit, our youth, and steady going forward to perfection.

¹⁰ He compareth them, which rest not themselves upon the word of God, to little boats which are tossed hither and thither with the doctrines of men, as it were, with contrary winds, and therewithal forewarneth them that it cometh to pass not only by the lightness of man's brain, but also by the craftiness of certain, which make as it were an art of it.

⁸ By the deceit of those men which are very well practised in deceiving of others.

¹¹ By earnest affection of the truth and love, we grow up into Christ: for he (being effectual by the ministry of his word, which as the vital spirit doth so quicken the whole body, that it nourisheth all the limbs thereof according to the measure and proportion of each one) quickeneth and cherisheth his church, which consisteth of divers functions, as of divers members, and preserveth the proportion of every one. And therefore it followeth that neither this body can live without Christ, neither can any man grow up spiritually, which separateth himself from the other members.

A. D. 64. ¹⁴ partes according to the ² effectual power which is in the measure of every part) receiveth ² increase of the body, unto the edifying of itself in love.

17 ¹¹ This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as ² other Gentiles walk, in ² vanity of their mind,

18 Having their understanding darkened, and being strangers from the ² life of God, through the ignorance that is in them, because of the hardness of their heart:

19 Which being ² past feeling, have given themselves unto wantonness, to work all uncleanness, even with ² greediness.

20 ¹¹ But ye have not so learned Christ,

21 If so be ye have heard him, and have been taught by him, ² as the truth is in Jesus,

Col. 3. 8. ¹¹ That is, that ye cast off concerning the conversation in time past, ² that old man, which is corrupt through the deceivable lusts,

22 And be renewed in the ² spirit of your mind,

23 And put on the new man, which ² after God is created ² unto righteousness, and ² true holiness.

24 ¹¹ Wherefore cast off lying, and speak every man truth unto his neighbour: for we are members one of another.

25 ¹¹ Be ² angry, but sin not: let not the sun go down ² upon your wrath, 26 Neither give place to the devil.

27 ¹¹ Let him that stole, steal no more: but let him rather labour, and work with his hands, the thing which is ² good, that he may have to give unto him that needeth.

28 ¹¹ Let no ² corrupt communication proceed out of your mouths: but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister ² grace unto the hearers: A. D. 64.

30 ¹¹ And grieve not the holy Spirit of God, by whom ye are sealed unto the day of redemption.

31 Let all bitterness, and anger, and wrath, crying, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all maliciousness.

32 Be ye courteous one to another, and tender-hearted, freely forgiving one another, even as God, for Christ's sake, freely forgave you.

CHAPTER V.

3 Left in these vices which he reprehended, they should set light by his admonitions, 5 he terrifieth them by denouncing severe judgments, 8 and stirreth them forward. 15 Then he descendeth from general lessons of manners, 21 to the particular duties of wives, 25 and husbands.

BE ye therefore followers of God, as dear children,

2 ¹¹ And walk in love, even as Christ hath ² loved us, and hath given himself for us, to be an offering and a sacrifice of a sweet smelling ² savour to God. John 15. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21.

3 ¹¹ But fornication, and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not be once named among you, as it becometh saints, Col. 3. 5. Gal. 5. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

4 Neither filthiness, neither foolish talking, neither ² jesting, which are things not comely, but rather giving of thanks.

5 ¹¹ For this ye know, that no whoremonger, neither unclean person, nor covetous person, which ² Of Christ, who in manner of the soul, quickeneth all the members.

² Such increase as is meet the body should have.

² Charity is the knitting of the limbs together.

¹¹ He descendeth to the fruits of Christian doctrine, and reasoneth first upon the principles of manners and actions, setting down a most grave comparison between the children of God, and them which are not regenerate: For in these men, all the powers of the mind are corrupted, and their mind is given to vanity, and their senses are darkened with most gross mistiness, and their affections are so accustomed by little and little to wickedness, that at length they run headlong into all uncleanness, being utterly destitute of all judgment.

¹¹ If the noblest parts of the soul be corrupted, what is man but corruption only?

² Whereby God liveth in them.

² Void of all judgment.

¹¹ They strove to pais one another, as though there had been some gain to be gotten by it.

¹¹ Here followeth the contrary part, touching men which are regenerate by the true and lively knowledge of Christ, which have other principles of their doings far different, to wit, holy and honest desires, and a mind clean changed by the virtue of the Holy Ghost, from whence proceed also like effects, as a just and holy life indeed.

¹¹ As they have learned, which acknowledge Christ indeed, and in good earnest.

² Yourselves.

¹¹ Where there ought to have been the greatest force of reason, there is the greatest corruption of all which wasteth all things.

² After the image of God.

² The effect and end of the new creation.

² Not feigned nor counterfeit.

¹¹ He teacheth us how to bridle our anger, in such sort, that although it be hot, yet that it break not out, and that it be straightways quenched before we sleep, lest Satan taking occasion to give us evil counsel, through that wicked counsellor, destroy us.

¹¹ If it so fall out that ye be angry, yet sin not: that is, bridle your anger, and do not wickedly put that in execution, which you have wickedly conceived.

¹¹ He descendeth from the heart to the hands, condemning their: and because the men which give themselves to this wickedness, use to pretend poverty, he sheweth that labour is a good remedy against poverty, which God blesteth in such sort, that they which labour have always some overplus to help other, so far is it from this, that they are constrained to steal other men's goods.

¹¹ By labouring in things that are holy, and profitable to his neighbour.

¹¹ He bridleth the tongue also, teaching us so to temper our talk, that our hearers minds be not only not destroyed, but also instructed.

² Word for word, rotten.

¹¹ A general precept against all excess of affections which dwell in that part of the mind, which they call, angry, and he setteth against them the contrary means. And useth a most vehement preface, how we ought to take heed that we grieve not the Holy Spirit of God through our immoderateness and intemperancy, who dwelleth in us, to this end, to moderate all our affections.

¹¹ An argument taken from the example of Christ, most grave and vehement, both for pardoning of those injuries which have been done unto us by our greatest enemies, and much more for having consideration of the miserable, and using moderation and gentle behaviour towards all men.

¹¹ Now he cometh to another kind of affections, which is in that part of the mind, which men call covetous or desirous: and he reprehendeth fornication, covetousness and jesting, very sharply.

¹¹ Jest which men cast one at another: that no lightness be seen, nor evil example given, nor any offence moved by evil words or backbiting.

A. D. 64. which is an ^b idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ, and of God.

6 * Let no man deceive you with vain words: for, for such things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience.

7 ³ Be not therefore companions with them:

8 For ye were once darkness, but are now ^c light in the Lord: walk as children of light

9 (For the fruit of the ^d Spirit is in all good-ness, and righteousness, and truth),

10 Approving that which is pleasing to the Lord,

11 And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but even ^e reprove them rather.

12 For it is shame even to speak of the things which are done of them in secret.

13 But all things when they are reprov'd of the light, are manifest: for it is light that maketh all things manifest.

14 Wherefore ^f he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and stand up from the ^g dead, and Christ shall give thee light.

15 * Take heed therefore that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as ^h wife, 16 ^h Redeeming the season: for the ⁱ days are evil.

17 * Wherefore be ye not unwise, but understand what the will of the Lord is.

18 ⁵ And be not drunken with wine, wherein is ^k excess: but be fulfilled with the Spirit,

19 Speaking unto yourselves in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing, and making melody to the Lord in your ^l hearts,

20 Giving thanks always for all things unto God even the Father, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ,

* Mat. 24.

³ Because we are not so ready to any thing, as to follow evil examples, therefore the apostle warneth the godly to remember always, that the other are, but as it were darkness, and that they themselves are as it were light. And therefore the others commit all villainies (as men are wont in the dark) but they ought not only not to follow their examples, but also (as the property of the light is) reprove their darkness, and to walk so, having Christ that true light going before them, as it becometh wise men.

^c The faithful are called light, both because they have the true light in them which lighteneth them, and also because they give light to others, inasmuch that their honest conversation reproveth the life of wicked men.

^d By whose force we are made light in the Lord.

^e Make them open to all the world, by your good life.

^f The scriptures, or God in the scripture.

^g He speaketh of the death of sin.

^h The worse and more corrupt that the manner of this world are, the more watchful ought we to be against all occasions, and respect nothing but the will of God.

ⁱ This is a metaphor taken from the merchants: who prefer the least profit that may be before all their pleasures.

^l The times are troublesome and sharp.

⁵ He setteth the sober and holy assemblies of the faithful, against the dissolute banquets of the unfaithful, in which the praises of the only Lord must ring, be it in prosperity or adversity.

^k All kind of riot, joined with all manner of filthiness and shamefulness.

^l With an earnest affection of the heart, and not with the tongue only.

⁶ A short repetition of the end whereunto all things ought to be referred, to serve one another for God's sake.

⁷ Now he descendeth to a family, dividing orderly all the parts of a family. And he saith, that the duty of wives consisteth herein, to be obedient to their husbands.

⁸ The first argument, for they cannot be disobedient to their husbands, but they must resist God also, who is the author of this subjection.

⁹ A declaration of the former saying: because God hath 21 ⁶ Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God.

22 ¶ * ⁷ Wives, submit yourselves unto your husbands, ⁸ as unto the Lord:

23 * ⁹ For the husband is the wife's head, even as Christ is the head of the church, ¹⁰ and the same is the saviour of his body.

24 ¹¹ Therefore as the church is in subjection to Christ, even so let the wives be to their husbands in every thing.

25 ¶ * ¹² Husbands, love your wives, even ¹³ as Christ loved the church, and gave himself for it,

26 ¹⁴ That he might ^m sanctify it, and cleanse it by the washing of water through the ⁿ word:

27 That he might make it unto himself a glorious church, ^o not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blame.

28 ¹⁴ So ought men to love their wives, as their own bodies: he that loveth his wife, loveth himself.

29 For no man ever yet hated his ^p own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord doth the church.

30 For we are members of his body, ^q of his flesh, and of his bones.

31 * For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall ^r cleave to his wife, and they twain shall be one flesh.

32 ¹⁵ This is a great secret, but I speak concerning Christ, and concerning the church.

33 ¹⁶ Therefore every one of you, do ye so: let every one love his wife, even as himself, and let the wife see that she fear her husband.

made the man head of the woman in matrimony, as Christ is the head of the church.

¹⁰ Another argument: because the good estate of the wife dependeth of the man, so that this submission is not only just, but also very profitable: as also the salvation of the church is of Christ, although far otherwise.

¹¹ The conclusion of the wives duty towards their husbands.

¹² The husbands duty towards their wives, is to love them as themselves, of which love, the love of Christ toward his church is a lively pattern.

¹³ Because many men pretend the infirmities of their wives to excuse their own hardness and cruelty, the apostle will-eth us to mark what manner of church Christ gat, when he joined it to himself, and how he doth not only not loath all her filth, and uncleannesse, but ceaseth not to wipe the same away with his cleanness, until he wholly purged it.

ⁿ Through the promise of free justification and sanctification in Christ, received by faith.

^o The church, as it is considered in itself, shall not be without wrinkle, before it come to the mark it shooteth at: for while it is in this life, it runneth in a race: but if it be considered in Christ, it is clean and without wrinkle.

¹⁴ Another argument: Every man loveth himself, even of nature, therefore he striveth against nature that loveth not his wife: he proveth the consequence, first, by the my- tical knitting of Christ and the church together, and then by the ordinance of God, who saith that man and wife are as one, that is, not to be divided.

^q He alludeth to the making of the woman, which signifieth our coupling together with Christ, which is wrought by faith, but is sealed by the sacrament of the supper.

^r Look Matt. 15: 5.

¹⁵ That no man might dream of natural conjunction, or knitting of Christ and his church together (such as the husbands and the wives is) he sheweth that it is secret, to wit, spiritual, and such as far differeth from the common capacity of man: as which consisteth by the virtue of the Spirit, and not of the flesh, by faith and by no natural band.

¹⁶ The conclusion both of the husband's duty towards his wife, and of the wife's towards her husband.

A. D.

C H A P. VI.

64. 1 He sheweth the duties of children, 5 servants, 9 and masters. 10 Then he speaketh of the fierce battle that the faithful have, 12 and what weapons we may use in the same. 21 In the end he commendeth Tychicus.

Children, ¹ obey your parents ² in the Lord: ³ for this is right.

2 ⁴ Honour thy father and mother (which is the first commandment with ⁵ promise)

3 That it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest live long on earth.

4 ⁶ And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in instruction and ⁷ information of the Lord.

5 ⁸ Servants, be obedient unto them that are your masters, ⁹ according to the flesh, with ¹⁰ fear and trembling, ¹¹ in singleness of your hearts, as unto Christ:

6 Not with service to the eye, as men pleasers, but as the servants of Christ, ⁷ doing the will of God from the heart,

7 With good will, serving the ⁸ Lord, and not men.

8 ⁹ And know ye, that whatsoever good thing any man doth, that same shall he receive of the Lord, whether he be bond or free.

9 ¹⁰ And ye masters, do the same things unto them, putting away threatening: and know that even your master also is in heaven, neither is there ¹¹ respect of person with him.

10 ¹² Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.

11 Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the assaults of the devil.

12 ¹³ For we wrestle not against flesh and ¹⁴ blood, but against ¹⁵ principalities, against powers, and against the worldly governors, the princes of the darkness of this world, against

¹ He cometh to another part of a family, and sheweth that the duty of the children toward their parents, consisteth in obedience unto them.

² The first argument: because God hath so appointed: whereupon it followeth also that children are so far forth bound to obey their parents, as they may not swerve from the true worship of God.

³ For the Lord is author of all fatherhood, and therefore we must yield such obedience as he will have us.

⁴ The second argument: Because this obedience is most just.

⁵ A proof of the first argument.

⁶ The third argument: taken of the profit that ensueth thereby: Because the Lord vouchsafed this commandment amongst all the rest, of a special blessing.

⁷ With a special promise: for otherwise the second commandment hath a promise of mercy to a thousand generations, but that promise is general.

⁸ It is the duty of fathers to use their fatherly authority moderately and to God's glory.

¹⁰ Now he descendeth to the third part of a family, to wit, to the duty both of the masters and of the servants. And he sheweth that the duty of servants consisteth in a hearty love and reverence to their masters.

¹¹ He mitigateth the sharpness of service, in that they are spiritually free notwithstanding the same, and yet that spiritual freedom taketh not away corporal service: inasmuch that they cannot be Christ's, unless they serve their masters willingly and faithfully, so far forth as they may with safe conscience.

¹² With careful reverence, for slavish fear is not allowable, much less in Christian servants.

¹³ To cut off occasion of all pretences, he teacheth us that it is God's will, that some are either born or made servants, and therefore they must respect God's will, although their service be never so hard.

¹⁴ Being moved with a reverence to God-ward, as though ye served God himself.

¹⁵ Although they serve unkind and cruel masters, yet spiritual wickednesses, which are in the high places. A. D. 64.

13 ¹⁴ For this cause take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to resist in the ¹⁵ evil day, and having finished all things, stand fast.

14 Stand therefore, and your loins girded about with verity, and having on the breast-plate of righteousness,

15 And your feet shod with the ¹⁶ preparation of the gospel of peace:

16 Above all, take the shield of faith, wherewith ye may quench all the fiery darts of the wicked, 17 And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God.

18 And pray always with all manner prayer and supplication in the ¹⁹ Spirit: and watch thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints,

19 And for me, that utterance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth boldly to publish the secret of the gospel, 20 Whereof I am the ambassador in bonds, that therein I may speak boldly, as I ought to speak.

21 ¶ ²² But that ye may also know mine affairs, and what I do, Tychicus my dear brother and faithful minister in the Lord, shall shew you of all things, 22 Whom I have sent unto you for the same purpose, that ye might know mine affairs, and that he might comfort your hearts.

23 Peace be with the brethren, and love with faith from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

24 Grace be with all them which love our Lord Jesus Christ to their immortality. Amen.

¶ Written from Rome unto the Ephesians, and sent by Tychicus. The the obedience of servants is no less acceptable to God, than the obedience of them that are free.

¹¹ It is the duty of masters, to use the authority that they have over their servants modestly and holily, seeing that they in another respect have a common master, which is in heaven, who will judge both the bond and the free.

¹² Either of freedom or bondage.

¹³ He concludeth the other part of this epistle, with a grave exhortation, that all be ready and fight constantly, trusting to spiritual weapons, until their enemies be clean put to flight. And first of all, he warneth us to take the armour of God, wherewith only our enemy may be dispatched.

¹⁴ Secondly, he declareth that our chiefest and mightiest enemies are invisible, that we may not think that our chiefest conflict is with men.

¹⁶ He giveth the names to the evil angels, by reason of the effects which they work: not that they are able to do the same of themselves, but because God giveth them the bridle.

¹⁷ He sheweth that these enemies are put to flight with the only armour of God, to wit, with uprightnes of conscience, a godly and holy life, knowledge of the gospel, faith, and to be short, with the word of God, and using daily earnest prayer for the health of the church, and especially for the constancy of the true, godly, and valiant ministers of the word.

¹⁸ Look chap. 5. 16.

¹⁹ That the preparation of the gospel may be as it were shoes to you: and it is very fitly called the gospel of peace, for that, seeing we have to go to God through most dangerous ranks of enemies, this may encourage us to go on manfully, in that we know by the doctrine of the gospel, that we may take our journey to God who is at peace with us.

²⁰ That holy prayers may proceed from the holy Spirit.

²¹ A familiar and very amiable declaration of his state, together with a solemn prayer, wherewith Paul is wont to end his epistles.

²² To life everlasting.

The Epistle of PAUL to the PHILIPPIANS.

CHAP. I.

A. D.
64.

3 Having testified his godly and tender affection towards the Philippians, 12 he intreateth of himself, and his bonds: 22 And pricketh them forward by his own example, 27 and exhorteth them to unity, 28 and patience.

PAUL¹ and Timotheus, the servants of Jesus Christ, to all the saints in Christ Jesus, which are at Philippi, with the² bishops and deacons:

2 Grace be with you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 I thank my God, having you in perfect memory

4 (Always in all my prayers for all you, praying with gladness),

5 Because of the^b fellowship which ye have in the gospel, from the^c first day unto now.

6 And I am persuaded of this same thing, that he that hath begun this good work in you, will perform it until the^d day of Jesus Christ:

7 As it becometh me so to judge of you all, because I have you in remembrance, that both in my^e bands, and in my defence and confirmation of the gospel, you all were partakers of my^f grace.

8^g For God is my record, how I long after you all from the very heart root in Jesus Christ.

9^h And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge, and in all judgment,

10 That ye may allow those things which are best: that ye may be pure, and without offence, until the day of Christ, 11 Filled with theⁱ fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ unto the glory and praise of God.

12 ¶^j I would ye understood, brethren, that the things which have come unto me, are turned rather to the furthering of the gospel,

13 So that my bands^k in Christ are famous throughout all the^l judgment-hall, and in all other places, 14 Insomuch that many of the brethren in the Lord are boldened through my bands, and dare more frankly speak the^m word.

15 Some preach Christ even through envy and strife, and some also of good will.

16 The one part preacheth Christ of contention and notⁿ purely, supposing to add more afflictions to my bands:

17 But the others of love, knowing that I am set for the defence of the gospel.

18^o What then? yet Christ is preached all manner of ways, whether it be under a^p pretence, or sincerely: and I therein joy: yea, and will joy.

19 For I know that this shall turn to my salvation through your prayer, and by the help of the Spirit of Jesus Christ, 20^q As I fervently look for, and hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all confidence, as always, so now, Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life or by death.

21 For Christ is to me both in life, and in death advantage.

22^r And whether to live in the^s flesh were profitable for me, and what to chuse I know not.

23 For I am distressed between both, desiring to be loosed, and to be with Christ, which is best of all.

24 Nevertheless, to abide in the flesh, is more needful for you.

25 And this am I sure of, that I shall abide, and with you all continue, for your furtherance and joy of your faith,

26 That ye may more abundantly rejoice in Jesus Christ for me, by my coming to you again. 3 N 27 Only

¹ The mark whereat he shooreth in this epistle, is to confirm the Philippians, by all means possible, not only not to faint, but also to go forward. And first of all, he commendeth their former doings, to exhort them to go forward: which thing he saith, he hopeth fully they will do, and that by the testimony of their lively charity, but in the mean season he referreth all things to the grace of God.

² By the bishops are meant both the pastors, which have the dispensation of the word, and the elders that govern: and by deacons, are meant those that were stewards of the treasury of the church, and had to look unto the poor.

³ Because that you also are made partakers of the gospel.

⁴ Ever since I knew you.

⁵ The Spirit of God will not forsake you unto the very latter end, until your mortal bodies shall appear before the judgment of Christ to be glorified.

⁶ A true proof of a true knitting together with Christ.

⁷ He calleth his bands grace, as though he had received some singular benefit.

⁸ He declareth his good will towards them, therewithal shewing by what means chiefly they may be confirmed, to wit, by continual prayer.

⁹ He sheweth what thing we ought chiefly desire, to wit, first of all that we may increase in the true knowledge of God, (so that we may be able to discern things that differ one from another) and also in charity, that even to the end we may give ourselves to good works indeed, to the glory of God by Jesus Christ.

¹¹ He preventeth the offence that might come by his persecution, whereby divers took occasion to disgrace his apostleship. To whom he answereth, that God hath blessed his imprisonment in such wise, that he is by that means become more famous, and the dignity of the gospel, by this occasion, is greatly enlarged, although not with like affection in all men, yet in deed.

¹² For Christ's sake.

¹³ In the emperor's court.

¹⁴ The gospel is called the word, to set forth the excellency of it.

¹⁵ Not with a pure mind, for otherwise their doctrine was pure.

¹⁶ He sheweth, by setting forth his own example, that the end of our afflictions is true joy, and that through the virtue of the Spirit of Christ, which he giveth to them that ask it.

¹⁷ Under a godly colour and shew: for they made Christ a colour for their ambition and envy.

¹⁸ We must continue even to the end, with great confidence, having nothing before our eyes but Christ's glory only, whether we live or die.

¹⁹ An example of a true shepherd, who maketh more account how he may profit his sheep, than he doth of any commodity of his own whatsoever.

²⁰ To live in this mortal body.

64.

A. D. 64. 27 Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ, that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your matters, that ye continue in one spirit, and in one mind, fighting together through the faith of the gospel.

28 And in nothing fear your adversaries, which is to them a token of perdition, and to you of salvation, and that of God.

29 For unto you it is given for Christ, that not only ye should believe in him, but also suffer for his sake, 30 Having the same fight which ye saw in me, and now hear to be in me.

C H A P. II.

1 He exhorteth them above all things to humility, 6 and that by the example of Christ. 19 He promiseth to send Timotheus shortly unto them, 26 and excuseth the long tarrying of Epaphroditus.

IF there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any compassion and mercy,

2 Fulfil my joy, that ye be like minded, having the same love, being of one accord, and of one judgment,

3 That nothing be done through contention or vain glory, but that in meekness of mind every man esteem other better than himself.

4 Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of other men.

5 Let the same mind be in you that was even in Christ Jesus,

6 Who being in the form of God, thought it no robbery to be equal with God:

* Having set down those things before in manner of a preface, he descendeth now to exhortations, warning them first of all, to consent both in doctrine and mind, and afterwards, that being thus knit together with those common bands, they continue through the strength of faith to bear all adversity in such sort, that they admit nothing unworthy the profession of the gospel.

o The word signifieth to stand fast, and it is proper to wrestlers, that stand fast and shrink not a foot.

2 We ought not to be discouraged, but rather encouraged by the persecutions which the enemies of the gospel imagine and practise against us: seeing that they are certain witnesses from God himself, both of our salvation, and of the destruction of the wicked.

3 He proveth that his saying, that persecution is a token of our salvation, because it is a gift of God to suffer for Christ, which gift he bestoweth upon his own, as he doth the gift of faith.

4 Now he sheweth for what purpose he made mention of his afflictions.

5 A most earnest request to remove all those things whereby that great and special consent and agreement is commonly broken, to wit, contention and pride, whereby it cometh to pass that they separate themselves one from another.

a Any Christian comfort.

b If any feeling of inward love.

c Like love.

6 He setteth before them a most perfect example of all modesty and sweet conversation, Christ Jesus, whom we ought to follow with all our might: who abased himself so far for our sakes, although he be above all, that he took upon him the form of a servant, to wit, our flesh, willingly subject to all infirmities, even to the death of the cross.

o Such as God himself is, and therefore God, for there is none in all parts like to God, but God himself.

c Christ that glorious and everlasting God knew that he might rightfully and lawfully not appear in the base flesh of man, but remain with majesty meet for God: yet he chose rather to debase himself.

f If the Son be equal with the Father, then is there of necessity an equality, which Arius that heretic denieth: and 7 But he made himself of no reputation, and took on him the form of a servant, and was made like unto men, and was found in shape as a man.

8 He humbled himself, and became obedient unto the death, even the death of the cross.

9 Wherefore God hath also highly exalted him, and given him a name above every name,

10 That at the name of Jesus should every knee bow, both of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth, 11 And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is the Lord, unto the glory of God the Father.

12 Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed me, not as in my presence only, but now much more in mine absence: so make an end of your own salvation with fear and trembling.

13 For it is God which worketh in you both the will and the deed, even of his good pleasure.

14 Do all things without murmuring and reasonings,

15 That ye may be blameless, and pure, and the sons of God, without rebuke in the midst of a naughty and crooked nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world,

16 Holding forth the word of life, that I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, neither have laboured in vain.

17 Yea and though I be offered up upon the sacrifice and service of your faith, I am glad and rejoice with you all.

18 For the same cause also be ye glad, and rejoice with me.

19 And if the Son be compared to the Father, then is there a distinction of persons, which Sabellius that heretic denieth.

5 He brought himself from all things, as it were to nothing.

b By taking our manhood upon him.

3 He sheweth the most glorious event of Christ's submission, to teach us that modesty is the true way to praise and glory.

i Dignity and renown, and the matter with it.

k All creatures shall at length be subject to Christ.

4 The conclusion: We must go on to salvation with humility and submission, by the way of our vocation.

m He is said to make an end of his salvation, which runneth in the race of righteousness.

5 A most sure and grounded argument against pride, for that we have nothing in us praiseworthy, but it cometh of the free gift of God, and is without us; for we have no ability or power, so much as to will well, (much less to do well) but only of the free mercy of God.

n Why then? we are not stocks, but yet we do not will well of nature, but only because God hath made of our naughty will a good will.

6 He describeth modesty by the contrary effects of pride, teaching us, that it is far both from all malicious and close or inward hatred, and also from open contentions and brawlings.

7 To be short, he requireth a life without fault, and pure, that being lightened with the word of God, they may shine in the darkness of this world.

o The gospel is called the word of life, because of the effects which it worketh.

8 Again he pricketh them forward, setting before them his true apostolic care that he had of them: comforting them moreover, to the end they should not be sorry for the greatness of his afflictions, no not although he should die to make perfect their oblation with his blood, as it were with a drink-offering.

p As if he said, I brought you Philippians to Christ, my desire is that you present yourselves a lively sacrifice to him, and then shall it not grieve me to be offered up as a drink-offering, to accomplish this your spiritual offering.

19 ⁹ And I trust in the Lord Jesus, to send ^{A. D. 64.} * Timothy shortly unto you, that I also may be of ^{1 Cor. 10.} ^{16. 1.} good comfort when I know your state.
 20 For I have no man like minded, who will faithfully care for your matters.
 21 * For ^{1 Cor. 10.} all seek their own, and not that which is Jesus Christ's.
 22 But ye know the proof of him, that as a son with the father, he hath served with me in the gospel:
 23 Him therefore I hope to send, as soon as I know how it will go with me.
 24 And I trust in the Lord, that I also myself shall come shortly.
 25 But I supposed it necessary to send my brother Epaphroditus unto you, my companion in labour, and fellow soldier, even your messenger, and he that ministered unto me such things as I wanted.
 26 For he longed after all you, and was full of heaviness, because ye had heard that he had been sick.
 27 And no doubt he was sick, very near unto death: but God had mercy on him, and not on him only, but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow:
 28 I sent him therefore the more diligently, that when ye should see him again, ye might rejoice, and I might be the less sorrowful.
 29 Receive him therefore in the Lord with all gladness, and make much of such:
 30 Because that for the ⁹ work of Christ he was near unto death, and regarded not his life, to fulfil that service which was lacking on your part toward me.

CHAP. III.

2 He refuteth the vain boastings of the false apostles, 7 and setteth Christ against them. 10 He setteth out the force and nature of faith, 15 that laying all things aside, they may be partakers of the cross of Christ, 18 the enemies whereof he noteth out.

Moreover, ¹ my brethren, rejoice in the Lord. ² It grieveth me not to write the ⁴ same things to you, and for you it is a sure thing. ^{A. D. 64.}

 2 Beware of dogs: beware of evil workers: beware of the ^b concision.
 3 ³ For we are the circumcision which worship God in the Spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence ^c in the flesh:
 4 ⁴ Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, much more I,
 5 Circumcised the eighth day, of the kindred of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin: * an Hebrew of the Hebrews, * by the law a Pharisee. ^{* 2 Cor. 11. 22.}
 6 Concerning zeal, I persecuted the church: touching the righteousness which is in the law, I was unrebukeable. ^{* Acts 23. 6.}
 7 But the things that were ^d vantage unto me, the same I counted loss for Christ's sake:
 8 Yea, doubtless I think ^e all things but loss for the excellent knowledge sake of Christ Jesus my Lord, for whom I have counted all things loss, and do judge them to be dung, that I might win Christ,
 9 And might be found in ⁸ him, that is, ^h not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, even the righteousness which is of God through faith,
 10 ⁵ That I may ¹ know him, and the virtue of his resurrection, and the ⁶ fellowship of his afflictions, and be made conformable unto his death;
 11 ¹ If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead:
 12 Not as though I had already attained to it, either were already perfect: but I follow, if that I may comprehend that for whose sake also I am ¹ comprehended of Christ Jesus.
 13 Brethren, I count not myself, that I have attained to it, but one thing I do: I forget that which is behind, and endeavour myself unto that which is before,
 14 And follow hard toward the mark, for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.
 15 Let

⁹ Moreover, he confirmeth their minds both by sending back Epaphroditus unto them, whose fidelity towards them, and great pains in helping him, he commendeth: and also promising to send Timothy shortly unto them, by whose presence they shall receive great commodity, and hoping also to come himself shortly unto them, if God will.

⁹ May be confirmed in my joy of mind.
¹ He calleth it here the work of Christ, to visit Christ, being poor, and in bands, in the person of Paul.
¹ A conclusion of those things which have been before said, to wit, that they go forward cheerfully in the Lord.
² A preface to the next admonition that followeth, to take good heed and beware of false apostles, which join circumcision with Christ, (that is to say, justification by works, with free justification by faith) and beat into men's heads the ceremonies which are abolished, for true exercises of godliness and charity. And he calleth them dogs, as prophane barkers, and evil workmen, because they neglected true works, and did not teach the true use of them. To be short, he calleth them Concision, because in urging circumcision, they cut off themselves and others from the church.
^a Which you have oftentimes heard of me.
^b He alludeth to circumcision, of the name whereof whilst they boasted, they cut asunder the church.
³ He sheweth that we ought to use true circumcision, to wit, the circumcision of the heart, that cutting off all wicked affections by the virtue of Christ, we may serve God in purity of life.
^c In outward things which pertain nothing to the soul.
^d He doubteth not to prefer himself even according to the flesh, before those perverse hot urgers of the law, that all men may know that he doth with good judgment of mind lightly esteem of all those outward things: for so much he lacketh nothing, which hath Christ, nay, the confidence of our works cannot stand with the free justification in Christ by faith.

^d Which I accounted for vantage.
^e He shutteth out all works, as well those that go before, as those that come after faith.
^f That in their place I might get Christ, and of a poor man become rich: so far off am I from losing any thing.
⁸ In Christ: for they that are found without Christ, are subject to condemnation.
^h That is to be in Christ, to be found not in a man's own righteousness, clothed with the righteousness of Christ imputed to him.
⁵ This is the end of righteousness by faith touching us; that by the virtue of his resurrection we may escape from death.
¹ That I may feel him indeed and have a trial of him.
⁶ The way to that eternal salvation is to follow Christ's steps, by afflictions and persecutions, until we come to Christ himself, who is our mark whereat we shoot, and receive that reward whereunto God calleth us in him. And the apostle setteth these true exercises of godliness, against those vain ceremonies of the law, wherein the false apostles put the sum of godliness.
^{*} To life everlasting, which followeth the resurrection of the saints.
¹ For we run not, but so far forth as we are laid hold on of Christ, that is, as God giveth us strength, and sheweth us the way.

A. D. 64. 15 Let us therefore as many as be perfect, be thus minded: and if ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even the same unto you.

16 Nevertheless, in that whereunto we are come, let us proceed by one rule, that we may mind one thing.

17 Brethren, be followers of me, and look on them which walk so, as ye have us for an example.

R. m. 16. 18 For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ:

19 Whose end is damnation, whose god is their belly, and whose glory is to their shame, which mind earthly things.

1 Cor. 1. 20 But our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Saviour, even the Lord Jesus Christ, 21 Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working, whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself.

CHAP. IV.

1 From particular exhortations, 4 he cometh to general. 10 He saith that he took such joy in their readiness to liberality, 12 that he will patiently bear the want.

Therefore, my brethren, beloved and longed for, my joy and my crown, so continue in the Lord, ye beloved.

2 I pray Euodias, and beseech Syntyche, that they be of one accord in the Lord.

3 Yea, and I beseech thee, faithful yoke-fellow; help those women which laboured with me in the gospel, with Clement also, and with other my fellow-labourers, whose names are in the book of life.

4 Rejoice in the Lord always, again I say, Rejoice.

The conclusion of his exhortation standing upon three members: The one is, that such as have profited in the truth of this doctrine, should continue in it. The second is, that if there be any which are yet ignorant, and understand not the things, and doubt of the abolishing of the law, they should cause no trouble, and should be gently borne withal, until they also be instructed of the Lord. The third is, that they esteem the false apostles by their fruits: wherein he doth not to set forth himself for an example.

He said before that he was not perfect. So that in this place he calleth them perfect, which have somewhat profited in the knowledge of Christ and the gospel, whom he setteth against the rude and ignorant, as he expoundeth himself in the next verse following.

He painteth out the false apostles in their colours, not upon malice or ambition, but with sorrow and tears, to wit, because that being enemies of the gospel (for that is joined with affliction) they regard nothing else, but the commodities of this life: that is to say, that flowing in peace and quietness, and all worldly pleasures, they may live in great estimation amongst men, whose miserable end he forewarned them of.

^a Reward.

^b Which they hunt after at men's hands.

He setteth against these fellows; true passions which neglect earthly things, and aspire to heaven only, where they know, that even in their bodies they shall be clothed with that eternal glory, by the virtue of God.

A rehearsal of the conclusion: That they manfully continue until they have gotten the victory, trusting to the Lord's strength.

^a Mine honour.

^b In that concord, whereof the Lord is the band.

He also calleth on some by name, partly because they needed private exhortation, and partly also to stir up others to be more prompt and ready.

God is said, after the manner of men, to have a book wherein the names of his elect are written, to whom he will give everlasting life, Ezekiel calleth it the writing of the house of Israel, and the secret of the Lord, chap. 13. 9.

He addeth particular exhortations: the first is, that the joy of the Philippians be not hindered by any afflictions that the wicked imagine and work against them.

5 Let your patient mind be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand.

6 Be nothing careful, but in all things let your requests be shewed unto God in prayer and supplication, with giving of thanks.

7 And the peace of God which passeth all understanding, shall preserve your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus.

8 Furthermore, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are worthy love, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, or if there be any praise, think of these things,

9 Which ye have both learned and received, and heard, and seen in me: those things do, and the gospel of peace shall be with you.

10 Now I rejoice also in the Lord greatly, that now at the last your care for me springeth afresh, wherein notwithstanding ye were careful, but yet lacked opportunity.

11 I speak not because of want: for I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content.

12 And I can be abased; and I can abound: every where in all things I am instructed, both to be full, and to be hungry, and to abound, and to have want.

13 I am able to do all things through the help of Christ, which strengtheneth me.

14 Notwithstanding ye have well done, that ye did communicate to mine affliction.

15 And ye Philippians, know also, that in the beginning of the gospel, when I departed from Macedonia, no church communicated with me, concerning the matter of giving and receiving, but ye only.

16 For

^a So is the joy of the Lord distinguished from our joy.

^b The second is, that taking all things in good part, they behave themselves moderately with all men.

^c Your quiet and settled mind.

^d The taking away an objection: We must not be disquieted through impatience, seeing that God is at hand to give us remedy in time against all our miseries.

^e The third is, that we be not too careful for any thing, but with sure confidence give God thanks, and crave of him whatsoever we have need of, that with a quiet conscience we may wholly and with all our hearts submit ourselves to him.

^f So David began very often with tears, but ended with thanksgiving.

^g That great quietness of mind which God only giveth in Christ.

^h He divideth the mind into the heart, that is, into that part which is the seat of the will and affections, and into the higher part whereby we understand and reason of matters.

ⁱ A general conclusion, that as they have been taught both in word and example, so they frame their lives to the rule of all holiness and righteousness.

^j Whatsoever things are such as do beautify and set you out with a holy gravity.

^k He witnesseth that their liberality was acceptable to him, wherewith they did help him in his extreme poverty: but yet so moderating his words, that he might declare himself void of all suspicion of dishonesty, and that he hath a mind contented both with prosperity and adversity, and to be short, that he reposeth himself in the only will of God.

^l As though I passed for my want.

^m He useth a general word, and yet he speaketh but of one kind of cross, which is poverty, for commonly poverty bringeth all kinds of discommodity with it.

ⁿ This is a metaphor taken from holy things, or sacrifices, for our life is like a sacrifice.

^o He witnesseth that he remembereth also their former benefits, and again putteth away sinister suspicion of immoderate desire, in that that he received nought of any else.

^p At the beginning, when I preached the gospel amongst you.

A. D. 64. 16 For even when I was in Thessalonica, ye sent once and afterward again for my necessity:

17 ¹⁰ Not that I desire a gift: but I desire the fruit which may further your reckoning:

18 Now I have received all, and have plenty: I was even filled, after that I had received of Epaphroditus that which came from you, an ^o odour that smelleth sweet, a sacrifice acceptable and pleasant to God.

19 And my God shall fulfil all your necessities, through his riches, with glory in Jesus Christ.

¹⁰ He witnesseth again, that he alloweth well of their benefit, not so much for his own sake, as for theirs, because they gave it not so much to him, as they offered it to God as a sacrifice, whereof the Lord himself will not be forget-

20 Unto God even our Father be praise for evermore. Amen. A. D. 64.

21 Salute all the saints in Christ Jesus. The brethren which are with me, greet you.

22 All the saints salute you; and most of all they which are of ^p Cæsar's household.

23 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

¶ Written to the Philippians from Rome, and sent by Epaphroditus.

The Epistle of PAUL to the COLOSSIANS.

C H A P. I.

A. D. 64.

1 After the salutation, 4 he praiseth them the more, to make them attentive unto him. 7 He reporteth the testimony of the doctrine which they heard of Epaphras. 13 He magnifieth God's grace towards them, 20 and sheweth that all the parts of our salvation consist in Christ alone.

PAUL an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the ^a will of God, and Timotheus our brother,

2 To them which are at ^b Colosse, saints, and faithful brethren in Christ: Grace be with you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 ¹ We give thanks to God even the ^c Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, alway praying for you.

4 Since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus, and of your love toward all saints.

5 For the ^d hope's sake which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof you have heard before by the word of truth, which is the gospel,

6 Which is come unto you, even as it is unto all the world, and is faithful, as it is also among you, from the day that ye heard and truly knew the grace of God,

7 As ye also learned of Epaphras our dea-

^a By the free bountifulness of God.

^b Colosse is situated in Phrygia, not far from Hierapolis and Laodicea, on that side that they bend toward Lycia and Pamphylia.

¹ He commendeth the doctrine that was delivered them by Epaphras; and their readiness in receiving it.

^c We cannot otherwise consider of God to our salvation, but as he is Christ's father, in whom we are adopted.

^d For the glory that is hoped for.

² He declareth his good will towards them, telling them that they must not still remain at one stay, but go on further both in the knowledge of the gospel, and also in the true use of it.

^e Your spiritual love, or your love which cometh from the Spirit.

^f God's will.

³ The gift of continuance is not of us, but it proceedeth from the virtue of God; which he doth freely give us.

⁴ It must not be unwilling, and as it were drawn out of us by force, but proceed from a merry and joyful mind.

⁵ Having ended the preface, he goeth to the matter itself, that is to say, to an excellent description (although it be but short) of whole christianity, which is fitly divided into three treatises: for first of all, he expoundeth the true doctrine according to the order of the causes, beginning from this verse to the twenty-first. And from thence he beginneth to fellow servant; which is for you a faithful minister of Christ:

8 ² Who hath also declared unto us your love in the ^e Spirit.

9 For this cause we also, since the day we heard of it, cease not to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be fulfilled with knowledge of ^f his will, in all wisdom, and spiritual understanding,

10 That ye might walk worthy of the Lord; and please him in all things, being fruitful in all good works; and increasing in the knowledge of God,

11 ³ Strengthened with all might through his glorious power, unto all patience, and long suffering with ^g joyfulness, 12 ⁴ Giving thanks unto the ^h Father; which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in ^h light.

13 Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom ⁱ of his dear Son, 14 ⁶ In whom we have redemption through his blood, that is, the forgiveness of sins.

15 ⁷ Who is the ^{*} image of the invisible God; ¹ the first begotten of every creature.

16 ^{*} For by him were all things created which are in heaven, and which are in earth, things visible and invisible: whether they be ^k thrones,

3 O or apply the same to the Colossians, with divers exhortations to the sixth verse of the second chapter. And last of all; in the third place, even to the third chapter, he refuteth the corruptions of true doctrine.

⁵ The efficient cause of our salvation is the only mercy of God the father, who maketh us meet to be partakers of eternal life, delivering us from the darkness wherein we were born, and bringing us to the light of the knowledge of the glory of his Son.

^h In that glorious and heavenly kingdom.

⁶ The matter itself of our salvation, is Christ the Son of God, who hath obtained remission of sins for us, by the offering up of himself.

⁷ A lively description of the person of Christ, whereby we understand, that in him only God sheweth himself to be seen: who was begotten of the Father before any thing was made, that is, from everlasting, by whom also all things that are made, were made without any exception; by whom also they do consist, and whose glory they serve.

¹ Begotten before any thing was made: and therefore the everlasting Son of the everlasting Father.

^{*} He setteth forth the angels with glorious names, that by the comparison of most excellent spirits, we may understand how far passing the excellency of Christ is, in whom only we have to content ourselves, and let go all angels.

of dominions, or principalities, or powers, all things were created by him, and for him.

17 And he is before all things, and in him all things consist.

18 And he is the head of the body of the church: he is the beginning, and the first begotten of the dead, that in all things he might have the pre-eminence.

19 For it pleased the Father, that in him should all fullness dwell.

20 And through peace made by that blood of that his cross, to reconcile to himself through him, through him, I say, all things, both which are in earth, and which are in heaven.

21 And you which were in times past strangers and enemies, because your minds were in evil works, hath he now also reconciled,

22 In that body of his flesh through death, to make you holy, and unblameable, and without fault in his sight,

23 If ye continue grounded and stablished in the faith, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, whereof ye have heard, and which hath been preached to every creature which is under the heaven, whereof I Paul am a minister.

24 Now rejoice I in my sufferings for you, and fulfil the rest of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church:

25 Whereof I am a minister, according to the dispensation of God which is given me unto you-ward, to fulfil the word of God,

26 Which is the mystery hid since the world began, and from all ages, but now is made manifest unto his saints,

27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of his glorious mystery among the Gentiles, which riches is Christ in you, the hope of glory.

28 Whom we preach, admonishing every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus.

29 Whereunto I also labour and strive, according to his working which worketh in me mightily.

CHAP. II.

He condemneth, as vain, whatsoever is without Christ, 11 intreating specially of circumcision, 16 of abstinence from meats, 18 and of worshiping of angels. 20 That we are delivered from the traditions of the law through Christ.

FOR I would ye knew what great fighting I have for your sakes, and for them of Laodicea, and for as many as have not seen my person in the flesh;

2 That their hearts might be comforted, and they knit together in love; and in all riches of the full assurance of understanding, to know the mystery of God, even the Father, and of Christ:

3 In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge.

4 And this I say, lest any man should beguile you with enticing words.

5 For though I be absent in the flesh, yet am I with you in the spirit, rejoicing and beholding your order, and your steadfast faith in Christ.

6 As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk in him,

7 Rooted and built in him, and stablished in the Having gloriously declared the excellent dignity of the person of Christ, he describeth his office and function, to wit, that he is that same to the church, that the head is to the body, that is to say, the prince and governor of it, and the very beginning of true life, as who rising first from death is the author of eternal life, so that he is above all, in whom only there is most plentiful abundance of all good things, which is poured out upon the church.

Who so rose again that he should die no more, and who raiseth others from death to life by his power.

Most plentiful abundance of all things pertaining to God.

Now he teacheth how Christ executed that office which his Father enjoined him, to wit, by suffering the death of the cross (which was joined with the curse of God) according to his decree, that by this sacrifice he might reconcile to his Father all men, as well them which believed in him to come, and were already under this hope gathered into heaven, as them which should upon the earth believe in him afterward. And thus is justification described of the apostle, which is one and the chiefest part of the benefit of Christ.

The whole church.

Sanctification is another work of God in us by Christ, in that that he restored us (which hated God extremely, and were wholly and willingly given to sin) to his gracious favour in such sort, that he therewithal purifieth us with his Holy Spirit, and consecrateth us to righteousness.

The Son.

In that fleshly body, to give us to understand that his body was not a fantastical body, but a true body.

The second treatise of this part of the epistle, wherein he exhorteth the Colossians not to suffer themselves by any means to be moved from this doctrine, shewing and declaring that there is no where any other true gospel.

To all men: whereby we learn that the gospel was not shut up within the corners of Judea alone.

He purchaseth authority to this doctrine by his apostleship, and taketh a most sure proof thereof, of his afflictions, which he suffereth for Christ's name, to instruct the churches with these examples of patience

For your profit and commodity.

The afflictions of the church are said to be Christ's afflictions, by reason of that fellowship and knitting together that the body and the head have, the one with the other: not that there is any more need to have the church redeemed, but that Christ sheweth his power in the daily weakness of his, and that for the comfort of the whole body.

He bringeth another proof of his apostleship, to wit, that God is the author of it, by whom also he was appointed peculiarly apostle of the Gentiles, to the end that by this means, that the same might be fulfilled by him, which the prophets foretold by the calling of the Gentiles.

Whom he chose to sanctify unto himself in Christ: moreover he saith, that the mystery of our redemption was hidden since the world began, except it were revealed unto a few, who also were taught it extraordinarily.

Thus Paul bridleth the curiosity of men.

He protesteth that he doth faithfully execute his apostleship in every place, bringing men unto Christ only through the Lord's plentiful blessing of his labours.

Perfect and sound wisdom, which is perfect in itself, and shall in the end make them perfect that follow it.

The taking away of an objection. In that that he visited not the Colossians, nor the Laodiceans, he did it not of any negligence, but is so much the more careful for them.

Me present in body.

He concludeth shortly the sum of the former doctrine, to wit, that the whole sum of true wisdom, and most secret knowledge of God, consisteth in Christ only, and that this is the use of it touching men, that they being knit together in love, rest themselves happily in the knowledge of so great a goodness, until they come fully to enjoy it.

Whom he never saw.

Of that understanding, which bringeth forth a certain and undoubted persuasion in our minds.

There is no true wisdom without Christ.

A passing over to the treatise following, against the corruptions of Christianity.

With a framed kind of talk made to persuade.

The manner of your ecclesiastical discipline.

Doctrine.

So then Christ hangeth not upon men's traditions.

the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving.

8 Beware lest there be any man that spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, through the traditions of men, according to the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.

9 For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.

10 And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power.

11 In whom also ye are circumcised with circumcision made without hands, by putting off the sinful body of the flesh through the circumcision of Christ;

12 In that ye are buried with him through baptism, in whom ye are also raised up together through the faith of the operation of God, which raised him from the dead.

13 And you which were dead in sins, and in the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, forgiving you all your trespasses;

He bringeth all corruptions to three kinds. The first is, that which ariseth of vain and curious speculations, and yet beareth a shew of a certain subtil wisdom.

This is a word of war, and it is as much as to drive or carry away a spoil or booty.

The second, which is manifestly superstitious and vain, and standeth only upon custom and feigned inspirations.

The third kind was of them which joined the rudiments of the world (that is to say, the ceremonies of the law) with the gospel.

Principles and rules, wherewith God ruled his church, as it were under a schoolmaster.

A general confutation of all corruption is this, that that must needs be a false religion, which addeth any thing to Christ.

A reason: Because only Christ, God and man, is most perfect, and passeth far above all things, so that whosoever hath him, may require nothing more.

By these words is shewed a distinction of the natures.

This word (dwelleth) noteth out unto us the joining together of those natures, so that of God and man is one Christ.

These words set down most perfect Godhead to be in Christ.

The knitting together of God and man is substantial and essential.

Now he dealeth precisely against the third kind, that is to say, against them which urged the Jewish religion and first of all, he denieth that we have need of the circumcision of the flesh, seeing that without it, we are circumcised within by the virtue of Christ.

These many words are used to shew what the old man is, whom Paul in other places calleth the body of sin.

Look Rom. 6. 4.

The taking away of an objection: We need not so much as the external sign which our fathers had, seeing that our baptism is a most effectual pledge and witness of that inward restoring and renewing.

So then all the force of the matter cometh not from the very deed done, that is to say, it is not the dipping of us into the water by a minister, that maketh us to be buried with Christ, as the Papists say, that even for the very sake we become verily Christians, but it cometh from the virtue of Christ, for the apostle addeth the resurrection of Christ, and faith.

One end of baptism is the death and burial of the old man, and that by the mighty power of God only, whose virtue we lay hold on by faith, in the death and resurrection of Christ.

Through faith which cometh from God.

Another end of baptism is, that we which were dead in sin, might obtain free remission of sins and eternal life through faith in Christ whodied for us.

A new argument which lieth in these few words, and it is thus: Uncircumcision was no hindrance to you, why you being justified in Christ should not obtain life, therefore you need not circumcision to the attainment of salvation.

He speaketh now more generally against the whole service of the law, and sheweth by two reasons, that it is abolished. First, to what purpose should he that hath obtained remission of all his sins in Christ, require those helps

14 And putting out the hand writing of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, he even took it out of the way, and fastened it upon the cross,

15 And hath spoiled the principalities and powers, and hath made a shew of them openly, and hath triumphed over them in the same cross.

16 Let no man therefore condemn you in meat or drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days,

17 Which are but a shadow of things to come: but the body is in Christ.

18 Let no man at his pleasure bear rule over you by humbleness of mind, and worshipping of angels, advancing himself in those things which he never saw, rashly puff up with his fleshly mind, 19 And holdeth not the head, whereof all the body furnished and knit together by joints and bands, increaseth with the increasing of God.

20 Wherefore if ye be dead with Christ from of the law? Secondly, because, that if a man do rightly consider those rites, he shall find that they were so many testimonies of our guiltiness, wherby we manifestly witnessed as it were by our own hand writing, that we deserved damnation. Therefore did Christ put out that hand writing by his coming, and fastening it to the cross, triumphed over all our enemies, were they never so mighty. Therefore to what end and purpose should we now use those ceremonies, as though we were still guilty of sin, and subject to the tyranny of our enemies?

Abolishing the rites and ceremonies.

Satan and his angels.

As a conqueror made he a shew of those captives, and put them to shame.

The cross was a chariot of triumph. No conqueror could have triumphed so gloriously in his chariot, as Christ did upon the cross.

The conclusion: wherein also he nameth certain kinds, as the difference of days, and meats, and proveth by a new argument, that we are not bound unto them: to wit, because those things were shadows of Christ to come, but we possess him now exhibited unto us.

The body, as a thing of substance and pith, he setteth against shadows.

He disputeth against the first kind of corruptions, and setteth down the worshipping of angels for an example: which kind of false religion he confutech, first, this way: because that they which bring in such a worship, attribute that unto themselves which is proper only to God, to wit, authority to bind men's consciences with religion; although they seem to bring in these words by humbleness of mind.

By foolish humbleness of mind: for otherwise humbleness is a virtue. For these angel-worshippers blamed such of pride as would go straight to God; and use no other under means beside Christ.

Secondly, because they rashly rest upon them for oracles those things which they neither saw nor heard, but devised of themselves.

Thirdly, because these things have no other ground whereupon they are built, but only the opinion of men, which please themselves without all measure in their own devices.

Without reason.

The fourth argument, which is of great weight: because they spoil Christ of his dignity, who only is sufficient both to nourish and also to increase his whole body.

Christ.

With the increasing which cometh from God.

Now last of all, he fighteth against the second kind of corruptions, that is to say, against mere superstitions, invented of men, which partly deceive the simplicity of some with their craftiness, and partly with very foolish superstitions, and to be laughed at: as when godliness, remission of sins, or any such like virtue, is put in some certain kind of meat, and such like things, which the inventors of such rites themselves understand not, because indeed it is not. And he useth an argument of comparison. If by the death of Christ, who established a new covenant with his blood, you be delivered from those external rites wherewith it pleased the Lord to prepare the world, as it were by certain rudiments;

21 ²¹ As touch not, taste not, handle not,

22 ²² Which all perish with the using, ²² and are after the commandments and doctrines of men:

23 ²³ Which things have indeed a shew of wisdom, in ²³ voluntary religion and humbleness of mind, and in ²³ not sparing the body, which are things of no value, for they pertain to the filling of the flesh.

CHAP. III.

1 Against earthly exercises, which the false apostles urged, 2 be setteth heavenly: 5 and beginneth with the mortifying of the flesh, 8 whence be draweth particular exhortations, 18 and particular duties which depend on each man's calling.

IF ye then ¹ be ¹ risen with Christ, ¹ seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God.

2 Set your affections on things which are above, and not on things which are on the ² earth.

3 ³ For ye are dead, ³ and your life is hid with Christ in God.

4 When Christ which is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory.

rudiments, to that full knowledge of true religion, why would ye be burdened with traditions, I wot not what, as though ye were citizens of this world, that is to say, as though ye depended upon this life, and earthly things? Now this is the cause why before verse 8. he followed another order than he doth in the confutation: because he sheweth there by what degrees false religions came into the world, to wit, beginning first by curious speculations of the wise, after which in process of time succeeded gross superstition; against which mischiefs, the Lord set at length that service of the law, which some abused in like sort: but in the confutation he began with the abolishing of the law service, that he might shew by comparison, that those false services ought much more to be taken away.

^e As though your felicity stood in these earthly things, and the kingdom of God were not rather spiritual.

²¹ An imitation in the person of these superstitious men, rightly expressing their nature and use of speech.

²² Another argument: The spiritual and inward kingdom of God cannot consist in these outward things, and such as perish with the using.

²³ The third argument: Because God is not the author of these traditions, and therefore they did not bind the consciences.

^f Which seem indeed to be some exquisite thing, and so wise devices, as though they came from heaven.

^g Hence sprang the works of supererogation, as the Papists term them, that is to say, needless works, as though men performed more than is commanded them: which was the beginning and the very ground whereon monks merits were brought in.

^h A lively description of monkery.

ⁱ Seeing they stand in meat and drink, wherein the kingdom of God doth not stand.

^j Another part of this epistle, wherein he taketh occasion by reason of those vain exercises, to shew the duty of a Christian life: which is an ordinary thing with him, after he hath once set down the doctrine itself.

^k Our renewing or new birth, which is wrought in us by being partakers of the resurrection of Christ, is the fountain of all holiness, out of which sundry arms or rivers do afterwards flow.

^l For if we be partakers of Christ, we are carried as it were into another life, where we shall neither need meat nor drink, for we shall be like unto the angels.

5 ⁵ Mortify therefore your ⁵ members which are on the earth, fornication, uncleanness, the inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness which is idolatry:

6 For the which things take the wrath of God ⁶ cometh on the children of disobedience.

7 Wherein ye also walked once, when ye lived in them.

8 But now put ye away even all these things, wrath, anger, maliciousness, cursed speaking, filthy speaking, out of your mouth.

9 Lye not one to another, ⁹ seeing that ye have put off the old man with his works,

10 And have put on the new, ¹⁰ which is renewed in ¹⁰ knowledge after the image of him that created him, 11 ¹¹ Where is neither Grecian nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond, free: But Christ is all, and in all things.

12 Now therefore as the elect of God, holy and beloved, ¹² put on the ¹² bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering:

13 Forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel to another: even as Christ forgave, even so do ye.

14 And above all these things put on love, which is the ¹⁴ bond of perfectness.

15 And

¹ The end and mark which all the duties of Christian life shoot at, is to enter into the kingdom of heaven, and to give ourselves to those things which lead us thither, that is, to true godliness, and not to these outward and corporal things.

² So he calleth that shew of religion which he spake of in the former chapter.

^e A reason taken of the efficient causes, and others: you are dead as touching the flesh, that is, touching the old nature which seeketh after all transitory things; and on the other side, you have begun to live according to the Spirit, therefore give yourselves to spiritual and heavenly, and not to carnal and earthly things.

²¹ The taking away of an objection: while we are yet in his world, we are subject to many miseries of this life, so that the life that is in us, is as it were hidden: yet notwithstanding we have the beginnings of life and glory, the accomplishment whereof which lieth now in Christ's and in God's hand, shall be assuredly and manifestly performed in that glorious coming of the Lord.

²³ Let not your dead nature be any more effectual in you, but let your living nature be effectual. Now the force of nature is known by the motions. Therefore let the affections of the world die in you, and let the contrary motions which are spiritual, live. And he reckoneth up a great long scroll of vices, and their contrary virtues.

²⁴ The motions and lusts that are in us, are in this place very properly called members, because that the reason and will of man corrupted, doth use them as the body doth his members.

^h Useth to come.

⁷ A definition of our new birth taken of the parts thereof, which are the putting off of the old man, that is to say, of the wickedness which is in us by nature, and the restoring, and repairing of the new man, that is to say, of pureness, which is given us by grace: but both of them are but begun in us in this present life, and by certain degrees finished, the one dying in us by little and little, and the other coming to the perfection of another life, by little and little.

¹⁰ Newness of life consisteth in knowledge which transformeth man to the image of God his maker, that is to say, to the sincerity and pureness of the whole soul.

¹¹ He speaketh of an effectual knowledge.

¹² He telleth them again that the gospel doth not respect those external things, but true justification and sanctification in Christ only, which have many fruits, as he reckoneth them up here: But commendeth two things especially, to wit, godly concord and continual study of God's word.

¹⁴ So put on, that ye never put off.

¹⁵ Those most tender affections of exceeding compassion.

CHAP. I.

1 He therefore beginneth with thanksgiving, 4 to put them in mind that whatsoever was praise-worthy in them, 11 it came of God's goodness: 8 and that they are ensamples unto others.

PAUL, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Thessalonians, which is in God our Father, and in the Lord Jesus Christ: Grace be with you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

2 We give God thanks always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers,

3 Without ceasing, remembering your effectual faith, and diligent love, and the patience of your hope in our Lord Jesus Christ, in the sight of God, even our Father:

4 Knowing, beloved brethren, that ye are elect of God.

5 For our gospel was not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance, as ye know after what manner we were among you for your sakes.

6 And ye became followers of us, and of the Lord, and received the word in much affliction, with joy of the Holy Ghost,

7 So that ye were as ensamples to all that believe in Macedonia, and in Achaia:

8 For from you sounded out the word of the Lord, not in Macedonia and Achaia only: but your faith also which is toward God, spread abroad in all quarters, that we need not to speak any thing:

9 For they themselves shew of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God,

10 And to look for his Son from heaven,

^a An example of right Christian rejoicing, whereby also we learn, that such as have great gifts in them, are in two sorts bridled, to wit, if they consider that they have received all from God, and that continuance must be desired at his hands, whereunto also the whole epistle exhorteth the Thessalonians.

^b He commendeth them for three special gifts, effectual faith, continual love, and patient hope: to the end they might be ashamed, being indued with such excellent gifts, not to continue in God's election.

^c Word for word, that your election is of God.

^d Another reason, why they ought in no wise to start back, but continue to the end, because they cannot doubt of this doctrine which hath been so many ways confirmed unto them even from heaven, as they themselves did well know.

^e Paul sheweth by two things that there followed very great fruit of his preaching, to wit, by these gifts of the Holy Ghost, and that certain assurance which was thoroughly settled in their minds, as appeared by their willing bearing of the cross.

^f Another reason, because even that day they embraced the gospel with great cheerfulness, insomuch that they were an example to all their neighbours: so that it should be more shame to them to faint in the mid race.

^g With joy which cometh from the Holy Ghost.

^h All the believers.

ⁱ It is no true conversion to forsake idols, unless a man therewithal worship the true and living God, in Christ the only Redeemer.

CHAP. II.

1 He declareth how faithfully he preached the gospel unto them, 5 seeking neither gain, 6 nor praise of men: 10 and he proveth the same by their own testimony: 14 that they did courageously bear persecutions of their countrymen: 17 that he desireth very much to see them.

FOR ye yourselves know, brethren, that our entrance in unto you was not in vain,

2 But even after that we had suffered before, and were shamefully entreated at Philippi (as ye know) we were bold in our God, to speak unto you the gospel of God, with much striving. ^{Acts 16. 12.}

3 For our exhortation was not by deceit, nor by uncleanness, nor by guile.

4 But as we were allowed of God, that the gospel should be committed unto us, so we speak, not as they that please men, but God, which approveth our hearts.

5 Neither yet did we ever use flattering words, as ye know, nor coloured covetousness, God is record.

6 Neither sought we praise of men, neither of you, nor of others, when we might have been chargeable, as the apostles of Christ.

7 But we were gentle among you, even as a nurse cherisheth her children.

8 Thus being affectioned toward you, our good will was to have dealt unto you, not the gospel of God only, but also our own souls, because ye were dear unto us.

9 For ye remember, brethren, our labour and ^{Acts 20. 34. 1 Cor. 4. 12. 2 Thess. 3. 8.}

wrath.

^a That which he touched before shortly concerning his apostleship, he handleth now more at large, and to that end and purpose which we spake of.

^b The virtues of a true pastor are, freely without fear to preach the gospel, even in the midst of dangers.

^c Through God's gracious help.

^d To teach pure doctrine faithfully and with a pure heart.

^e By any wicked and naughty kind of dealing.

^f To approve his conscience to God, being free from all flattery and covetousness.

^g Seeing there is this difference between the judgments of God, and the judgments of men, that when men chuse, they respect the qualities of those things which stand before them, but God findeth the reason of his counsel only in himself, it followeth, that seeing we are not able to think a good thought, that whomsoever he first chuseth to those callings, he maketh them able, and doth not find them able. And therefore in that we are allowed of God, it hangeth upon his mercy.

^h Which liketh and alloweth of them.

ⁱ To submit himself even to the basest, to win them, and to eschew all pride.

^k When I might lawfully have lived upon the expences of the church.

^l We were not rough, but easy and gentle as a nurse, that is neither ambitious nor covetous, but taketh all pains as patiently as if she were a mother.

^m To have the flock that is committed unto him in more estimation than his own life.

ⁿ To depart with his own right rather than to be chargeable to his sheep.

A. D. 54. and travail: for we laboured day and night, because we would not be chargeable unto any of you, and preached unto you the gospel of God.

10 ⁸ Ye are witnesses, and God also, how honestly and justly, and unblameably we behaved ourselves among you that believe:

11 ⁹ As ye know how that we exhorted you, and comforted, and besought every one of you, (as a father his children)

¹⁰ That ye ^{*} would walk worthy of God, who hath called you unto his kingdom and glory.

13 ¹¹ For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, that when ye received the word of God, which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is indeed the word of God, which also worketh in you that believe.

14 ¹² For, brethren, ye are become followers of the churches of God, which in Judea are in ⁸ Christ Jesus, because ye have also suffered the same things of your own ^h countrymen, even as they have of the Jews,

15 ¹³ Who both killed the Lord Jesus and their own prophets, and have persecuted us away, ¹⁴ and God they please not, and are contrary to ¹ all men,

16 And forbid us to preach unto the Gentiles, that they might be saved, to ^k fulfil their sins always: for the ¹ wrath of God is come on them to the utmost.

17 ¹⁵ Forasmuch, brethren, as we ^m were kept from you for a season, concerning fight, but not in the heart, we enforced the more to see your face with great desire.

18 Therefore we would have come unto you (I Paul, at least once or twice) but Satan hindered us.

19 For what is our hope or joy, or crown of rejoicing? are not even you in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?

20 Yes, ye are our glory and joy.

⁸ To excel others in example of a godly life.

⁹ To exhort and comfort with a fatherly mind and affection.

¹⁰ To exhort all men diligently and earnestly to lead a godly life.

¹¹ Having approved his ministry, he commendeth again (to that end and purpose I spake of) the cheerfulness of the Thessalonians, which was answerable to his diligence in preaching, and their manly patience.

¹² He confirmeth them in their afflictions which they suffered of their own people, because they were afflicted of their own countrymen: which came as well (saith he) to the churches of the Jews, as to them: and therefore they ought to take it in good part.

¹³ Which Christ hath gathered together.

^h Even of them which were of the same country, and the same town that you are of.

¹⁴ He preventeth an offence which might be taken, for that the Jews especially, above all others, persecuted the gospel. That is no new thing, saith he, seeing they slew Christ himself, and his prophets, and have banished me also.

¹⁵ He foretelleth the utter destruction of the Jews, lest any man should be moved by their rebellion.

¹ For the Jews would neither enter into the kingdom of God themselves, nor suffer others to enter in.

^k Until that wickedness of theirs which they have by inheritance, as it were, of their fathers, be grown so great, that the measure of their iniquity being filled, God may come forth to wrath.

¹ The judgment of God being angry, which indeed appeared shortly after in the destruction of the city of Jeru-

C H A P. III.

A. D. 54.

¹ To shew his affection toward them, he sendeth Timothy unto them: ⁶ he is so moved by the report of their prosperous state, ⁹ that he cannot give sufficient thanks, ¹¹ and therefore he breaketh out into prayer.

Wherefore since we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to remain at Athens alone.

² ^{*} And have sent Timotheus ^b our brother [†] Acts 16. i. and minister of God, and our labour-fellow in the gospel of Christ, to stablish you, and to comfort you touching your faith,

³ That no man should be moved with these afflictions: ¹ for ye yourselves know, that we are appointed thereunto.

⁴ For verily when we were with you, we told you before that we should suffer tribulations, even as it came to pass, and ye know it.

⁵ Even for this cause, when I could no longer forbear, I sent him that I might know of your faith, lest the tempter had tempted you in any sort, and that our labour had been in vain.

⁶ ² But now lately when Timotheus came from you unto us, and brought us good tidings of your faith and love, and that ye have good remembrance of us always, desiring to see us, as we also do you;

⁷ Therefore, brethren, we had consolation in you, in all our affliction and necessity through your faith.

⁸ For now are we ² alive, if ye stand fast in the Lord.

⁹ For what thanks can we recompense to God again for you, for all the joy wherewith we rejoice for your sakes before our God, ¹⁰ Night and day, ^{*} praying exceedingly that we might see your face; and might ^b accomplish [†] Rom. 1. 10. and 15. 23. that which is lacking in your faith.

¹¹ Now God himself, even our Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ; guide our journey unto you.

¹² ³ And the Lord increase you, and make you falem, whither many resorted even out of divers provinces when it was besieged.

¹⁵ He meeteth with an objection, why he came not to them straightways being in so great misery: I desired oftentimes (saith he) and it lay not in me, but Satan hindered my endeavours, and therefore I sent Timothy my faithful companion unto you, because you are most dear to me.

^m Were kept asunder from you, and as it were orphans. ¹ The will of God, who calleth his, on this condition, to bring them to glory by affliction, is a most sure remedy against all afflictions.

² Because they have hitherto gone so well forward, he exhorteth them again to make an end of the rest of the journey, seeing that therein also they shall do him, their apostle, a great pleasure.

² For now you cannot otherwise think me safe and in good case, unless you go forward in religion and faith.

^b Paul was constrained, through the importunate dealing of the enemies, to leave the building which he had scarce begun: and for that cause he had left Silas and Timotheus in Macedonia, and when Timothy came to Athens to him, he sent him back again straightway. So that he desireth to see the Thessalonians, that he may thoroughly accomplish their faith and religion, that was as yet imperfect.

³ Another part of the epistle, wherein he speaketh of the duties of a Christian life. And he sheweth that the perfection of a Christian life consisteth in two things, to wit, in charity toward all men, and inward purity of the heart, the accomplishment whereof notwithstanding is deferred to the next coming of Christ, who will then perfect his work by the same grace wherewith he began it in us.

A. D. you abound in love one toward another, and 54 toward all men, even as we do toward you, 13 To make your hearts stable and un-blameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints.

C H A P. IV.

1 He exhorteth them 3 to holiness, 9 and brotherly love. 13 He forbiddeth them to sorrow after the manner of infidels. 15 He setteth out the history of our resurrection.

AND furthermore we beseech you, brethren, and exhort you in the Lord Jesus, that ye increase more and more, as ye have received of us, how ye ought to walk and to please God.

2 For ye know what commandments we gave you by the Lord Jesus.

3 For this is the will of God, even your sanctification, and that ye should abstain from fornication,

4 That every one of you should know how to possess his vessel in holiness and honour,

5 And not in the lust of concupiscence, even as the Gentiles which know not God:

6 That no man oppress or defraud his brother in any matter: for the Lord is avenger of all such things, as we also have told you be-foretime and testified.

7 For God hath not called unto unclea-nesses, but unto holiness.

8 He therefore that despiseth these things, despiseth not man, but God, who hath even given you his holy Spirit.

9 But as touching brotherly love, ye need not that I write unto you: for ye are taught of God to love one another.

10 Yea, and that thing verily ye do unto all the brethren, which are throughout all Macedonia: but we beseech you, brethren, that ye increase more and more:

11 And that ye study to be quiet, and to

¹ Divers exhortations, the ground whereof is this, to be mindful of those things which they have heard of the apostle.

² That ye labour to excel more and more, and daily pass yourselves.

³ This is the sum of those things which he delivered them, to dedicate themselves wholly to God. And he con-demneth plainly all filthiness through lust, because it is altogether contrary to the will of God.

⁴ Look John 17. 17.

⁵ Another reason, because it defileth the body.

⁶ The third, because the saints are discerned from them which know not God by honesty and purity.

⁷ Secondly, he reprehendeth all violent oppression, and immoderate desire; and sheweth most severely, as the prophet of God, that God will revenge such wickedness.

⁸ The commandments which I gave you.

⁹ Thirdly, he requireth a ready mind to all manner of loving kindness, and exhorteth them to profit more and more in that virtue.

¹⁰ He condemneth unquiet brains, and such as are curious in matters which appertain not unto them.

¹¹ He rebuketh idleness and slothfulness, which vices whosoever are given unto, fall into other wickedness, to the great offence of the church.

¹² The third part of the epistle, which is interlaced among the former exhortations (which he returneth unto afterward) wherein he speaketh of the mourning for the dead, and of the manner of the resurrection, and of the latter day.

¹³ We must take heed that we do not immoderately bewail the dead, that is, as they use to do which think that they are utterly perished.

¹⁴ A confirmation: for death is but a sleep of the body
 (for he speaketh of the faithful) until the Lord cometh.

¹⁵ A reason of the confirmation: for seeing that the head is risen, the members also shall rise, and that by the virtue meddle with your own business; ⁸ and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you. A. D. 51.

12 That ye may behave yourselves honestly toward them that are without, and that nothing be lacking unto you.

13 ¶ I would not, brethren, have you ignorant ¹⁰ concerning them ¹¹ which are asleep, that ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope.

14 ¹² For if we believe that Jesus is dead, and is risen, even so them which sleep in ^d Jesus, will God ^e bring with him.

15 ¹³ For this say we unto you by the ^f word of the Lord, that ² we which live, and are remaining in the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which sleep:

16 For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a ^h shout, and with the voice of the archangel, and ^{*} with the trumpet of God: and ¹ the dead in Christ shall rise first: ^{1 Cor. 15. 52.}

17 Then shall we which live and remain, be caught up with them also in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord.

18 Wherefore, comfort yourselves one another with these words.

C H A P. V.

1 Condemning the curious searching for the seasons of Christ coming, 6 he warneth them to be ready daily to receive him: 11 And so giveth them sundry good lessons.

BUT of the times and ² seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you:

2 For ye yourselves know perfectly, that the day of the Lord shall come, even as a thief in the night.

3 For when they shall say, Peace and safety, then shall come upon them sudden destruction, as the travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape.

4 But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that of God.

¹ They die in Christ, which continue in faith whereby they are grafted into Christ, even to the last gasp.

² Will call their bodies out of their graves, and join their souls to them again.

³ The manner of the resurrection shall be thus: The bodies of the dead shall be as it were raised out of sleep at the sound of the trumpet of God: Christ himself shall descend from heaven. The saints (for he speaketh properly of them) which shall then be found alive, together with the dead which shall rise, shall be taken up into the clouds to meet the Lord, and shall be in perpetual glory with him.

⁴ In the name of the Lord, as though he himself spake unto you.

⁵ He speaketh of these things, as though he should believe of them whom the Lord shall find alive at his coming, because that time is uncertain: and therefore every one of us ought to be in such a readiness, as if the Lord were coming at every moment.

⁶ The word which the apostle useth here, signifieth properly that encouragement which mainers use one to another, when they altogether with one shout put forth their oars and row together.

⁷ Suddenly, and in the twinkling of an eye.

⁸ The day that God hath appointed for this judgment, we know not: but this is sure, that it shall come upon men when they look for nothing less.

⁹ Look Acts 1. 7.

¹⁰ Returning to exhortations, he warneth us which are lightened with the knowledge of God, that it is our duty not to live securely in deliciousness, lest we be suddenly taken in a dead sleep in pleasures: but contrariwise to have an eye to the Lord, and not suffer ourselves to be oppressed with the cares of this world, for that is meet for the darkness of the night, and this for the light.

A. D. 64. that day shall come on you, as it were a thief.

5 Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, neither of darkness.

6 Therefore let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch and be sober.

7 For they that sleep, sleep in the night: and they that be drunken, are drunken in the night.

8 ³ But let us which are of the day, be sober, ⁴ putting on the breastplate of faith and love, and ⁵ the hope of salvation for an helmet:

9 ⁶ For God hath not appointed us unto wrath, but to obtain salvation by the means of our Lord Jesus Christ,

10 ⁷ Which died for us, that whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him.

11 ⁸ Wherefore exhort one another, and edify one another, even as ye do.

12 ⁹ Now we beseech you, brethren, that ye ¹⁰ acknowledge them which labour among you, and are over you in the ¹¹ Lord, and admonish you, 13 That ye have them in singular love for ¹² their works sake. ¹³ Be at peace among yourselves.

14 ¹⁴ We desire you, brethren, admonish them that are ¹⁵ out of order: comfort the feeble-minded: bear with the weak: be patient toward all men.

³ We must fight with faith and hope, much less ought we lie carelessly snoring.

⁴ He pricketh us forwards by setting most certain hope of victory before us.

⁵ The death of Christ is a pledge of our victory, for therefore he died, that we might be partakers of his life or virtue, yea even whilst we live here.

⁶ We must not only watch ourselves, but we are also bound to stir up and confirm one another.

⁷ We must have great consideration of them which are appointed to the ministry of the word, and government of the church by God, and do their duty.

⁸ That you acknowledge and take them for such as they are, that is to say, men worthy to be greatly accounted of among you.

⁹ In those things which pertain to God's service: so is the ecclesiastical function distinguished from civil authority, and true shepherds from wolves.

¹⁰ So then, where this cause ceaseth, there must the honour cease.

¹¹ The maintenance of mutual concord, is especially to be looked unto.

¹² We must have consideration of every man, and as the disease is, so must the remedy be used.

¹³ That keep not their rank or standing.

¹⁴ Charity ought not to be overcome with any injuries.

¹⁵ A quiet and appeased mind, is nourished with continual prayers, respecting the will of God.

15 ¹⁰ * See that none recompense evil for A. D. evil unto any man: but ever follow that which is good, both toward yourselves, and toward all men. 64. ¹¹ Prov. 17: 13. and 20. 22. Mat. 5. 39. Rom. 12. 17. 1 Pet. 3. 9. * Luke 18. 1.

16 ¹¹ Rejoice evermore.

17 * Pray continually.

18 In all things, give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus toward you.

19 ¹² Quench not the Spirit.

20 Despise not ¹³ prophesying.

21 Try all things, and keep that which is good.

22 ¹³ Abstain from all ¹⁴ appearance of evil.

23 Now the very God of peace ¹⁵ sanctify you throughout: and I pray God that your whole spirit and soul and body may be kept blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

24 ¹⁴ * ¹⁵ Faithful is he which calleth you, ¹⁶ which will also ¹⁷ do it. * 1 Cor. 1. 9.

25 ¹⁵ Brethren, pray for us.

26 Greet all the brethren with an holy kiss.

27 I charge you in the Lord, that this epistle be read unto all the brethren the saints.

28 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.

¶ The first epistle unto the Thessalonians, written from Athens.

¹ An acceptable thing to God, and such as he liketh well of.

¹² The sparks of the Spirit of God that are kindled in us, are nourished with daily hearing the word of God: but true doctrine must be diligently distinguished from false.

¹³ The expounding of the word of God.

¹⁴ A general conclusion, that we waiting for the coming of Christ, do give ourselves to pureness, both in mind, will and body, through the grace and strength of the Spirit of God.

¹⁵ Whatsoever hath but the very shew of evil, abstain from it.

¹⁶ Separate you from the world, and make you holy to himself through his Spirit in Christ, in whom only you shall attain unto that true peace.

¹⁷ The good will and power of God is a sure confirmation against all difficulties, whereof we have a sure witness in our vocation.

¹⁸ Always one and ever like himself, who performeth indeed whatsoever he promiseth: and an effectual calling is nothing else but a right declaring and true setting forth of God's will: and therefore the salvation of the elect is safe and sure.

¹⁹ Who will also make you perfect.

²⁰ The last part of the epistle, wherein with most weighty charge he commendeth both himself and this epistle unto them.

The Second Epistle of PAUL to the THESSALONIANS.

C H A P. I.

A. D. 54. 3. He commendeth the increase of faith, and charity, 4 and the patience of the Thessalonians: 6 and describing God's vengeance against such as oppress the godly, 10 he teacheth the godly to wait for the last judgment.

A. D. 54. PAUL and Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Thessalonians, which is in God our Father, and in the Lord Jesus Christ:

2 Grace be with you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 Q

3 We

A. D. 3¹ We ought to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is meet, because that your faith^a groweth exceedingly, and the love of every one of you toward another, aboundeth,

4 So that we ourselves rejoice of you in the churches of God, because of your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye suffer:

5¹ Which is a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for the which ye also suffer.

6³ For it is a righteous thing with God, to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you.

7 And to you, which are troubled, rest⁴ with us, when the Lord shall shew himself from heaven with his mighty angels,

8 In flaming fire, rendering vengeance unto them⁵ that do not know God, and which obey not unto the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ,

9 Which shall be punished with everlasting perdition from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power,

10 When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be made marvellous in all them that believe (because our testimony toward you was believed) in that day.

11² Wherefore, we also pray always for you, that our God may make you worthy of^b this calling, and fulfil^c all the good pleasure of his goodness, and the^d work of faith with power,

12 That the name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be glorified in you, and ye in him, according to the grace of our God, and of the Lord Jesus Christ. A. D. 54.

C H A P. II.

2 He sheweth that the day of the Lord shall not come, till there be a departure from the faith, 3 and that Antichrist be revealed, 8 whose destruction he setteth out: 15 and thereupon exhorteth to constancy.

NOW¹ we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our² assembling unto him, 2² That ye be not suddenly moved from your mind, nor troubled, neither by^b spirit, nor by^c word, nor by^d letter, as it were from us, as though the day of Christ were at hand.

3 Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a departing first, and that^e that man of sin be disclosed, even the son of perdition,

4 Which is an adversary, and^f exalteth himself against all that is called God, or that is worshipped: so that he doth sit as God in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God.

5⁵ Remember ye not, that when I was yet with you, I told you these things?

6 And now ye know⁶ what withholdeth, that he might be revealed in his time.

7⁶ For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he which now^h withholdeth, shall let till he be taken out of the way.

8⁸ And then shallⁱ that wicked man be revealed,

¹ The first part of the epistle, wherein he rejoiceth that through the grace of God, they have manfully sustained all the assaults of their enemies, wherein he confirmeth them: moreover shewing with what gifts they must chiefly fight, to wit, with faith and charity, which must daily increase.

² That whereas it grew up before, it doth also receive some increase every day, more and more.

³ He openeth the fountain of all true comfort, to wit, that in afflictions which we suffer of the wicked for righteousness sake, we may behold as it were in a glass the testimony of that judgment to come, and the end thereof most acceptable to us, and most sharp to his enemies.

⁴ A proof: God is just, therefore he will worthily punish the unjust, and will do away the miseries of his people.

⁵ He confirmeth them also by the way, by this means, that the condition both of this present state and the state to come, is common to him with them.

⁶ A most glorious description of the second coming of Christ, to be set against all the miseries of the godly, and the triumphs of the wicked.

⁷ There is no knowledge of God unto salvation, without the gospel of Christ.

⁸ The children of God shall be counted by the faith which they have in the gospel, which is preached unto them by the apostles.

⁹ Seeing that we have the mark set before us, it remaineth that we go unto it. And we go to it, by certain degrees of causes: first by the free love and good pleasure of God by virtue whereof all other inferior causes work: from thence proceedeth the free calling to Christ, and from calling, faith, whereupon followeth both the glorifying of Christ in us, and us in Christ.

¹⁰ By (calling) he meaneth not the very act of calling, but that self-same thing whereunto we are called, which is the glory of that heavenly kingdom.

¹¹ Which he determined long since, only upon his gracious and merciful goodness towards you.

¹² So then, faith is an excellent work of God in us: and we see here plainly that the apostle leaveth nothing to free-will, to make it check-mate with God's working therein, as the Papists dream.

¹³ The second part of the epistle, containing an excellent prophecy of the state of the church, which shall be from the apostles time unto the latter day of judgment.

¹⁴ If we think earnestly upon that unmeasurable glory, which we shall be partakers of with Christ, it will be an excellent remedy for us against wavering and impatience, so that neither the glittering of the world shall allure us, nor the dreadful sight of the cross dismay us.

² We must take heed of false prophets, especially in this matter, which go about to deceive, and that for the most part, after three sorts: for either they brag of feigned prophetic revelations, or they bring conjectures and reasons of their own, or use counterfeit writings.

³ By dreams and fables, which men pretend to be spiritual revelations.

⁴ Either by word of mouth, or by books written.

⁵ Either by forged letter, or falsely glossed upon.

⁶ The apostle foretelleth that before the coming of the Lord, there shall be a throne set up clean contrary to Christ's glory, wherein that wicked man shall sit, and transfer all things that appertain to God, to himself, and many shall fall away from God to him.

⁷ By speaking of one, he pointeth out the body of the tyrannous and persecuting church.

⁹ He foretelleth that Antichrist (that is, whosoever he be that shall occupy that seat that falleth away from God) shall not reign without the church, but in the very bosom of the church.

¹⁰ This prophecy was continually declared to the ancient church, but it was neglected of them that followed.

¹¹ What hindereth and stayeth.

¹² Even in the apostle's time the first foundations of the apostatic all-seat were laid, but yet so that they deceived men.

¹³ He foretelleth that when the empire of Rome is taken away, the seat that falleth away from God shall succeed and hold his place, as the old writers, Tertullian, Chrysostom and Hierom, do expound it.

¹⁴ He which is now in authority, and ruleth all, to wit, the Roman empire.

¹⁵ That wickedness shall at length be detected by the word of the Lord, and shall utterly be abolished by Christ's coming.

¹⁶ Word for word, that lawless fellow, that is to say, he that shall tread God's law clean under foot.

vealed, * whom the Lord shall consume with the Spirit of his mouth, and shall abolish with the brightness of his coming:

9 ⁹ Even him whose coming is by the effectual working of Satan, with all power, and signs, and ¹¹ lying wonders,

10 And in all deceivableness of unrighteousness among them that perish, because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved.

11 And therefore God shall send them ⁿ strong delusion, that they should believe lyes, 12 That all they might be damned which believed not the truth, but ^o had pleasure in unrighteousness.

13 ¹⁰ But we ought to give thanks alway to God for you, brethren, beloved of the Lord, because that God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation, through ^p sanctification of the Spirit, and the ^q faith of truth, 14 Whereunto he called you by our ^r gospel, to obtain the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

15 ¹¹ Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and keep the instructions, which ye have been taught, either by word, or by our epistle.

16 Now the same Jesus Christ our Lord, and our God, even the Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, 17 Comfort your hearts, and stablish you in every word and good work.

CHAP. III.

1 He desireth them to further the preaching of the gospel with their prayers, 6 and to withdraw themselves from those, who through idleness 11 and curiosity, pervert good order: whom he excludeth from the company of the faithful.

Furthermore, ¹ brethren, * pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have free passage and be glorified, even as it is with you,

* Bring to nought.
¹ With his word, for the true ministers of the word are as a mouth, whereby the Lord breatheth out that mighty and everlasting word, which shall break his enemies in funder, as it were an iron rod.
⁹ He foretelleth that Satan will bestow all his might and power, and use all false miracles that he can to establish that seat, and that with great success, because the wickedness of the world doth so deserve it: yet so, that only the unfaithful shall perish through his deceit.
^m Which are partly false, and partly wrought to establish a fallhood.
ⁿ A most mighty working to deceive them.
^o They liked lyes so well, that they had pleasure in them, which is the greatest madness that may be.
¹⁰ The elect shall stand stedfast and safe from all their mischiefs. Now election is known by these testimonies: faith is gathered by sanctification: faith, by that we accord unto the truth: truth, by calling, through the preaching of the gospel: from whence we come at length to a certain hope of glorification.

¹¹ The conclusion: It remaineth then that we continue in the doctrine which was delivered unto us by the mouth and writings of the apostles, through that free good will of God, which comforteth us with an invincible hope, and also in all godliness our whole life long.
¹ He addeth now consequently according to his manner, divers admonitions: the first of them is, that they make prayers for the increase and free passage of the gospel, and for the safety of the faithful ministers of the same.
² Which have no care of their duty.
³ It is no marvel that the gospel is hated of so many, seeing that faith is a rare gift of God. Notwithstanding the church shall never be destroyed by the multitude of the

2 And that we may be delivered from ^a unreasonable and evil men: ² for all men have not faith.

3 But the Lord is faithful, which will stablish you, and keep you from ^b evil.

4 ³ And we are persuaded of you through the Lord, that ye both do, and will do the things which we warn you of.

5 ⁴ And the Lord guide your hearts to the love of God, and the waiting for of Christ.

6 ⁵ We warn you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh inordinately, and not after the instruction which he received of us:

7 ⁶ For ye yourselves know, * how ye ought to follow us: * for we behaved not ourselves inordinately among you,

8 Neither took we bread of any man for nought: but we wrought with labour and travail night and day, because we would not be chargeable to any of you.

9 Not because we have not authority, but that we might make ourselves an ensample unto you to follow us.

10 For even when we were with you, this we warned you of, that if there were any which would not work, that he should ^c not eat.

11 For we hear, that there are some which walk among ⁷ you inordinately, and work not at all, ³ but are busy bodies.

12 ⁹ Therefore them that are such, we warn and exhort by our Lord Jesus Christ, that they work with quietness, and eat their own bread.

13 ¹⁰ And ye, brethren, be not weary in well doing.

14 ¹¹ If any man obey not this our saying in this wicked, because it is grounded and stayed upon the faithful promise of God.

^b From Satan's snares, or from evil.
³ The second admonition is, that they follow always the doctrine of the apostles as a rule for th^r life.
⁴ Thirdly, he diligently and earnestly admonisheth them of two things which are given us by the only grace of God, to wit, of charity, and a watchful mind to the coming of Christ.
⁵ Fourthly, he saith, that idle and lazy persons ought not to be relieved of the church, nay, that they are not to be suffered.
⁶ Lest he might seem to deal hardly with them, he setteth forth himself for an example, who besides his travail in preaching, laboured with his hands, which he saith he was not simply bound to do.
^c What shall we do then with those idle belied monks, and sacrificing priests? A monk (saith Socrates, book 8. of the Tripartite history) which worketh not with his hands; is like a thief.
⁷ How great a fault idleness is, he declareth by that, that God created no man in vain, or to no purpose, neither is there any to whom he hath not allotted, as it were, a certain standing and room. Whereupon it followeth, that the order which God hath appointed, is troubled by the idle, yea broken, which is great sin and wickedness.
⁸ He reprehendeth a vice, which is joined with the former, whereupon follow an infinite sort of mischiefs: to wit, that there are none more busy in other men's matters, than they which neglect their own.
⁹ The Lord commandeth and the apostles pray in the name of Christ, first, that no man be idle, and next, that every man do quietly and carefully see to do his duty in that office and calling wherein the Lord hath placed him.
¹⁰ We must take heed, that some men's unworthiness cause us not to be slacker in well doing.

The First Epistle of PAUL to TIMOTHY.

CHAP. I.

A. D. 65. Setting forth a perfect pattern of a true pastor, whose office especially consisteth in teaching, 4 he warneth him that vain questions set apart, he teach those things, 5 which further charity and faith: 12 and that his authority be not condemned, 14 he sheweth what an one he is made through the grace of God.

PAUL an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the commandment of God our Saviour, and of our Lord Jesus Christ our hope,

2 Unto Timothy my natural son in the faith: Grace, mercy, and peace from God our Father, and from Christ Jesus our Lord.

3 As I besought thee to abide still in Ephesus, when I departed into Macedonia, so do, that thou mayest warn some, that they teach none other doctrine, 4 Neither that they give heed to fables and genealogies which are endless, which breed questions rather than godly edifying which is by faith.

5 For the end of the commandment is love out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned:

¹ First of all, he avoucheth his own free vocation and also Timothy's, that the one might be confirmed by the other: and therewithal he declareth the sum of the apostolical doctrine, to wit, the mercy of God in Christ Jesus, apprehended by faith, the end whereof is yet hoped for.

² There is as much difference betwixt mercy and grace, as is betwixt the effect and the cause: for grace is that free good will of God, whereby he chose us in Christ, and mercy is that free justification which followeth it.

⁴ The doctrine is corrupted not only by false opinions, but also by vain and curious speculations: the declaration and utterance whereof can nothing help our faith.

⁵ He noteth out one kind of vain questions.

⁶ The second admonition is, that the right use and practice of the doctrine must be joined with the doctrine. And that consisteth in pure charity, and a good conscience, and true faith.

⁷ Of the law.

⁸ There is neither love without a good conscience, nor a good conscience without faith, nor faith without the word of God.

⁹ That which he spoke before generally of vain and curious controversies, he applieth to them which, pretending zeal of the law, dwelled upon outward things, and never made an end of babbling of foolish trifles.

¹⁰ There are none more unlearned, and more impudent

6 From the which things some have erred, and have turned unto vain-jangling. A. D. 65.

7 They would be doctors of the law, and yet understand not what they speak, neither whereof they affirm.

8 And we know, that the law is good, if a man use it lawfully.

9 Knowing this, that the law is not given unto a righteous man, but unto the lawless and disobedient, to the ungodly and to sinners, to the unholy and to the prophane, to murderers of fathers and mothers, to man-slayers,

10 To whoremongers, to buggers, to men-stealers, to liars, to the perjured, and if there be any other thing that is contrary to wholesome doctrine, 11 Which is according to the glorious gospel of the blessed God, which is committed unto me.

12 Therefore I thank him which hath made me strong, that is, Christ Jesus our Lord: for he counted me faithful, and put me in his service:

13 When before I was a blasphemer, and a persecutor, in usurping the name of holiness, than foolish sophistical babblers.

⁷ The taking away of an objection: He condemneth not the law, but requireth the right use and practice of it.

⁸ He indeed escapeth the curse of the law, and therefore doth not abhor it, who fleeing and eschewing those things which the law condemneth, giveth himself with all his heart, to observe it: and not he that maketh a vain babbling of outward and curious matters.

⁹ And such a one is he, whom the Lord hath endued with true doctrine, and with the Holy Ghost.

¹⁰ To such as make an art, as it were, of sinning.

¹¹ He setteth against fond and vain babbling, not only the law, but the gospel also, which condemneth not, but greatly commendeth the wholesome doctrine contained in the commandments of God, and therefore he calleth it a glorious gospel, and the gospel of the blessed God, the virtue whereof these babblers knew not.

¹² A reason why neither any other gospel is to be taught than he hath taught in the church, neither after any other sort, because there is no other gospel beside that which God committed to him.

¹³ He maintaineth of necessity his apostleship against some that did carp at his former life, debasing himself even to hell, to advance Christ's only mercy, wherewith he abolished all those his former doings.

¹⁴ Which gave me strength, not only when I had no will to do well, but also when I was wholly given to evil.

¹⁵ These are the preparative works which Paul braggeth of.

A. D. 65. persecutor, and an oppressor: but I was received to mercy: for I did it ignorantly through unbelief.

14 But the grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant¹² with faith and love, which is in Christ Jesus.

15¹³ This is a true saying, and by all means worthy to be received, that^{*} Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief.

16 Notwithstanding for this cause was I received to mercy, that Jesus Christ should first shew on me all long suffering, unto the ensample of them which shall in time to come believe in him unto eternal life.

17¹⁴ Now unto the King everlasting, immortal, invincible, unto God^k only wise, be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen.

18¹⁵ This commandment commit I unto thee, son Timothy, according to the prophecies which went before upon thee, that thou^l by them shouldest fight a good fight.

19 Having faith^m and a good conscience, which some have put away, and as concerning faith have made shipwreck.

20 Of whom is Hymeneus, and Alexander,ⁿ whom I have^o delivered unto Satan, that they might^o learn not to blaspheme.

C H A P. II.

1 He exhorteth them to make public prayers for all men, 4, 5 and that for two causes: 8 And therefore he willet all men in all places to pray. 9 And declareth in what apparel, 11 and with what ¹² He proveth this change by the effects, for that, that he that was a profane man, is become a believer: and he that did most outrageously persecute Christ, burneth now in love toward him.

¹³ He turneth the reproach of the adversaries upon their own head, shewing that this singular example of the goodness of God, redoundeth to the commodity of the whole church.

^l Worthy to be believed.

¹⁴ He breaketh out into an exclamation, even for very zeal of mind, for that he cannot satisfy himself in amplifying the grace of God.

^k Look John 17. 3.

¹⁵ The conclusion of both the former fatherly admonitions, to wit, that Timothy striving manfully against all lets, being called to the ministry according to many prophecies which went before of him, should both maintain the doctrine which he had received, and keep also a good conscience.

^l By the help of them.

^m Wholsome and sound doctrine.

¹⁶ Whosoever keep not a good conscience, do lose also by little and little the gift of understanding: which he proveth by two most lamentable examples.

¹⁷ Such as fall from God and his religion, are not to be suffered in the church, but rather ought to be excommunicated.

ⁿ Cast out of the church, and so delivered them to Satan.

^o That by their smart they might learn what it is to blaspheme.

¹ Having dispatched those things which pertain to doctrine, he speaketh now in the second place of the other part of the ministry of the word, to wit, of public prayers. And first of all, declaring this question, for whom we ought to pray: he teacheth that we must pray for all men, and especially for all manner of magistrates, which thing was at that time somewhat doubted of, seeing that kings, yea, and the most part of magistrates, were at that time enemies of the church.

² An argument taken of the end: to wit, because that magistrates are appointed to this end, that men might peaceably and quietly live in all godliness and honesty, and therefore must we commend them especially to God, that they may faithfully execute so necessary an office.

^{*} This word containeth all kind of duty, which is to be modesty, women ought, to behave, themselves in holy assemblies. A. D. 65.

1 Exhort therefore, that first of all supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men,

2 For kings, and for all that are in authority, that we may lead a quiet and a peaceable life, in all godliness and honesty:

3 For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour, 4 Who will that all men shall be saved, and come unto the acknowledging of the truth.

5 For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and man, which is the man Christ Jesus, 6 Who gave himself a ransom for all men, to be that testimony in due time.

7 Whereunto I am ordained a preacher and an apostle (I speak the truth in Christ, and lye not) even a teacher of the Gentiles in faith and verity.

8 I will therefore that the men pray, every where lifting up pure hands without wrath, or doubting.

9 Likewise also the women, that they array themselves in comely apparel, with shamefacedness and modesty, not with broided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly apparel;

10 But (as becometh women that profess the fear of God) with good works.

11 Let the women learn in silence with all subjection.

12 I permit not a woman to teach, neither to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence:

3 R

13 For

used amongst men in all their affairs.

³ Another argument, why churches or congregations ought to pray for all men, without any difference of nation, kind, age, or order: to wit, because the Lord by calling of all sorts, yea sometimes those that are greatest enemies to the gospel, will have his church gathered together after this sort, and therefore prayers to be made for all.

⁴ God should not else be manifested to be the only God of all men, unless he should shew his goodness in saving of all sorts of men: neither should Christ be seen to be the only Mediator between God and all sorts of men, by having taken upon him that nature of man which is common to all men, unless he had satisfied for all sorts of men, and made intercession for all.

^b Christ Jesus which was made man.

⁵ A confirmation, because that even to the Gentiles is the secret of salvation now opened and made manifest, the apostle himself being appointed properly to this office, which he doth faithfully and sincerely execute.

⁶ He hath spoken of the persons for whom we must pray: and now he teacheth that the difference of places is taken away: for in times past, one only nation, and in one certain place, came together to public service: but now churches or congregations are gathered together every where (orderly and decently), and men come together to serve God publicly with common prayer; neither must we strive for the nation, or for the purification of the body, or for the place, but for the mind, to have it clean from all offence, and full of sure trust and confidence.

^d He putteth the sign for the thing itself, the lifting up of hands for the calling upon God.

^e Without those griefs and offences of the mind, which hinder us from calling upon God with a good conscience.

^f Doubting, which is against faith, James i. 6.

⁷ Thirdly, he appointeth women to learn in the public assemblies with silence and modesty, being comely apparelled, without any riot or excess in their apparel.

⁸ The first argument, why it is not lawful for women to teach in the congregation, because by this means, they should be placed above men, for they should be their masters: which is against God's ordinance.

14 ² And Adam was not ² deceived, but the woman was deceived, and was in the transgression.

15 ¹¹ Notwithstanding, through bearing of children she shall be saved, if they continue in faith, and love, and holiness with modesty.

C H A P. III.

He setteth out bishops, 8 and Christian deacons, with their wives, 12 children and family: 15 he calleth the church the house of God.

THIS ¹ is a true saying, ² If any man ² desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a worthy work.

2 ² A bishop therefore must be unreprouvable, the husband of ² one wife, watching, temperate, modest, harbourous, apt to teach,

3 Not ⁶ given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre, but gentle, no fighter, not covetous,

4 One that can rule his own house honestly, having children under obedience with all honesty:

5 For if any cannot rule his own house, how shall he care for the church of God?

6 He may not be a young scholar, lest he being puffed up fall into the ² condemnation of the devil.

7 He must also be well reported of, even of them, which are without, lest he fall into rebuke, and the snare of the devil.

8 ² Likewise must ² deacons be grave, not double tongued, not given unto much wine, neither to filthy lucre:

² He proveth this ordinance of God, whereby the woman is subject to man, first by that that God made the woman after man, for man's sake.

¹² Then, because that after sin, God enjoined the woman this punishment, for that the man was deceived by her.

² Adam was deceived, but through his wife's means, and therefore she is worthy for this cause subject to her husband, and ought to be.

¹¹ He addeth a comfort by the way, that their subjection hindereth not us that women may be saved as well as men if they behave themselves in those burdens of marriage holily and modestly, with faith and charity.

² Having dispatched the treatise, as well of doctrine and of the manner of handling of it, as also of public prayer, he now in the third place cometh to the persons themselves, speaking first of pastors, and afterward of deacons, and he useth a preface, that the church may know that there be certain and sure rules.

² A bishoprick, or the ministry of the word, is not an idle dignity, but a work, and that an excellent work, and therefore a bishop must be furnished with many virtues both at home and abroad. Wherefore it is requisite, before he be chosen, to examine well his learning, his gifts, and abilities, and his life.

² He speaketh not here of ambitious seeking, than that which there cannot be a worse fault in the church, but generally of the mind and disposition of man, framed and disposed to help and edify the church of God, when and wheresoever it shall please the Lord.

² Therefore he that shutteth out married men from the office of bishops, only because they are married, is Antichrist.

² A common tippler, and one that will fit by it.

² Lest by reason that he is advanced to that degree, he take occasion to be proud, which will undo him, and so he fall into the same condemnation that the devil himself is fallen into.

Likewise the deacons must first be proved, that there may be a good trial of their honesty, truth, sobriety, mind void of covetousness, that they are well instructed in the doctrine of faith, and, to be short, of their good conscience and integrity.

² These are they that had to see to the poor.

² The doctrine of the gospel, which is a mystery in-

9 ² Having the ¹ mystery of the faith in pure conscience.

10 And let them first be proved: then let them minister, if they be found blameless.

11 ² Likewise their wives must be honest, not evil speakers, but sober, and faithful in all things.

12 ² Let the deacons be the husbands of one wife, and such as can rule their children well, and their own households.

13 For they that have ministered well, get themselves a good ² degree, and ² great liberty in the faith which is in Christ Jesus.

14 ⁶ These things write I unto thee, trusting to come very shortly unto thee.

15 But if I tarry long, that thou mayest yet now how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the ⁷ house of God, which is the church of the living God, the ¹ pillar and ground of truth, 16 ² And without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness, which is, God is manifested in the flesh, ² justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, and received up in glory.

C H A P. IV.

1 He condemneth as well false doctrines 3 of marriage and the choice of meats, 7 as also prophane fables: 8 and commendeth the godly exercise, 13 and the daily reading of the scripture.

NOW the ¹ Spirit speaketh evidently, that in the latter times some shall depart from the ² faith, and shall give heed unto spirits of error, and doctrines of devils:

2 ² Which speak lyes through ² hypocrisy, and have need: for flesh and blood do not reveal it.

² Regard must be had also to the pastors and deacons wives.

² They that have more wives than one at one time, must neither be called to be ministers, nor to be deacons.

² Honour and estimation.

² Bold and assured confidence without fear.

⁶ Paul purposing to add many peculiar things pertaining to the daily office of a pastor, speaketh first a word or two concerning his coming to Timothy, that he should be so much the more careful, lest at his coming he might be reproved of negligence.

⁷ The pastor hath always to think, how that he is occupied in the house of the living God, wherein the treasure of the truth is kept

¹ To wit, in respect of men: for the church resteth upon that corner stone, Christ, and is the preserver of the truth, not the mother.

² There is nothing more excellent than this truth, whereof the church is the keeper and preserver here among men, the ministry of the word being appointed to that end and purpose: for it teacheth us the greatest matters that may be thought of, to wit, that God is become visible in the person of Christ, by taking our nature upon him, whose majesty, notwithstanding in so great weakness, was manifested many ways, in omuch that the sight of it pierced the very angels, and to conclude, he being preached unto the Gentiles, was received of them, and is now placed above in glory unpeakable.

² The power of the Godhead shewed itself so marvellously in that weak flesh of Christ, that though he were a weak man, yet all the world knoweth he was and is God.

¹ He setteth against that true doctrine, false opinions, which he foretelleth, that certain which shall fall away from God and his religion, shall bring in by the suggestion of Satan, and so that a great number shall give ear to them.

² From the true doctrine of God.

² Although heretics counterfeit holiness never so much, yet have they no conscience.

² For they will, as it were, practise the art of disguised persons and players, that we may not think they will lie lurking in some one corner, or keep any resemblance of shamedness.

A. D. 65. have their ^c consciences burned with an-hot iron, 3 ¹ Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats ⁴ which God hath created ⁵ to be received ⁶ with giving thanks of them which believe and know the truth.

4 ⁷ For every creature of God is good, and nothing ought to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving.

5 ⁸ For it is ^d sanctified by the ^e word of God, and prayer.

6 ⁹ If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things, thou shalt be a good minister of Jesus Christ, which hast been nourished up in the words of faith, and of good doctrine, which thou hast continually ^f followed.

7 ¹⁰ But cast away prophane and old wives fables, ¹¹ and exercise thyself unto ^g godlinefs.

8 ¹² For bodily exercise profiteth little: but godliness is profitable unto all things, which hath the promise of the life present, and of that that is to come.

9 ¹³ This is a true saying, and by all means worthy to be received.

10 For therefore we labour and are rebuked, because we trust in the living God, which is the Saviour of all men, specially of those that believe.

11 These things warn and teach.

12 ¹⁴ Let no man despise thy youth, but be unto them that believe, an ensample, in word, in conversation, in love, in spirit, in faith and in pureness.

13 ¹⁵ Till I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, and to doctrine.

^c Whose conscience waxed so hard, that there grew an hard fleshiness over it, and so became to have a canker in it, and now at length required of very necessity to be burned with a hot iron.

³ He setteth down two kinds of this false doctrine, to wit, the law of sole life, and difference of meats.

⁴ He proveth that he justly called such doctrines devilish, first, because the teachers of them make laws of things which are not their own: for have they created the meats?

⁵ Secondly, because they overthrow, with their decrees, the end whereof they were created of God, to wit, that we should use them.

⁶ Thirdly, for that by this means they rob God of his glory, who will be honoured in the use of them. And herewithal, the apostle declaereth, that we must use the liberality of God, soberly, and with a good conscience.

⁷ He setteth an apostolical rule, for taking away the difference of meats, against that false doctrine.

⁸ He useth God's benefits rightly, which acknowledgeth the giver of them by his word, and calleth upon him.

⁴ It is so made pure and holy in respect of us, so that we may use it with a good conscience, as received at the Lord's hands.

^e We confess and acknowledge that God is the maker and giver of those creatures which we use. Secondly, that we are of the number of those, who through Christ's benefit have recovered that right over all creatures, which Adam lost by his fall. Thirdly, by our prayers we crave of the Lord that we may use those meats with a good conscience, which we receive at his hands. Fourthly, we make an end of our eating and drinking with thanksgiving and prayer:
 and so are our meats sanctified to us.

⁹ The conclusion, with an exhortation to Timothy, to propound these things diligently to the churches, which he had sucked of the apostle, even in a manner from the teat.

^f Never departing from the side of it.

¹⁰ He setteth again true doctrine, not only against that false and apostolical doctrine, but also against all vain and curious subtilties,

¹¹ It is not only requisite that the minister of the word be sound in doctrine, but also that his life be godly and religious.

^g In the true serving of God.

¹² Godliness consisteth in spiritual exercise, and not in outward austerities of life, which though it be something to be accounted of, if it be rightly used, yet it is in 14. Despise not the gift that is in thee, which A. D. 65.

 was given thee by prophecy with the laying on of the hands of the company of the eldership.

15 These things exercise, and give thyself unto them, that it may be seen how thou profit-est among all men.

16 Take heed unto thyself, and unto learning: continue therein: for in doing this thou shalt both ^h save thyself, and them that hear thee.

C H A P. V.

1 Having set down a manner how to rebuke all degrees, 5 he intreateth of widows, who then were chosen for the service of the church: 17 then he cometh to elders, 23 and speaketh somewhat touching the health of the body.

REBUKE ¹ not an elder, but exhort him as a father, and the younger men as brethren,

2 The elder women as mothers, the younger as sisters, with all pureness.

3 ² Honour widows, which are widows indeed.

4 ³ But if any widow have children, or nephews, let them learn first to shew godliness ⁴ toward their own house, and ⁵ to recompense their kindred: ⁶ for that is an honest thing, and acceptable before God.

5 ⁷ And she that is a widow indeed, and left alone, trusteth in God, and continueth in sup-plications and prayers night and day.

6 ⁸ But she that liveth in pleasure, is dead while she liveth.

7 These

no wise comparable with godliness, for it profiteth not of itself, but through the benefit of another; but this hath the promise both of the life present, and of that that is to come.

¹³ He goeth a little from his matter, and sheweth that they which give themselves to godliness, although they are afflicted and reproached, are notwithstanding not to be accounted miserable, as other men are, because they are not afflicted for that cause that other men are, and the end of them both is far different one from the other. For how can God forsake his, which is bountiful, even toward his enemies? And he willeth that this doctrine be well beaten into their heads.

¹⁴ Now he returneth to that exhortation, shewing which are the true virtues of a pastor, whereby he may come to be revered, although he be but young, to wit, such speech and life as are witnesses of charity, zeal, faith, and purity:
 but here is no mention made of the crozier staff, ring, clock, and such other foolish and childish toys.

¹⁵ The private exercise of pastors is continual reading of the scriptures, whereout they may draw water of whol-some doctrine and exhortation, both to themselves and to others.

^h Faith is by hearing, and hearing by preaching: and therefore the ministers of the word are so said to save themselves and others, for that in them the Lord hath put the word of reconciliation.

¹ Of keeping measure in private reprehensions, according to the degrees of ages and kinds.

² The apostle giveth these rules touching the care of widows.

^a Have care of those widows which have need of help.
³ Widows children and nephews must take care for their parents according to their ability.

⁴ The first reason, because that that which they bestow upon theirs, they bestow it upon themselves.

⁵ Another, because nature itself teacheth us to recompense our parents.

⁶ The third: because this dutifulness pleaseth God.

⁷ The second rule. Let the church have care of such as are widows indeed, that is to say, such as are poor and destitute of help of their own friends, and live godly and religiously.

⁸ The third rule: Let widows that live in pleasure, and neglect the care of their own family, be holden and accounted as fallers away from God and his religion, and worse than very infidels.

A. D. 65. 7 These things therefore warn them of, that they may be blameless.

8 If there be any that provideth not for his own, and namely for them of his household, he denieth the faith, and is worse than an infidel.

9 Let not a widow be taken into the number under threescore years old, that hath been the wife of one husband,

10 And well reported of for good works: if she have nourished her children, if she have lodged the strangers, if she have washed the saints feet, if she have ministered unto them which were in adversity, if she were continually given unto every good work.

11 But refuse the younger widows: for when they have begun to wax wanton against Christ, they will marry, 12 Having damnation, because they have broken the first faith.

13 And likewise also being idle, they learn to go about from house to house: yea, they are not only idle, but also prattlers and busy-bodies, speaking things which are not comely.

14 I will therefore that the younger women marry, and bear children, and govern the house, and give none occasion to the adversary to speak evil.

15 For certain are already turned back after Satan.

16 If any faithful man or faithful woman have widows, let them minister unto them, and let not the church be charged, that there may be sufficient for them that are widows in deed.

17 ¶ The elders that rule well, let them be had in double honour, especially they which labour in the word and doctrine.

18 For the scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn: and, The labourer is worthy of his wages.

19 Against an elder receive none accusation, but under two or three witnesses

20 Them that sin, rebuke openly, that the rest also may fear.

21 ¶ I charge thee before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the elect angels, that thou observe these things, without preferring one before another, and do nothing partially.

22 Lay hands suddenly on no man, neither be partaker of other men's sins: keep thyself pure.

23 Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake, and thine often infirmities.

24 Some men's sins are open beforehand, and go before unto judgment: but some men's follow after.

25 Likewise also the good works are manifest beforehand, and they that are otherwise, cannot be hid.

C H A P. VI.

1 He sheweth the duty of servants: 10 and what a mischievous evil covetousness is: 13 and having spoken somewhat of rich men, he once again forbiddeth Timothy 20 to cumber himself with vain babblings.

LET as many servants as are under the yoke, count their masters worthy of all honour, that the name of God, and his doctrine, be not evil spoken of.

2 And they which have believing masters let them not despise them, because they are brethren: but rather do service, because they are faithful, and beloved, and partakers of the benefit. These things teach and exhort.

3 If

9 The fourth rule; Let none under threescore years old, be taken into the number of widows, to serve the congregations or churches, and such as are free from all reproach of unchastity, and are well reported of, for their diligence, charity, and integrity.

10 That hath had no more husbands, but one at one time.

11 This is spoken in respect of the manners of those countries.

12 The first reason, why younger widows are not to be admitted to this ministry, to wit, because for the lightness of their age, they will at length shake off the burden that Christ had laid upon them, and think rather upon marrying again: and so will forsake the ministry whereunto they had bound themselves.

13 Take them not into the college of widows.

14 Another reason: because they are for the most part prattlers and busy-bodies and gadders up and down, neglecting their charge and duty.

15 The fifth rule: Let younger widows marry, and govern their houses godly.

16 The sixth rule: Let the faithful help their widows at their own charges as much as they can, and let not the congregation be burdened with these expences.

17 Now he giveth rules, and sheweth how he ought to behave himself with the elders, that is to say, with the pastors, and such as have the governance in the discipline of the church, which is president of their company. The first rule: Let the church or congregation see unto this especially, as God himself hath commanded that the elders should do their duty well, be honestly maintained.

18 We must be more careful for them than for the rest.

19 There were two kinds of elders, the one attended upon the government only, and looked to the manners of the congregation, the other did beside that attend upon preaching and prayers, to and for the congregation.

20 The second rule: Let no accusation be admitted against an elder, but under two or three witnesses.

21 The third rule: Let the elders so convicted, be rebuked openly, that they may be an example to others.

22 The fourth rule: Let sincerity be used without any prejudice or respect of persons in ecclesiastical proceedings (especially against the elders) because God himself is there present, and the Lord Jesus Christ with a multitude of angels.

23 The fifth rule: Let the minister lay hands suddenly on no man. Let him not be faulty herein, either by favouring any man's folly, or perverse affection: it ought be done otherwise than well of his fellows, let him keep his conscience pure.

24 As much as in thee lieth, do not rashly admit any whatsoever to any ecclesiastical function.

25 The sixth rule: Let the elders have indifferent consideration of their health, in the manner of their diet.

26 Because hypocrites sometimes creep into the ministry, although there be never so great diligence used, the apostle willeth the pastors not to be troubled therefore, or slack any whit of their diligence in trying and examining, because the Lord hath appointed a time to discover the faults of such men, and it is our parts to take heed that we offend not therein.

27 Another comfort belonging to them, which sometimes are slandered and misreported of.

28 He addeth also rules for the servants duty towards their masters: whereupon no doubt there were many questions then moved by them, which took occasion by the gospel to trouble the common state. And this is the first rule: Let servants that are come to the faith, and have infidels to their masters, serve them notwithstanding with great fidelity.

29 The reason, lest God should seem by the doctrine of the gospel to stir up men to rebellion and all wickedness.

30 The second rule: Let not servants that are come to the faith, and have also masters of the same profession and religion, abuse the name of brotherhood, but let them so much the rather obey them.

31 Let this be sufficient, that as touching those things which pertain to everlasting life, they are partakers of the same good will and love of God, as their masters themselves are.

32 A general conclusion, that these things ought not only to be simply taught, but must with exhortations be diligently beaten into their heads.

4 He is put up and knoweth nothing, but doteth about questions and ^b strife of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmising,

5 Froward ^c disputations of men of corrupt minds and destitute of the truth, which think that gain is godliness: from such separate thyself.

6 ⁶ But godliness is great gain, if a man be content with that he hath.

7 ⁷ For we brought nothing into the world, and it is certain, that we can carry nothing out.

8 Therefore when we have food and raiment, let us therewith be content.

9 ⁸ For they that will be rich, fall into temptation and snares, and into many foolish and noisome lusts, which drown men in perdition and destruction.

10 For the desire of money is the root of all evil, which while some lusted after, they erred from the faith, and ^d pierced themselves through with many sorrows.

11 ⁹ But thou, O ^e man of God, flee these things, and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, and meekness.

¶ The first epistle to Timothy, written from Laodicea, which is the chiefest city of Phrygia Pacatiana.

¹ He condemneth severely, and excommunicateth or casteth out of the church as proud men, such as content not themselves with Christ's doctrine (that is to say the doctrine of godliness) but weary both themselves and others in vain questions, (for all other things are vain) because they content not themselves in Christ's doctrine: and as lying deceivers, because they favour or sound of nothing but vanity: as madmen, because they trouble themselves so much in matters of nothing: as mischievous plagues, for that they cause great contentions, and corrupt men's minds and judgment: to be short, as prophane and wicked, because they abuse the precious name of godliness and religion, to filthy lucre.

² Striving about words, and not about matter: and by words he meaneth all those things which have not pith in them, and whereby we can reap no profit.

³ Such as we see in those shameless schools of popery, which are nothing else but vain babbling and prattling.

⁵ He mocketh their folly, which do so greedily gape after frail things, that they can in no wise be satisfied, and yet notwithstanding they cannot enjoy that excess.

⁷ Sorrow and grief do as it were pierce through the mind of man, and are the harvest and true fruits of covetousness.

⁸ A peculiar exhortation to divers virtues, wherewith it becometh the pastors especially to be furnished.

^e Whom the Spirit of God ruleth.

¹⁰ A most earnest request and charge to observe and keep all the promises faithfully, with our eyes set upon the coming of Jesus Christ, whose glory we have to set against the vain glittering of this world, and his power against all the terrors of the wicked.

¹¹ He heapeth many words together, to one purpose: whereby he voucheth the power of God, which if we stick fast unto, we shall not be moved out of our standing.

¹² He addeth for an overplus, as it were, a sharp admonition to the rich, that they chiefly take heed of two mischiefs, to wit, of pride, and deceitful hope, against which he setteth three excellent virtues, hope in the living God, liberality towards their neighbour, and gentle conditions.

¹³ In things pertaining to this life, with whom those men are compared which are rich in good works.

¹⁴ Who only is, and that everlasting: for he setteth the nature of riches against God.

¹⁵ The praise of liberality, by the effects thereof: because it is a sure testimony of the Spirit of God which dwelleth in us, and therefore of the salvation that shall be given us.

¹⁷ Not only in word, but also in countenance and gesture: to be short, whilst their behaviour was such, that even when they held their peace, they would make men believe their heads were occupied about nothing but high and weighty matters, even then they erred concerning the faith.

The Second Epistle of PAUL to TIMOTHY.

CHAP. I.

A. D. 66. ⁵ He commendeth Timothy's faith, 6 and exhorteth him to go on faithfully in the charge committed unto him: 8 and that neither for his bonds, 15 nor the reviling of others, he faint. 11 He triumpheth of his apostleship. 14 He willeth him to have care of the thing committed unto him, 16 and praiseth Onesiphorus.

PAUL an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God, according to the promise of life which is in Christ Jesus.

2 To Timothy my beloved son: Grace, mercy and peace from God the Father, and from Jesus Christ our Lord.

3 I thank God, whom I serve from mine elders with pure conscience, that without ceasing I have remembrance of thee in my prayers night and day,

4 Desiring to see thee, mindful of thy tears, that I may be filled with joy:

5 When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and in thy mother Eunice, and am assured that it dwelleth in thee also.

6 Wherefore I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the gift of God which is in thee, by the putting on of mine hands.

7 For God hath not given to us the Spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind.

8 Be not therefore ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, neither of me his prisoner: but be partaker of the afflictions of the gospel, according to the power of God,

9 Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given to us through Christ Jesus before the world was,

10 But is now made manifest by that appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality unto light through the gospel, 11 Whereunto I am appointed a preacher, and apostle, and a teacher of the Gentiles.

12 For the which cause I also suffer these things, but I am not ashamed: for I know whom I have believed, and I am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed to him against that day.

13 Keep the true pattern of the wholesome words which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus.

14 That worthy thing, which was committed to thee, keep through the Holy Ghost, which dwelleth in us.

15 This thou knowest, that all they which are in Asia, be turned from me: of which sort are Phygellus and Hermogenes.

16 The Lord give mercy unto the house of Onesiphorus: for he oft refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my chain, 17 But when he was at Rome, he sought me out very diligently, and found me.

18 The Lord grant unto him, that he may find mercy with the Lord at that day, and in how many things he hath ministered unto me at Ephesus, thou knowest very well.

CHAP.

¹ Sent of God to preach that life, which he promised in Christ Jesus.

² The chiefest mark that he shooteth at in this epistle, is to confirm Timothy to continue constantly, and manfully even to the end, setting first before him, the great good will he beareth him, and then reckoning up the excellent gift which God would as it were have to be by inheritance in Timothy, and his ancestors, which might so much the more make him bound to God.

³ From Abraham, Isaac and Jacob: for he speaketh not of Pharisaism, but of Christianism.

⁴ He warneth us to set the invincible power of the Spirit which God hath given us, against those storms which may and do come upon us.

⁵ The gift of God is as it were a certain lively flame kindled in our hearts, which the flesh and the devil great to put out: and therefore we, on the contrary side must labour as much as we can to foster and keep it burning.

⁶ To pierce us through, and terrify us, as men whom the Lord will destroy.

⁷ He proveth that the ignominy or shame of the cross is not only not to be ashamed of, but also that it is glorious and most honourable: first because the gospel, wherefore the godly are afflicted, is the testimony of Christ: and secondly, because at length the great virtue and power of God appeareth in them.

⁸ For his sake.

⁹ The gospel after a sort is said to be afflicted in them that preach it.

¹⁰ Through the power of God.

¹¹ He sheweth with how great benefits God hath bound us, to maintain boldly and constantly his glory which is joined with our salvation, and reckoneth up the causes of our salvation, to wit, that free and eternal purpose of God, to save us in Christ, which was to come, whereby it should come to pass, that we should at length be freely called of God by the preaching of the gospel, to Christ the destroyer of death and author of immortality.

² He saith, that that grace was given us from everlasting into which we were predestinate from everlasting. So that the doctrine of foreseen faith and foreseen works, is clean contrary to the doctrine which preacheth and teacheth the grace of God.

³ Before that course of years which hath run on, ever since the beginning of the world.

⁴ Hath caused life and immortality to appear.

⁵ That is, the gospel which the apostle preached.

⁶ He confirmeth his apostleship by a strange argument, to wit, because the world could not abide it, and therefore it persecuted him that preached it.

⁷ By setting his own example before us, he sheweth us how it may be that we shall not be ashamed of the cross of Christ, to wit, if we be sure that God both can and will keep the salvation which he hath, as it were, laid up in store by himself for us against that day.

⁸ He sheweth wherein he ought to be most constant, to wit, both in the doctrine itself, the abridgment whereof is faith and charity, and next in the manner of teaching it, a lively pattern and shape whereof Timothy knew in the apostle.

⁹ An amplification taken of the dignity of so great a benefit committed to the ministers.

¹⁰ The taking away of an objection. It is an hard thing to do it, but the Spirit of God is mighty, who hath inwardly endued us with his virtue.

¹¹ He preventeth an offence which arose by the means of certain that fell from God, and the religion, and uttereth also their names, that they might be known of all men. But he setteth against them the singular faith of one man, that one only good example might counterpoise and weigh down all evil examples.

C H A P. II.

2 The better to set out perseverance in the Christian warfare, 3 he taketh similitudes 4 from soldiers; 6 and from husbandmen. 10 He sheweth that his bonds are for the profit of the saints: 15 Then he warneth Timothy to divide the word of truth aright, 17 to beware of the examples of the wicked, 22 and to do all things modestly.

THOU therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus.

2 And what things thou hast heard of me, by many witnesses, the same deliver to faithful men, which shall be able to teach others also.

3 Thou therefore suffer affliction as a good soldier of Jesus Christ.

4 No man that warreth, entangleth himself with the affairs of ^b this life, because he would please him that hath chosen him to be a soldier.

5 And if any man also strive for a mastery, he is not crowned, except he strive as he ought to do.

6 The husbandman must labour before he receive the fruits.

7 Consider what I say: and the Lord give thee understanding in all things.

8 Remember that Jesus Christ, made of the seed of David, was raised again from the dead according to my gospel, 9 Wherein I suffer troubles as an evil doer, even unto bonds: but the word of God is not bound.

10 Therefore I suffer all things for the elect's sake, that they might also obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus, with eternal glory.

11 ^a It is a true saying, For if we be ^b dead

^a The conclusion of the former exhortation, which hath also added unto it a declaration, how that they do not keep that worthy thing that is committed unto them, which keep it to themselves, but they rather, which do most freely communicate it with others, to the end that many may be partakers of it, without any man's loss or hindrance.

^b When many were by, which can bear witness of these things.

^c Another admonition: That the ministry of the word is a spiritual warfare, which no man can so travail in, that he may please his captain, unless he forego and part with all hindrances which might draw him away from it.

^d With affairs of household, or other things that belong to other ordinary businesses.

^e The third admonition: The ministry is like to a game or jousting, wherein men strive for the victory, and no man is crowned, unless he strive according to the laws which are prescribed, be they never so hard and painful.

^f Another similitude, tending to the same end: no man may look for the harvest, unless he first take pains to plow and sow his ground.

^g All these things cannot be understood, and much less practised, unless we ask of God, and he give us understanding.

^h He confirmeth plainly two principles of our faith, which are always assaulted of heretics, the one whereof (to wit, that Christ is the true Messiah, made man of the seed of David) is the ground of our salvation: and the other is the highest part of it, to wit, that he is risen again from the dead.

ⁱ The taking away of an objection: Truth it is, that he is kept in prison as an evil doer, yet there is no cause, why therefore some should go about to derogate credit from his gospel, seeing that notwithstanding God did bless his ministry, nay rather, that example of this his captivity and patience did sundry ways confirm the church in the hope of a better life.

^j The fourth admonition: We ought not to contend upon words and questions, which are not only unprofitable, but also for the most part hurtful: but rather upon this, how we may frame ourselves to all manner of patience, and to die also with Christ (that is to say, for Christ's name) because that is the plain way to the most glorious life: as contrariwise, the falling away of men can diminish no part of the truth of God, although by such means they procure together with him, we shall also live together with him. A. D. 66.

12 If we suffer, we shall also reign together with him: ^a if we deny him, he also will deny us.

13 If ^b we believe not, yet abideth he faithful: he cannot deny himself.

14 Of these things put them in remembrance, and ^c protest before the Lord, that they strive not about words, which is to no profit, but to the perverting of the hearers.

15 Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, dividing the word of truth ^d aright.

16 Stay prophane and vain babblings: ^e for they shall increase unto more ungodliness.

17 And their word shall fret as a canker: of which sort is Hymeneus and Philetus, 18 Which as concerning the truth have erred from the mark, saying that the resurrection is past already, and do destroy the faith of certain.

19 But the foundation of God remaineth sure, and hath this seal, The Lord knoweth who are his: and, Let every one that ^f calleth on the name of Christ, depart from iniquity.

20 Notwithstanding, in a great house are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and of earth, ^g and some for honour, and some unto dishonour.

21 If any man therefore ^h purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honour, sanctified, and meet for the Lord, and prepared unto every good work.

22 Flee also from the lusts of youth, and follow after righteousness, faith, love, and ⁱ peace, with them that ^j call on the Lord with a pure heart, ^k And most certain destruction to themselves.

^a If we be afflicted with Christ, and for Christ's sake.

^b Call God to witness, or as a judge: as Moses, Joshua, Samuel, and Paul himself did, Acts 20.

^c The fifth admonition: A minister must not be an idle disputer, but a faithful steward, in dividing aright the word of truth, insonuch that he must stop the mouths of other vain babblers.

^d By adding nothing to it, neither over-slipping any thing, neither mangling it, nor renting it in tunder, nor wresting of it: but marking diligently what his hearers are able to hear, and what is fit to edifying.

^e Mark and watch, and see they creep not on further.

^f He discovereth the subtilty of Satan, who beginning with these principles, draweth us by little and little to ungodliness through the means of that wicked and prophane babbling, still creeping on: which he proveth by the horrible example of them that taught, that the resurrection was already past.

^g A digression, wherein he saith that offence that rose by their falling away: shewing first, that the elect are out of all danger of any such falling away: secondly, that they are known to God, and not to us: and therefore it is no marvel if we count hypocrites ostentives for the true brethren: but we must take heed that we be not like them, but rather that we be indeed such as we are said to be.

^h That serveth and worshippeth him, and is as it were named of him, a faithful man, or Christian.

ⁱ The taking away of an objection: It is no dishonour to the good man of the house, that he hath not in a great house all vessels of one sort and for one service, but we must look to this, that we be found vessels prepared to honour.

^j By these words is meant the execution of the matter, and not the cause: for in that we purge ourselves, it is not to be attributed to any free will that is in us, but to God, who freely and wholly worketh in us a good and an effectual will.

^k Returning to the matter from whence he digressed, ver. 16. he warneth him to exercise himself in weighty matters, and such as pertain to godliness.

^l The sixth admonition: We must above all things eschew all bitterness of mind, both in teaching all men, and also in calling them back which have gone out of the way.

A. D. 64. 23 And put away foolish and unlearned questions, knowing that they engender strife.
 24 But the servant of the Lord must not strive, but must be gentle toward all men, apt to teach, suffering the evil,
 25 Instructing them with meekness that are contrary minded, proving if God at any time will give them repentance, that they may acknowledge the truth, 26 And come to amendment out of the snare of the devil, of whom they are taken prisoners, to do his will.

CHAPTER III.

1 He foretelleth the dangerous times that are to ensue, 9 but with the certain hope of victory, 10 he encourageth him to the combat, setting out especially the trial of sound doctrine.

THIS I know also, that in the last days shall come perilous times:

2 For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, cursed speakers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy,

3 Without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, intemperate, fierce, no lovers at all of them which are good,

4 Traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God,

5 Having a shew of godliness, but have denied the power thereof: turn away therefore from such:

6 For of this sort are they which creep into houses, and lead captive simple women laden with sins, and led with divers lusts,

7 Which women are ever learning, and are never able to come to the acknowledging of the truth.

8 And as Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses, so do these also resist the truth, men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith.

9 But they shall prevail no longer: for their madness shall be evident unto all men, as theirs also was.

10 But thou hast fully known my doctrine, manner of living, purpose, faith, long-suffering, love, patience,

11 Persecutions, and afflictions which came unto me at Antioch, at Iconium, and at Ly-

¹ To win them through our patient bearing with them. But not to please them, or excuse them in their wickedness.

² He meaneth such as do not yet see the truth.

³ The seventh admonition: We may not hope for any church in this world without corruption: but there shall be rather great abundance of most wicked men, even in the very bosom of the church, which notwithstanding shall make a shew and countenance of great holiness and charity.

⁴ Which make no account, either of right or honesty.

⁵ We must not dally with such men as resist the truth, not of simple ignorance, but of a perverse mind, (which thing appeareth by their fruits, which he painteth out here lively) but we must rather turn away from them.

⁶ He addeth a comfort: the Lord will at length pluck off all their vizards.

⁷ That we be not deceived by such hypocrites, we must set before us the virtues of the holy servants of God, and we must not be afraid of persecution, which they suffered willingly, and which always followeth true godliness. But we must especially hold fast the doctrine of the apostles, the sum whereof is this, that we are saved through faith in Christ Jesus.

⁸ Thou knowest thoroughly not only what I taught and did, but also how I was minded and disposed.

⁹ Which is in Pisidia.

¹⁰ Their wickedness shall daily increase.

¹¹ The eighth admonition, which is most precious: A pastor must be wise by the word of God only: wherein we tra, which persecutions I suffered: but from them all the Lord delivered me: A. D. 64.

12 Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution.

13 But the evil men and deceivers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived.

14 But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned, and which are committed unto thee, knowing of whom thou hast learned them:

15 And that thou hast known the holy scriptures of a child, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation, through the faith which is in Christ Jesus.

16 For the whole scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable to teach, to convince, to correct, and to instruct in righteousness, 20. 2 Pet. 1.

17 That the man of God may be absolute, being made perfect unto all good works.

CHAPTER IV.

1 He chargeth him to preach the gospel with all diligence, 3 in that so miserable a time: 6 That his death is hard at hand, 8 yet so, that as a conqueror, he maketh haste to a glorious triumph. 10 He sheweth the cause why he sendeth for Timothy, 11 even by reason of his present state.

I charge thee therefore before God, and before the Lord Jesus Christ, which shall judge the quick and dead at that his appearing, and in his kingdom,

2 Preach the word: be instant, in season and out of season: reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine.

3 For the time will come when they will not suffer wholesome doctrine: but having their ears itching, shall after their own lusts get them an heap of teachers,

4 And shall turn their ears from the truth, and shall be given unto fables.

5 But watch thou in all things: suffer adversity: do the work of an evangelist: cause thy ministry to be thoroughly liked of.

6 For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departing is at hand.

7 I have have perfectly delivered unto us whatsoever pertaineth either to discern, know, and establish true opinions, and to confute false: and furthermore to correct evil manners, and to frame good.

² The prophets and expounders of God's will, are properly and peculiarly called, Men of God.

³ The principal and chief of all admonitions being therefore proposed with a most earnest charge, is this: that the word of God be propounded with a certain holy importunity, as necessity requireth: but so, that a good and true ground of the doctrine be laid, and the vehemency be tempered with all holy meekness.

⁴ Faithful pastors, in times past, took all occasions they could, because men were very prompt and ready to return to their fables.

⁵ To false and unprofitable doctrines which the world is now so bewitched withal, that it had rather the open light of the truth were utterly put out, than it would come out of darkness.

⁶ The wickedness and falling away of the world ought to cause faithful ministers to be so much the more careful.

⁷ Prove and shew by good and substantial proof, that thou art the true minister of God.

⁸ He foretelleth his death to be at hand, and sendeth before them an excellent example, both of invincible constancy, and sure hope.

⁹ To be offered for a drink-offering: and he alludeth to the pouring out of blood or wine, which was used in sacrifices.

A. D. 66. 7 I have fought a good fight, and have finished my course: I have kept the faith.

8 For henceforth is laid up for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love that his appearing.

9 Make speed to come unto me at once:

10 For Demas hath forsaken me, and hath embraced this present world, and is departed unto Thessalonica, Crescens is gone to Galatia, Titus unto Dalmatia.

11 * Only Luke is with me. Take Mark, and bring him with thee: for he is profitable unto me to minister.

12 And Tychicus have I sent to Ephesus.

13 The cloke that I left at Troas with Carpus, when thou comest, bring with thee, and the books, but specially the parchments.

14 Alexander the coppersmith hath done me much evil: the Lord reward him according to his works:

15 Of whom be thou ware also: for he withstood our preaching fore:

16 At my first answering no man assisted me, but all forsook me: I pray God, that it may not be laid to their charge.

^s The last part of the epistle, setting forth grievous complaints against certain, and examples of singular godliness in every place, and of a mind never wearied.

^d Contented himself with this world.

17 Notwithstanding the Lord assisted me, and strengthened me, that by me the preaching might be fully believed, and that all the Gentiles should hear: and I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion.

18 And the Lord will deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom: to whom be praise for ever and ever. Amen.

19 Salute Prisca and Aquila, and the * household of Onesiphorus. ^{* Ch. 1. 16.}

20 Erastus abode at Corinth: Trophimus I left at Miletum sick.

21 Make speed to come before winter. Eubulus greeteth thee, and Pudens, and Linus, and Claudia, and all the brethren.

22 The Lord Jesus Christ be with thy spirit: Grace be with you. Amen.

¶ The second epistle written from Rome unto Timothy, the first bishop elected of the church of Ephesus, when Paul was presented the second time before the emperor Nero:

^c Of Nero.

^f Preserve me pure from committing any thing unworthy my apostleship.

^g To make me partaker of his kingdom.

The Epistle of PAUL to TITUS.

C H A P. I.

A. D. 65. 6 He sheweth what kind of men ought to be chosen ministers: 12 how vain babblers mouths should be stopped: 12 And through this occasion he toucheth the nature of the Cretians, 14 and the Jews who put holiness in outward things.

PAUL ¹ a servant of God, and an apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the faith of God's elect, ² and the acknowledging of the truth which is according unto godliness,

2 Unto the ^c hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lye, hath ^d promised before the ^e world began:

3 ¹ But hath made his word manifest in due time through the preaching which is ^{*} committed unto me, according to the commandment of God our ^f Saviour.

² A minister; as Christ himself, in that that he was a minister and head of the prophets, is called a servant, Isa. 43. 10.

^b Of those whom God hath chosen.

² The faith wherein all the elect consent, is the true and sincere knowledge of God, tending to this end, that worshipping God aright, they may at length obtain life everlasting according to the promise of God, who is true, which promise was exhibited in Christ in due time according to his eternal purpose.

^c Hope is the end of faith.

^d Freely, and of his mere liberality.

^e Look 2 Tim. 1. 9.

^f This truth is no otherwhere to be sought, but in the preaching of the apostles.

4 ⁴ To Titus my natural son according to the common faith, ⁵ Grace, mercy, and peace from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ our Saviour.

5 ⁶ For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldest continue to redress the things that remain, and shouldest ordain elders in every city, as I appointed thee,

6 ^{} If any be unproveable; the husband of one wife; having faithful children, which are not slandered of riot, neither are ^g disobedient. ^{ 1 Tim. 3. 2.}

7 ⁷ For a bishop must be unproveable; as God's ^h steward, not ⁱ froward, not angry, not given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre;

8 But harbourous; one that loveth goodness, ^k wife, righteous, holy, temperate,

3 T

¹ This word (Saviour) doth not only signify a preserver of life, but also a giver of life.

⁴ The apostle moveth the Cretians to hear Titus, by setting forth his consent and agreement with him in the faith, and therewithal sheweth by what special note we may distinguish true ministers from false.

⁵ There is but one way of salvation, common both to the pastor and the flock.

⁶ The first admonition, to ordain elders in every city.

⁷ This word is proper to horses and oxen, which will not abide the yoke.

⁷ The second admonition: What faults pastors (whom he comprehended afore under the word elders) ought to be void of, and what virtues they ought to have.

^h Whom the Lord hath appointed steward of his gifts.

ⁱ Not hard conditioned, and evil to please.

^k Circumspect, and of a sound judgment, and of a singular example of moderation.

A. D. 65. 9 Holding fast that faithful word according to doctrine, that he also may be able to exhort with wholesome doctrine, and convince them that say against it :

10 For there are many disobedient and vain talkers and deceivers of minds, chiefly they of the circumcision, 11 Whose mouths must be stopped, which subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

12 One of themselves, even one of their own prophets said, The Cretians are always liars, wild beasts, slow bellies.

13 This witness is true : wherefore convince them sharply, that they may be found in the faith, 14 And not taking heed to Jewish fables, and commandments of men, that turn away from the truth.

15 Unto the pure are all things pure : but unto them that are defiled, and unbelieving, is nothing pure, but even their minds and consciences are defiled.

16 They profess that they know God, but by works they deny him, and are abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

CHAPTER II.

He willetb that all generally persons and states, and willetb him to instruct the church in manners. 11 He draweth an argument from the end of our redemption, 12 which is, that we live godly and uprightly.

BUT speak thou the things which become wholesome doctrine,

2 That the elder men be watchful, grave, temperate, sound in the faith, in love, and in patience.

3 The elder women likewise, that they be in such behaviour as becometh holiness, not false accusers, nor subject to much wine, but teachers of honest things,

4 That they may instruct the young women to be sober minded, that they love their husbands, that they love their children,

5 That they be temperate, chaste, keeping at home, good and subject unto their husbands, that the word of God be not evil spoken of.

6 Exhort young men likewise, that they be sober minded.

7 In all things shew thyself an example of good works with uncorrupt doctrine, with gravity, integrity,

8 And with the wholesome word, which cannot be condemned, that he which withstandeth, may be ashamed, having nothing concerning you to speak evil of.

9 Let servants be subject to their masters, and please them in all things, not answering again,

10 Neither pickers, but that they shew all good faithfulness, that they may adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things.

11 For that grace of God, that bringeth salvation unto all men, hath appeared,

12 And teacheth us, that we should deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and that we should live soberly and righteously; and godly in this present world,

13 Looking for that blessed hope, and appearing of that glory of that mighty God, and of our Saviour Jesus Christ, 14 Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purge us, to be a peculiar people unto himself, zealous of good works.

15 These things speak and exhort, and convince with all authority. See that no man despise thee.

CHAPTER III.

1 He willetb that all generally be put in mind to reverence such as be in authority : That they remember their former life, and attribute all justification unto grace. 9 And if any brawler withstand these things, 10 he willetb that he be rejected.

PUT them in remembrance that they be subject to the principalities and powers, and that they be obedient, and ready to every good work,

2 That

The third admonition : The pastor must hold fast that doctrine which the apostles delivered, and pertaineth to salvation, leaving all curious and vain matters.

The fourth admonition : To apply the knowledge of true doctrine unto use, which consisteth in two things, to wit, in governing them which shew themselves apt to learn, and confuting the obstinate.

An applying of the general proposition to a particular. The Cretians above all other need sharp reprehensions: both because their minds are naturally given to lyes and falsehoods, and also because of certain covetous Jews, which under a colour of godliness, joined partly certain vain traditions, and partly old ceremonies with the gospel.

Of the Jews, or rather of those Jews which went about to join Christ and the law together.

Epimenides, who was counted a prophet amongst them. Look upon Laerius, and Cicero in his first book of divination.

Roughly and plainly, and go not about the bush with them.

He sheweth in few words, that purity consisteth not in any external worship, and that that is according to the old law (as in difference of meats and washings, and other such things which are abolished) but in the mind and conscience: and whosoever teach otherwise, know not what is true religion indeed, and also are nothing less than that they would seem to be.

If our minds and consciences be unclean, what cleanliness is there in us before regeneration?

The fifth admonition : The doctrine must not only be generally pure, but also be applied to all ages and orders of men, according to the diversity of circumstances.

What are the chiefest virtues for old and young, both men and women, and how they ought to be stirred up unto them continually.

No gadders up and down.

The sixth admonition : That both the pastor's life and doctrine must be sound.

Not such a gravity as may drive men from coming to the minister, but such as may cause them to come in most reverent and honest sort.

The seventh admonition, of servants duty toward their masters.

Which may be done without offence to God.

The eighth admonition, belonging to all the godly: that seeing God calleth all men to the gospel, and Christ hath justified us, that he hath also sanctified us, we must all of us give our selves to true godliness, and righteousness, setting before us a sure hope of that immeasurable glory: which thing must in such sort be beaten into their heads, that the gain sayers also must be reprov'd, by the authority of the mighty God.

Lusts of the flesh, which belong to the present state of this life and world.

Christ is here most plainly called that mighty God, and his appearance and coming is called by the figure Metonymy, our hope.

As it were a thing peculiarly laid up for himself.

With all authority possible.

He declareth particularly and severally that which he said before generally, noting out certain chief and principal duties, which men owe to men, and especially subjects to their magistrates.

A. D. 65. 2 That they speak evil of no man, that they be no fighters, but soft, shewing all meekness unto all men.

¹Cor. 6. 11. 3 * For we ourselves also were in times past unwise, disobedient, deceived, serving the lusts and divers pleasures, living in maliciousness and envy, hateful, and hating one another.

4 But when that bountifulness and that love of God our Saviour toward man appeared,

²Tim. 1. 9. 5 * Not by the works of ^arighteousness which we had done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of the new birth, and the renewing of the ^bHoly Ghost,

6 Which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour,

7 That we, being justified by his grace, should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.

8 ¹ This is a true saying, and these things I will thou shouldst affirm, that they which have believed God, might be careful to shew forth good works. These things are good and profitable unto men.

¹Tim. 1. 4. ²Tim. 2. 23. 9 * But stay foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and brawlings about the law: for they are unprofitable and vain.

A. D. 65. 10 ⁴ Reject him that is an heretic, after once or twice admonition, 11 Knowing that he that is such, is perverted, and sinneth, being damned of his ownself.

12 ⁵ When I shall send Artemas unto thee, or Tychicus, be diligent to come to me unto Nicopolis: for I have determined there to winter.

13 Bring Zenas the expounder of the law, and Apollos on their journey diligently, that they lack nothing.

14 And let ours also learn to shew forth good works for necessary uses, that they be not unfruitful.

15 All that are with me, salute thee. Greet them that love us in the faith. Grace be with you all. Amen.

¶ To Titus, elect the first bishop of the church of the Cretians, written from Nicopolis in Macedonia.

eschew all vain questions, which serve to nothing but to move strife and debate.

^c Give themselves earnestly unto good works.

⁴ The ministers of the word must at once cast off heretics, that is, such as stubbornly and seditiously disquiet the church, and will give no ear to ecclesiastical admonitions.

⁵ Last of all, he writeth a word or two of private matters, and commendeth certain men.

The Epistle of PAUL to PHILEMON.

¹ Paul handling a base and small matter, yet according to his manner mounteth aloft unto God. 8 Sending again to Philemon his vagabond and thievish servant, he entreateth pardon for him, and very gravely preacheth of Christian equity.

PAUL a prisoner of Jesus Christ, and our brother Timothy, unto Philemon our dear friend, and fellow-helper:

2 And to our dear sister Apphia, and to Archippus our fellow soldier, and to the church that is in thine house:

3 Grace be with you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

¹Thes. 1. ²Thes. 1. 5. 4 I * give thanks to my God, making mention always of thee in my prayers

5 (When I hear of thy love and faith, which thou hast toward the Lord Jesus, and toward all saints),

6 That the ^a fellowship of thy faith may be made effectual, and that whatsoever good thing is in you through Christ Jesus, may be ^b known.

7 For we have great joy and consolation in thy love, because by thee, brother, the saints ^c bowels are comforted.

8 Wherefore, though I be very bold in Christ to command thee that which is convenient, 9 ¹ Yet, for love's sake, I rather beseech thee, though I be as I am, even Paul aged, and even now a prisoner for Jesus Christ.

10 I beseech thee for my son * Onesimus, whom I have begotten in my bonds, ¹ Col. 4. 9.

11 Which in times past was to thee unprofitable, but now profitable both to thee and to me,

12 Whom I have sent again: thou therefore receive him, that is mine own ^d bowels:

13 Whom I would have retained with me, that in thy stead he might have ministered unto me in the bonds of the gospel.

14 But without thy mind would I do nothing, that thy benefit should not be as it were of ^e necessity, but willingly.

15 It may be that he therefore ^f departed for a season, that thou shouldst receive him forever:

16 Not

^a By fellowship of faith, he meaneth those duties of charity which are bestowed upon the saints, and flow forth of an effectual faith.

^b That by this means all men may perceive how rich you are in Christ, to wit, in faith, charity, and all bountifulness.

^c Because thou didst so dutifully and cheerfully refresh the saints, that they conceived inwardly a marvellous joy: for by this word (bowels) is meant not only the inward feeling of wants and miseries that men have one of another's state, but also that joy and comfort which entereth into the very bowels, as though the heart were refreshed and comforted.

^d As mine own son, and as if I had begotten him of mine own body.

^e That thou mightest not seem to have lent me thy servant upon constraint, but willingly.

^f Thus he assuageth the harder kind of speech, which is to say, he ran away.

⁸ For a little time.

16 Not now as a servant, but above a servant, even as a brother beloved, especially to me: how much more then unto thee, both in the ^a flesh, and in the Lord?

17 If therefore thou count our things common, receive him as myself.

18 If he hath hurt thee, or oweth thee aught, that put on mine accounts.

19 I Paul have written this with mine own hand, I will recompense it: albeit I do not say to thee, that thou owest moreover unto me even thine own self.

20 ¹ Yea, brother, let me obtain this pleasure of thee in the Lord: comfort my bowels in the Lord.

^a Because he is thy servant, as other servants are, and because he is the Lord's servant, so that thou must needs love him, both for the Lord's sake, and for thine own

21 Trusting in thine obedience, I wrote unto thee, knowing that thou wilt do even more than I say.

22 Moreover also prepare me lodging: for I trust through your prayers I shall be freely given unto you.

23 There salute thee Epaphras my fellow prisoner in Christ Jesus, 24 Marcus, Aristarchus, Demas, and Luke my fellow helpers.

25 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

The Epistle to the HEBREWS.

The drift and end of this epistle is, to shew that Jesus Christ the Son of God, both God and man, is that true, eternal and only prophet, king, and high priest, that was shadowed by the figures of the old law, and is now indeed exhibited: of whom the whole church ought to be taught, governed, and sanctified.

CHAP. I.

A. D.
64.

1 To shew that the doctrine which Christ brought, is most excellent, in that it is the knitting up of all prophecies, and he advanceth him above the angels.

10 And proveth by divers testimonies of the scripture, that he far passeth all other.

AT sundry times and in divers manners God spake in the old time to our fathers by the prophets: in these ^a last days he hath spoken unto us by his ^b Son,

2 ^a Whom he hath made ^c heir of all things, by whom also he made the ^d worlds,

* Col. 1. 15.

3 ^a Who being the ^c brightness of the glory, and the ingrav'd form of his ^f person, and ^e bearing up all things by his mighty word, ^b hath by himself purged our sins, and ^d sitteth at the right hand of the majesty in the highest places,

4 ^a And is made so much more excellent than the angels, inasmuch as he hath obtained a more excellent ⁱ name than they:

^a The first part of the general proposition of this epistle. The Son of God is indeed that prophet or teacher, which hath actually now performed that, that God after a sort, and in shadows, signified by his prophets, and hath fully opened his Father's will to the world.

^a So that the former declaration made by the prophets was not full, and nothing must be added to this later.

^b Which one Son is God and man.

^c The second part of the same proposition: The same Son is appointed of the Father to be our King and Lord, by whom also he made all things: and in whom only he setteth forth his glory, yea, and himself also to be beholden of us, who beareth up and sustaineth all things by his will and pleasure.

^c Possessor and equal partner of all things with the Father.

^d That is, whatsoever hath been at any time, is, or shall be.

^e He in whom that glory and majesty of the Father shineth, who is otherwise infinite, and cannot be beholden.

^f His Father's person.

^e Sustaineth, defendeth, and cherisheth.

^a The third part of the same proposition: The same Son executed the office of the high priest in offering up himself, and is our only and most mighty Mediator in heaven.

^a This sheweth that the favour of that his sacrifice is not only most acceptable to the Father, but also is everlasting, and furthermore, how far this high priest passeth all

5 ^a For unto which of the angels said he at any time, ^a Thou art my Son, ^b this day begat I thee? ^c and again, I ^d will be his Father, and he shall be my Son?

6 ^a And ^b again, when he bringeth in his first begotten Son into the world, he saith, ^c And let all the angels of God worship him.

7 ^a And of the angels he saith, ^b He maketh the spirits his ^c messengers, and his ministers a ^d flame of fire.

8 But unto the Son he saith, ^a O God, thy ^b throne is for ever ^c and ever: the scepter of thy kingdom is a ^d scepter of righteousness.

9 Thou hast loved righteousness and ^a hated iniquity: wherefore God, even thy God, hath ^b anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thine ^c fellows.

10 ^a And, ^b Thou, Lord, in the beginning ^c hast ^d established the earth, and the heavens are the works of thine hand.

11 They

the other high priests.

^a Before he cometh to declare the office of Christ, he setteth forth the excellency of his person, and first of all he sheweth him so to be man, that therewithal he is God also.

^b Dignity and honour.

^c 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 He proveth and confirmeth the dignity of Christ manifested in the flesh, by these six evident testimonies, whereby it appeareth that he far passeth all angels, inasmuch that he is called both Son, and God, in verses 5, 6, 7, 8, 10 and 13.

^d The Father begat the Son from everlasting, but that everlasting generation was made manifest and represented to the world in his time, and therefore he addeth this word (To-day).

^e The Lord was not content to have spoken it once, but he repeateth it in another place.

^f Cherub, Psalm 18. 11.

^g Seraph, Isa. 6. 2.

^h The throne is proper to princes, and not to servants.

ⁱ For everlasting, for this doubling of the word increaseth the signification of it beyond all measure.

^j The government of thy kingdom is righteous.

^k This kind of rehearsing, which the Jews use by contraries, hath great force in it.

^l In that, that the word became flesh, by pouring the Holy Ghost upon him without measure.

^m For he is the head, and we are his members.

ⁿ Madest the earth firm and sure.

14 Are they not all ² ministering spirits, sent forth to minister, for their sakes which shall be heirs of salvation?

C H A P. II.

1 Therefore the inference that good heed must be given to Christ's doctrine: 9 And he setteth him out unto us even as our brother in our flesh, that we may with a good will yield up ourselves wholly unto him.

Wherefore ¹ we ought diligently to give heed to the things which ² we have heard, lest at any time we ^b run out.

2 For if the ^c word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompence of reward,

3 How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; ² which at the first began to be preached by the Lord, and afterward was confirmed unto us by ^d them that heard him,

4 * God bearing witness thereto, both with ^e signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and

^{*} By that name, by which we commonly call princes messengers, he here calleth the spirits.

¹ Now as it were pausing with him self, and shewing to what end and purpose all these things were spoken, to wit, to understand by the excellency of Christ, above all creatures, that his doctrine, majesty, and priesthood, is most perfect, he useth an exhortation taken from a comparison.

² He maketh himself an hearer.

^b They are said to let the word run out, which hold it not fast when they have heard it.

^c The law which appointed punishment for the offenders: and which Paul saith was given by angels, Gal. 3. 19. and Stephen, Acts 7. 53.

² If the breach and transgression of the word spoken by angels was not suffered unpunished, much less shall it be lawful for us to neglect the gospel which the Lord of angels preached, and was confirmed by the voice of the apostles, and with so many signs and wonders from heaven, and especially with so great and mighty working of the Holy Ghost.

^d By the apostles.

^e This is the true end of miracles. Now they are called signs, because they appear one thing, and represent another: and they are called wonders, because they represent some strange and unaccustomed thing: and virtues, because they give us a glimpse of God's mighty power.

³ If it were an heinous matter to contemn the angels which are but servants, much more heinous is it to contemn that most mighty King of the restored world.

^f The world to come, whereof Christ is Father, Isa. 9. 6. or the church, which, as a new world, was to be gathered together by the gospel.

⁴ He sheweth that the use of this kingly dignity consisteth herein, that men might not only in Christ recover that dignity which they have lost, but also might be through him advanced above all things, which dignity of men David describeth most excellently.

⁵ What is there in man that thou shouldest have so great regard of him, and do him that honour?

^h He calleth all the citizens of that heavenly kingdom, as they are considered in themselves, before that God giveth them the liberty of that city in Christ, man, and the Son of man.

ⁱ This is the first honour of the citizens of the world to come, that they are next the angels.

^k For they shall be in very great honour when they shall be partakers of the kingdom. And he speaketh of the thing that shall be, as though it were already, because it is so certain.

⁵ An objection: But where is this so great rule and dominion?

⁶ The answer: This is already fulfilled in Jesus Christ our head, who was for a time for our sakes inferior to the angels, being made man: but now is advanced into most gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will? A. D. 64.

5 ³ For he hath not put in subjection unto the angels the ^f world to come, whereof we speak:

6 ⁴ But * one in a certain place witnessed, saying, ⁵ What is man, that thou shouldest be mindful of him? or the ^b son of man, that thou wouldest consider him? ⁶ Pl. 8. 6.

7 Thou ¹ madest him a little inferior to the angels: thou crownest him with ^k glory and honour, and hast set him above the works of thine hands.

8 * Thou hast put all things in subjection ¹ under his feet: And in that he hath put all things in subjection under him, he left nothing that should not be subject unto him. ⁵ But we yet see not all things subdued unto him, ²⁷ ¹ Cor. 15.

9 ⁶ But we ¹ see Jesus crowned with glory and honour, ^{*} which was made little ^m inferior ⁸ to the angels, ⁷ through the ⁿ suffering of death, that by God's grace he might ^o taste death for ⁸ all men. ^{Phil. 2. 8.}

10 ² For it became ^p him, for whom are all these things, and by whom are all these things, ¹⁰ seeing that he brought many children unto glory, ¹¹ that he should consecrate the ³ Prince or their salvation through afflictions.

11 ¹² For he that ^r sanctifieth, and they which

3 U are high glory.

^m Who abased himself for a season, and took upon him the shape of a servant.

⁷ He sheweth the cause of this subjection, to wit, to taste of death for our sakes, that so doing the part of a Redeemer, he might not only be our prophet and king, but also our high priest.

ⁿ That he might die.

^o Feel death.

⁸ Herein consisteth the force of the argument: for we could not at length be glorified with him, unless he had been abased for us, even all the faithful. And by this occasion the apostle cometh to the other part of the declaration of Christ's person, wherein he proveth him to be in such sort God, that he is also man.

⁹ He proveth more by other arguments, why it behoved the Son of God, who is true God (as he proved a little before) to become man notwithstanding, subject to all miseries, sin only except.

^p God.

¹⁰ First of all, because the Father, to whose glory all things are to be referred, purposed to bring many sons unto glory. And how could he have men for his sons, unless his only begotten Son had become brother to men?

¹¹ Secondly, the Father determined to bring those sons to glory, to wit, out of that ignominy wherein they lay before. Therefore the Son should not have been seen plainly to be made man, unless he had been made like unto other men, that he might come to glory by the self-same way, by the which he should bring others: yea rather, it became him which was Prince of the salvation of others, to be consecrated above others, through those afflictions, Prophet, King, and Priest, which are the parts of that principality for the salvation of others.

⁹ The chieftain, who as he is chiefest in dignity, so is he the first begotten from among the dead; amongst many brethren.

¹² The ground of both the former arguments: for neither should we be sons through him, neither could he be consecrated through afflictions, unless he had been made man like unto us. But because his Sonhood dependeth not upon nature only, for no man is accounted the son of God, unless that, besides that he is a son of man, he be also Christ's brother, (which is by sanctification, that is, by becoming one with Christ, who sanctifieth us through faith) therefore the apostle maketh mention of the sanctifier, to wit, of Christ, and of them that are sanctified, to wit, of all the faithful; whom therefore Christ vouchsafeth to call brethren.

¹ He useth the time that now is, to shew us that we are yet still going on, and increasing in this sanctification: and by

A. D. are sanctified, are all of ^{one}: wherefore he is not ashamed to call them brethren, 12¹⁵ Saying, ^I will declare thy name unto my brethren: in the midst of the church will I sing praises to thee.

13¹⁴ And again, ^I will put my trust in him. And again, ^{Behold} here am I, and the children which God hath given me.

14 Forasmuch then as the children are ^{partakers} of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part with them, that he might destroy ^{through} death, him that had the ^{power} of death, that is, the ^{devil},

15 And that he might deliver all them, which for fear of ^{death} were all their life time subject to bondage:

16¹⁵ For he in no sort took on ^{him} the ^{angels} nature, but he took on ^{him} the ^{seed} of Abraham.

17¹⁵ Wherefore in ^{all} things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be ^{merciful}, and a ^{faithful} high priest in things concerning God, that he might make reconciliation for the sins of the people:

18 For in that he suffered, and was ^{tempted}, he is able to succour them that are tempted.

C H A P. III.

1 Now he sheweth how far inferior Moses is to Christ, 5, 6 even so much as the servant to the master: and so he bringeth in certain exhortations and threatenings taken out of David, 8 against such as either stubbornly resist, 12 or else are very slow to obey.

by far sanctification he meaneth our separation from the rest of the world, our cleansing from sin, and our dedication wholly unto God, all which Christ alone worketh in us.

² That which he taught before of the incarnation of the Sanctifier, he applyeth to the prophetic office.

³ He applyeth the same to the kingly power of Christ, in delivering him from the power of the devil and death.

⁴ I will commit myself to him, and to his defence.

⁵ This Isaiah speaketh of him self and his disciples, but betokening thereby all ministers, as also his disciples signify the whole church. And therefore seeing Christ is the head of the prophets and ministers, these words are more rightly verified of him, than of Isaiah.

⁶ Are made of flesh and blood, which is a frail and brittle nature.

⁷ The devil is said to have the power of death, because he is the author of sin: and from sin cometh death, and for this cause he draggeth us daily to sin.

⁸ He speaketh of one as of the prince, joining to him secretly all his angels.

⁹ By (death) thou must understand here, that death which is joined with the wrath of God, as it must needs be, if it be without Christ, than the which there can be nothing devised more miserable.

¹⁰ He expoundeth those words of flesh and blood, shewing that Christ is true man, and that not by turning his divine nature, but by taking of man's nature. And he nameth Abraham, respecting the promises made to Abraham in this behalf.

¹¹ The nature of angels.

¹² The very nature of man.

¹³ He applyeth the same to the priesthood, for which he should not have been fit, unless he had become man, and that like unto us in all things, sin only except.

¹⁴ Not only as touching nature, but qualities also.

¹⁵ That he might be truly touched with the feeling of our miseries.

¹⁶ Doing his office sincerely.

¹⁷ Was tried and egged to wickedness by the devil.

¹⁸ Having laid the foundation, that is to say, declared and proved both the natures of one self-same Christ, he giveth him three offices, to wit, the office of a prophet, king, and priest, and as touching the office of teaching and governing, compareth him with Moses and Joshua, unto

Therefore, ^{holy} brethren, partakers of the ^{heavenly} vocation, consider the ^{Apostle} and High Priest of our ^{profession}, Christ Jesus:

2² Who was faithful to him that hath ^{appointed} him, ^{even} as ^{Moses} was in all his ^{house}.

3⁴ For this man is counted worthy of more glory than Moses, insomuch as he which hath builded the house, hath more honour than the house.

4 For every house is builded of some man, and he that hath built all things, ^{is} God.

5⁵ Now Moses verily was faithful in all his house, as a servant, for a witness of the things which should be spoken after:

6 But Christ ^{is} as the Son, over his own house, ^{whose} ^{house} we are, if we hold fast that ^{confidence} and that rejoicing of that hope unto the end.

7 Wherefore, as the Holy Ghost saith, ^{To-day} if ye ^{shall} hear his voice,

8 Harden not your hearts, as in the ^{provocation}, according to the day of the temptation in the wilderness,

9 Where your fathers tempted me, proved me, and saw my works forty years long.

10 Wherefore I was grieved with that generation, and said, They ^{err} ever in ^{their} heart, neither have they known my ways.

11 Therefore I swear in my wrath, If they shall enter into my rest.

12⁷ Take heed, brethren, lest at any time there be in any of you an evil heart, and unfaithful, to depart away from the living God.

13 But the fourteenth verse of the next chapter, and with Aaron touching the priesthood. And he propoundeth that which he purposed to speak of, with a most grave exhortation, that all our faith may tend to Christ, as to the only everlasting teacher, governor, and high priest.

¹ The ambassador or messenger, as Rom. 15. he is called the minister of circumcision.

² Of the doctrine of the gospel which we profess.

³ He confirmeth his exhortation with two reasons, first of all, because Christ Jesus was appointed such an one of God: secondly, because he thoroughly executed the offices that his Father enjoined him.

⁴ Apostle and high priest.

⁵ Now he cometh to the comparison with Moses, and he maketh them like one to the other in this, that they were both appointed rulers over God's house, and executed faithfully their offices: but by and by after he sheweth that there is great unlikeliness in that same similitude.

⁶ The first comparison: The builder of the house is better than the house itself, therefore is Christ better than Moses. The reason of the consequent is this: because the builder of this house is God, which cannot be attributed to Moses: and therefore Moses was not properly the builder, but a part of the house: but Christ as Lord and God made all this house.

⁷ Another comparison: Moses was a faithful servant in this house, that is, in the church, serving the Lord that was to come, but Christ ruleth and governeth his house as Lord.

⁸ He applyeth the former doctrine to his end, exhorting all men by the words of David to hear the Son himself speak, and to give full credit to his words, seeing that otherwise they cannot enter into that eternal rest.

⁹ To wit, Christ's.

¹⁰ He calleth that excellent effect of faith (whereby we cry Abba, that is, Father) confidence, and to confidence he joineth hope.

¹¹ So that God was to speak once again after Moses.

¹² In the day that they vexed the Lord, or strove with him.

¹³ They are brutish and mad.

¹⁴ Now weighing the words of David, he sheweth first by this word, To-day, that we must not neglect the occasion while we have it: for that word is not to be restrained to David's time, but it comprehendeth all that time wherein God calleth us.

A. D. 64. 13 But exhort one another daily, ¹ while it is called to day, lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin:

14 ² For we are made partakers of Christ, if we keep sure unto the end that ^k beginning wherewith we are upholden, 15 ¹ So long as it is said, To-day if ye hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation.

16 For some when they heard, provoked him to anger: howbeit, not all that came out of Egypt by Moses.

17 But with whom was he displeased forty years? Was he not displeased with them that sinned, * whose carcases fell in the wilderness?
 * Num. 14. 37.

18 And to whom sware he that they should not enter into his rest, but unto them that obeyed not?

19 So we see that they could not enter in, because of unbelief.

C H A P. IV.

1 He joineth exhortation with threatening, lest they, even as their fathers were, be deprived of the rest offered unto them, 11 but that they endeavour to enter into it. 14 And so he beginneth to intreat of Christ's priesthood.

LET us fear therefore, lest at any time by forsaking the promise of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to be deprived:

2 ¹ For unto us was the gospel preached as also unto them: but the word that they heard, profited not them, because it was not ^a mixed with faith in those that heard it.

3 ² For we which have believed, do enter in to the rest, as he said to the other, * As I have sworn in my wrath, If they shall enter into my rest: although the works were finished from the foundation of the world.

4 For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise, * And God did rest the seventh day from all his works.

 A. D. 64. * G. n. 2. 2. D. ut 5. 17.

5 And in this place again, If they shall enter into my rest.

6 Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter thereinto, and they to whom it was first preached, entered not therein for unbelief's sake:

7 Again he appointed in David a certain day, by To-day, after so long a time, saying, as it is said, * This day, If ye hear his voice, harden not your hearts.
 * Ch. 3. 7.

8 For if ^b Jesus had given them rest, then would he not after this have spoken of another day:

9 There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God.

10 ^c For he that is entered into his rest, hath also ceased from his own works, as God did from his.

11 ³ Let us study therefore to enter into that rest, lest ^d any man fall after the same ensample of disobedience.

12 ⁴ For the ^e word of God is ^f lively, and mighty in operation, and sharper than any two-edged sword, and entereth through, even unto the dividing asunder of the ^g soul and the ^h spirit, and of the joints and the marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and the intents of the heart.

13 Neither is there any creature, which is not manifest in ⁱ his sight: but all things are naked and open unto his eyes, with whom we have to do.

14 ⁵ Seeing then that we have a great High Priest, which is entered into heaven, even Jesus the Son of God, let us ^k hold fast our profession:

15 ⁶ For we have not an High Priest, which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all things tempted in like sort, yet without sin.

16 Let

¹ While to-day lasteth, that is to say, so long as the gospel is offered to us.

² Now he considereth these words, 'If you hear his voice, &c. shewing that they are spoken and meant of the hearing of faith, against which he letteth hardening through unbelief.

^k That beginning of trust and confidence: and after the manner of the Hebrews, he calleth that, beginning, which is chiefest.

¹ So long as this voice soundeth out.

² By these words, 'His voice,' he sheweth that David meant the preaching of Christ, who was then also preached, for Moses and the prophets respected none other.

³ He compareth the preaching of the gospel to drink, which being drunk, that is to say, heard, profiteth nothing, unless it be tempered with faith.

⁴ Lest any man should object that those words were meant of the land of Canaan, and of Moses's doctrine, and therefore cannot be well drawn to Christ, and to eternal life; the apostle sheweth that there are two manner of rests spoken of in the scriptures: the one of the seventh day, wherein God is said to have rested from all his works: another is said to be that same, whereunto Joshua led the people: but this rest is not the last rest whereunto we are called: and that he proveth by two reasons. For seeing that David so long time after, speaking to the people which were then placed in the land of Canaan, useth these words, To-day, and threateneth them still that they shall not enter into the rest of God, which refused, then the voice of God that sounded in their ears, we must needs say that he meant another time than the time of Moses, and another rest than the rest of the land of Canaan; and that is, that everlasting rest, wherein we begin to live to God, after that the race of this life ceaseth: as God rested the seventh day from those his works, that is to say, from making the world. Moreover the apostle therewithal signifieth that the way to this rest, which Moses and the land of Canaan, and all that order of the law did shadow, is opened in the gospel only.

⁵ He speaketh of Joshua the son of Nun: and as the land of Canaan was a figure of our true rest, so was Joshua a figure of Christ.

^c As God rested the seventh day, so must we rest from our works, that is, from such as proceed from our corrupt nature.

³ He returneth to an exhortation.

^d Lest any man become a like example of infidelity.

⁴ An amplification taken from the nature of the word of God, the power wherof is such, that it entereth even to the deepest and most inward and secret parts of the heart, wounding them deadly that are stubborn, and plainly quickening the believers.

^e The doctrine of God which is preached both in the law and in the gospel.

^f He calleth the word of God lively, by reason of the effects it worketh in them to whom it is preached.

^g He calleth that the soul which hath the affections resident in it.

^h By the spirit, he meaneth that noblest part which is called the mind.

ⁱ In God's sight.

⁵ Now he entereth into the comparison of Christ's priesthood with Aaron's, and declareth even in the very beginning the marvellous excellency of this priesthood, calling him the Son of God, and placing him in the seat of God in heaven, plainly and evidently setting him against Aaron's priests, and the transitory tabernacle, which comparisons he setteth forth afterward more at large.

^k And let it not go out of our hands.

⁶ Lest he might seem by this great glory of our High Priest, to stay and stop us from going unto him, he addeth straightways after, that he is notwithstanding our brother indeed, (as he proved it also before) and that he accounteth all our miseries his own, to call us boldly to him.

A. D. 64. 10 Let us therefore go boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may receive mercy, and find grace to help in the time of need.

C H A P. V.

1 First he sheweth the duty of the high priest: 5 Secondly, that Christ is appointed of God to be our high Priest, 7 and that he hath fulfilled all things belonging therunto.

FOR every high priest is taken from among men, and is ordained for men, in things pertaining to God, ² that he may offer both gifts and ³ sacrifices for sins,

2 Which is ⁴ able sufficiently to have compassion ⁵ on them that are ignorant, and that are out of the way, because that he is also ⁶ compassed with infirmity,

3 And for the same's sake he is bound to offer for sins, as well for his own part, as for the people's.

• 1 Chron. 13. 12. and 23. 13. 4 ⁷ And no man taketh this honour unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron.

5 So likewise Christ took not to himself this honour, to be made the high priest: but he that said unto him, * Thou art my Son, this day began I thee, gave it him.

• Ps. 2. 7. Ch. 1. 5. Heb. 1. 4. Ch. 7. 17. * Ch. 7. 15. 6 As he also in another place speaketh, * Thou art a priest for ever, after the ¹ order of Melchisedek:

7 ² Who in the ³ days of his flesh did offer up prayers and supplications, with strong crying and tears, unto him that was able to ⁴ save him from death, and was also heard in that which he feared.

8 And though he were the Son, yet ⁵ learned he obedience by the things which he suffered.

9 ⁶ And being ⁷ consecrate, was made the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him:

10 And is called of God an high priest after the order of Melchisedek:

² The first part of the first comparison of Christ's high priesthood with Aaron's: Other high priests are taken from among men, and are called after the order of men.

³ The first part of the second comparison: Others as weak are made high priests, to the end that feeling the same infirmity in themselves which is in all the rest of the people, they should in their own and the people's name offer gifts and sacrifices, which are witnesses of common faith and repentance.

⁴ Offering of things without life.

⁵ Beasts which were killed, but especially in the sacrifices for sins and offences.

⁶ Fit and meet.

⁷ On them that are sinful: for in the Hebrew tongue, under ignorance and error is every sin meant, even that sin that is voluntary.

⁸ For that he himself beareth about with him a nature subject to the same discommodities and vices.

⁹ The third comparison which is whole. The others are called of God, and so was Christ, but in another order than Aaron: for Christ is called the Son, begotten of God, and a Priest for ever after the order of Melchisedek.

¹⁰ After the likeness or manner as it is afterward declared.

¹¹ The other part of the second comparison: Christ being exceedingly afflicted, and exceedingly merciful, asked not for his sins, for he had none, but for his fear, and obtained his request, and offered himself for all his.

¹² While he lived here with us, in our weak and frail nature.

¹³ To deliver him from death.

¹⁴ He learned indeed what it is to have a Father, whom a man must obey.

¹⁵ The other part of the first comparison. But Christ was consecrate of God the Father as the author of our salvation, and an high priest for ever, and therefore he is so a man, that notwithstanding he is far above all men.

11 ⁶ Of whom we have many things to say, which are hard to be uttered, because ye are dull of hearing.

12 ⁷ For when as concerning the time ye ought to be teachers, yet have ye need again that we teach you what are the first principles of the word of God: and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat,

13 For every one that useth milk, is inexperienced in the ¹ word of righteousness: for he is a babe.

14 But strong meat belongeth to them that are of age, which through long custom have their ² wits exercised to discern both good and evil.

C H A P. VI.

1 He briefly toucheth the childish slothfulness of the Hebrews, 4 and terrifieth them with severe threatenings: 7 He stirreth them up to endeavour in time to go forward: 9 He hopeth well of them: 13 He alledgeth Abraham's example, 17 and compareth faith that taketh hold on the word, 19 unto an anchor.

THEREFORE, leaving the doctrine of the ¹ beginnings of Christ, let us be led forward unto perfection, ² not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God,

2 Of the doctrine of baptism, and laying on of hands, and of the resurrection from the dead, and of eternal judgment.

3 And this will we do if God permit:

4 ³ For it is ⁴ impossible that they which were once lightened, and have ⁵ tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost,

5 And have tasted of the good word of God, and of the powers of the world to come,

6 If they fall away, should be renewed again by repentance: seeing they ⁶ crucify again to themselves the Son of God, and make a mock of him: 7 For ⁶ Look chap. 2. 10.

⁷ A digression until he come to the beginning of the seventh chapter: wherein he partly holdeth the Hebrews in the diligent consideration of those things which he hath said, and partly prepareth them to the understanding of those things whereof he will speak.

⁸ An example of an apostolic chiding.

⁹ In the word which teacheth righteousness.

¹⁰ All their power whereby they understand and judge.

¹¹ The first principles of Christian religion, which we do call the catechism.

¹² Certain principles of a catechism, which comprehend the sum of the doctrine of the gospel, were given in few words, and briefly to the rude and ignorant, to wit, the profession of repentance and faith in God: the articles of which doctrine, were demanded of them which were not as yet received members of the church, at the days appointed for baptism: and of the children of the faithful which were baptized in their infancy, when hands were laid upon them. And of those articles, two are by name recited: the resurrection of the flesh, and the eternal judgment.

¹³ He addeth a vehemency to his exhortation, and a most sharp threatening of the certain destruction that shall come to them which fall from God and his religion.

¹⁴ He speaketh of a general backsliding, and such as do altogether fall away from the faith, and not of sins which are committed through the frailty of a man against the first and second table.

¹⁵ We must mark the force of this word, for it is one thing to believe as Lydia did, whose heart God opened, Acts 16. 13. and another thing to have some taste.

¹⁶ As men that hate Christ, and, as though they crucified him again, make him a mocking-stock to all the world, and that to their own destruction, as Julian the apostate or backslider did.

A. D. 64. 7³ For the earth which drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them by whom it is dressed, receiveth blessing of God :

8 But that which beareth thorns and briers, is reprov'd, and is near unto cursing, whose end is to be burned.

9 + But beloved; we have persuaded ourselves better things of you, and such as accompany salvation; though we thus speak :

10⁵ For God is not unrighteous that he should forget your work, and labour of love, which ye shewed toward his name, in that ye have ministered unto the saints, and yet minister.

11 And we desire that every one of you shew the same diligence; to the full assurance of hope unto the end :

12⁶ That ye be not slothful, but followers of them which through faith and patience inherit the promises.

13⁷ For when God made the promise to Abraham, because he had no greater to swear by, he swore by himself,

14⁸ Saying, * Surely I will abundantly bless thee, and multiply thee marvellously :

15 And so after that he had tarried patiently, he enjoyed the promise.

16 For men verily swear by him that is greater than themselves, and an oath for confirmation is among them an end of all strife.

17 So God, willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise the stableness of his counsel, bound himself by an oath,

18 That by two immutable things, wherein it is impossible that God should lye, we might have strong consolation, which have our refuge to lay hold upon that hope that is set before us :

19⁸ Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and stedfast, and it entereth into that which is within the veil,

20⁹ Whither the forerunner is for us entered in, even Jesus, that is made an high priest: for ever after the order of Melchisedec. A. D. 64.

CHAP. VII.

1 He hath hitherto stirred them up, to mark diligently what things are to be considered in Melchisedec, 15 whereunto he is like unto Christ, 20 wherefore the law should give place to the gospel.

FOR this Melchisedec * was king of Salem, the priest of the most high God; who met Abraham, as he returned from the slaughter of the kings, and ² blessed him: * Gen. 14. 18.

2 To whom also Abraham gave the tithe of all things: who first is by interpretation king of righteousness: after that he is also king of Salem, that is, king of peace:

3² Without father, without mother, without kindred, and hath neither beginning of his days, neither end of life: but is likened unto the Son of God, and continueth a priest for ever:

4³ Now consider how great this man was, unto whom even the patriarch Abraham gave the tithe of the spoils.

5 For verily they which are the children of Levi, which receive the office of the priesthood, have a * commandment to take, according to the law, tithes of the people (that is, of their brethren) though they came out of the loins of Abraham. * Num. 18. 21.

6 But he whose kindred is not counted among them, received titles of Abraham, and blessed him that had the promises.

7 And without all contradiction the less is blessed of the greater.

8 And here men that die, receive tithes: but there he receiveth them, of whom it is witnessed, that he liveth.

9⁴ And to say as the thing is, Levi also which receiveth tithes, payed tithes in Abraham.

10 For he was yet in the loins of his father Abraham, when Melchisedec met him.

11⁵ If therefore perfection had been by the priest-

3 X

³ He setteth forth the former threatening with a similitude.

⁴ He mitigateth and assuageth all that sharpness, hoping better of them to whom he writeth.

⁵ He praiseth them for their charity, thereby encouraging them to go forward, and to hold out to the end.

⁶ He sheweth what virtues chiefly they have need of to go forward constantly, and also to profit: to wit, of charity, and patience: and lest any man should object and say, that these things are impossible to be done, he willeth them to set before themselves the examples of their ancestors, and to follow them.

⁷ Another prick; to prick them forward: Because the hope of the inheritance is certain, if we continue to the end, for God hath not only promised it, but also promised it with an oath.

⁸ I will heap up benefits most plentifully upon thee.

⁹ More than was needful, were it not for the wickedness of men which believe not God, no, though he swear:

¹⁰ He likeneth hope to an anchor: because that even as an anchor, being cast into the bottom of the sea, stayeth the whole ship, so doth hope also enter even into the very secret places of heaven. And he maketh mention of the sanctuary, alluding to the old tabernacle, and by this means returneth to the comparisons of the priesthood of Christ with the Levitical.

¹² Declaring those words, ' according to the order of Melchisedec,' whereupon that comparison standeth of the priesthood of Christ with the Levitical: first, Melchisedec himself is considered as the figure of Christ, and these are the heads of that comparison: Melchisedec was a king and a priest, and such an one indeed is Christ alone. He was a king of peace and righteousness, such an one indeed is Christ alone.

¹³ With a solemn and priestly blessing.

¹⁴ Another figure: Melchisedec is set before us to be considered as one without beginning and without ending, for neither his father, nor his mother, nor his ancestors, nor his death, are written of: and such an one indeed is the Son of God, to wit, an everlasting Priest: as he is God, without mother wonderfully begotten: as he is man, without father wonderfully conceived.

¹⁵ Another figure: Melchisedec in consideration of his priesthood was above Abraham: for he took tenths of him, and blessed him as a priest: such a one indeed is Christ, upon whom dependeth even Abraham's sanctification, and all the believers, and whom all men ought to worship and reverence as the author of all.

¹⁶ Were begotten of Abraham.

¹⁷ He speaketh of the public blessing which the priests used.

¹⁹ The third treatise of this epistle, wherein after he hath proved Christ to be a King, a Prophet and Priest, he now handleth distinctly the condition and excellency of all these offices, shewing that all these were but shadows in all others, but in Christ they are true and perfect. And he beginneth with the priesthood, wherewith also the former treatise ended, that by this means all the parts and members of the disputation may better hang together. And first of all he proveth that the Levitical priesthood was imperfect, because another priest is promised a long time after, and according to another order, that is to say, of another manner of rule and fashion.

²⁰ If the priesthood of Levi could have made any man perfect.

A. D. 64. priesthood of the Levites (for under it the law was established to the people) what needed it furthermore that another priest should rise after the order of Melchisedec, and not to be called after the order of Aaron?

12^o For if the priesthood be changed, then of necessity must there be a change of the^c law.

13 For he of whom these things are spoken, pertaineth unto another tribe, whereof no man^f served at the altar:

14 For it is evident, that our Lord sprung out of Judah, concerning the which tribe Moses spake nothing touching the priesthood.

15⁷ And it is yet a more evident thing, because that after the similitude of Melchisedec there is risen up another priest, 16⁸ Which is not made priest after the⁸ law of the carnal commandment, but after the power of the endless life.

• Pl. 11. 4. • Ch. 5. 7. 17 For he testifieth thus,² Thou art a priest for ever, after the order of Melchisedec.

18⁹ For the⁹ commandment that went afore, is disannulled, because of the weakness thereof, and unprofitableness.

19 For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope made perfect, whereby we draw near unto God.

20¹⁰ And forasmuch as it is not without an oath (for these are made priests without an oath:

• Pl. 11. 4. 21 But this is made with an oath by him that said unto him, - The Lord hath sworn, and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever, after the order of Melchisedec,) 22 By so much is Jesus made a surety of a better testament.

23¹¹ And among them many were made priests, because they were not suffered to endure, by the reason of death:

^c He sheweth how that by the institution of the new priesthood, not only the imperfection of the priesthood of Levi was declared, but also that it was changed for this: for these two cannot stand together, because that first appointment of the tribe of Levi did shut forth the tribe of Juda, and made it also inferior to Levi: and this latter doth place the priesthood in the tribe of Juda.

^d Of the institution of Aaron.

^e Had any thing to do about the altar.

^f Lest any man might object, that the priesthood indeed was translated from Levi to Juda, but yet notwithstanding the same remaineth still, he both weigheth and expoundeth those words of David, 'for ever according to the order of Melchisedec.' whereby also a diverse institution of priesthood is well perceived.

^g He proveth the diversity and excellency of the institution of Melchisedec's priesthood, by this, that the priesthood of the law did stand upon an outward and bodily anointing: but the sacrifice of Melchisedec is set out to be everlasting and more spiritual.

^h Not after the ordination, which commandeth frail and transitory things, as was done in Aaron's consecration, and all that whole priesthood.

ⁱ Again, that no man might object that the last priesthood was added to make a perfect one, by the coupling of them both together, he proveth that the first was abrogated by the latter, as unprofitable, and that by the nature of them both. For how could those corporal and transitory things sanctify us, either of themselves, or being joined with another?

^j The ceremonial law.

^k Another argument, whereby he proveth that the priesthood of Christ is better than the priesthood of Levi, because his was established with an oath, but theirs was not so.

^l Another argument tending to the same purpose. The Levitical priests (as mortal men) could not be everlasting; but Christ, as he is everlasting, so hath he also an everlasting priesthood, making most effectual intercession for them which by him come unto God.

^m Which cannot pass away.

ⁿ He is fit and meet.

^o Another argument: There are required in an high

24 But this man, because he endureth ever, hath a priesthood which¹ cannot pass from one to another.

25 Wherefore, he is² able also perfectly to save them that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them.

26¹² For such an high priest it became us to have, which is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens:

27 Which needeth not daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifice, ³ first for his own¹ sins, and then for the people's: ¹³ for¹ that¹¹ did he¹² once, when he offered up himself.

28 For the law maketh men high priests, which have infirmity: but the¹⁴ word of the oath¹⁵ that¹⁶ was since the law, maketh the Son, who is consecrated for evermore.

C H A P. VIII.

1 To prove more certainly that the ceremonies of the law are abrogated, 5 he sheweth that they were appointed to serve the heavenly pattern: 8 he bringeth in the place of Jeremiab, 15 to prove the amendment of the old covenant.

NOW¹ of the things which we have spoken, this is the sum, that we have such an high priest, that sitteth at the right hand of the throne of the majesty in heavens,

2² And is a minister of the³ sanctuary,⁴ and of that⁵ true tabernacle which the Lord pitched, and not man:

3⁶ For every high priest is ordained to offer both gifts and sacrifices: wherefore it was of necessity that this man should have somewhat also to offer:

4⁷ For he were not a priest, if he were on the priest, innocency and perfect pureness, which may separate him from sinners, for whom he offereth. But the Levitical high priests shall not be found to be such, for they offer first for their own sins: but Christ only is such a one, and therefore the true and only high Priest.

¹³ Another argument, which notwithstanding he handleth afterward: The Levitical priests offered sacrifice after sacrifice, first for themselves, and then for the people. But Christ offered not for himself, but for others; not sacrifices, but himself; not oftentimes, but once. And this ought not to seem strange, saith he, forasmuch as they are weak, but this man is consecrate an everlasting priest, and that by an oath.

¹ That sacrifice which he offered.

² It was so done, that it needeth not to be repeated or offered again any more.

³ The commandment of God, which was bound with an oath.

¹⁴ Another argument taken of the time: former things are taken away by the latter.

¹⁵ Exhibited.

¹ He briefly repeateth that, whereunto all these things are to be referred, to wit, that we have a far other high priest than those Levitical high priests are, even such an one as sitteth at the right hand of the most high God in heaven.

² They of Levi were high priests in an earthly sanctuary, but Christ is in the heavenly.

³ Of heaven.

⁴ They of Levi exercised their priesthood in a frail tabernacle, but Christ beareth about with him a far other tabernacle, to wit, his body, which God himself made to be everlasting, as it shall afterward be declared, chap. 9. 11.

⁵ Of his body.

⁶ He bringeth a reason, why it must needs be that Christ should have a body, which he calleth a Tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man) to wit, that he might have what to offer: for otherwise he could not be an high priest. And the self-same body is both the tabernacle and the sacrifice.

⁷ He giveth a reason, why he said that our high priest is in the heavenly sanctuary, and not in the earthly: because,

A. D. 64. the earth, seeing there are priests that according to the law offer gifts,

5 Who serve unto the pattern and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was warned by God, when he was about to finish the tabernacle. * See, said he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount.

6 ⁶ But now our high priest hath obtained a more excellent office, inasmuch as he is the Mediator of a better testament, which is established upon better promises.

7 ⁷ For if that first testament had been unblameable, no place should have been sought for the second.

8 For in rebuking them he saith, * Behold, the days will come, saith the Lord, when I shall make with the ^c house of Israel, and with the house of Judah, a new testament :

9 Not like the testament that I made with their fathers, in the day that I took them by the hand, to lead them out of the land of Egypt : for they continued not in my testament, and I regarded them not, saith the Lord.

10 For this is the testament that I will make with the house of Israel, After those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws in their mind, and in their heart I will write them, and I will be their God, and they shall be my people :

11 And they shall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord : for all shall know me, from the least of them to the greatest of them.

12 For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and I will remember their sins and their iniquities no more.

13 ⁸ In that he saith, a new testament, he hath abrogated the old : now that which is disannulled and waxed old, is ready to vanish away.

C H A P IX.

2 Comparing the form of the tabernacle, 10 and the ceremonies of the law, 11 unto the truth set out in cause, saith he, if he were now on the earth, he could not minister in the earthly sanctuary, seeing there are yet Levitical priests which are appointed for him, that is to say, to be patterns of that perfect example. And to what purpose should the patterns serve, when the true original example is present ?

⁶ He entereth into the comparison of the old and transitory testament or covenant, being but for a time, whereas the Levitical priests were mediators, with the new, the everlasting mediator whereof is Christ, to shew, that this is not only better than that in all respects, but also that that was abrogated by this.

⁷ He proveth by the testimony of Jeremiah, that there is a second testament or covenant, and therefore that the first was not perfect.

^c He calleth it an house, as it were one family of the whole kingdom : for whereas the kingdom of David was divided into two factions, the prophet giveth us to understand, that through the New Testament they shall be joined together again in one.

⁸ The conclusion therefore by the latter and the new, the first and old is taken away, for it could not be called new, if it differed not from the old ; and again, that same is at length taken away, which is subject to corruption, and therefore imperfect.

¹ A division of the first tabernacle, which he calleth worldly, that is to say, transitory, and earthly, into two parts, to wit, into the holy places, and the holiest of all.

^a An earthly and a sitting.

^b He calleth it the second veil, not because there were two veils, but because it was behind the sanctuary, or the first tabernacle.

^c The holiest sanctuary.

^d The Hebrews call the cover of the ark of the covenant, the mercy seat, whom both the Grecians and we follow.

^e Now he cometh to the sacrifices, which he divideth

Christ, 15 he concludeth that now there is no more need of another priest, 24 because Christ himself hath fulfilled these duties under the new covenant.

A. D. 67:

THEN ¹ the first testament had also ordinances of religion, and a ² worldly sanctuary.

² For the first tabernacle was made, wherein was the candlestick, and the table, and the shewbread, which tabernacle is called the holy places.

³ And after ^b the second veil was the tabernacle, which is called the ^c holiest of all,

⁴ Which had the golden center, and the ark of the testament overlaid round about with gold, wherein the golden pot which had manna was, and * Aaron's rod that had budded, and the ^e tables of the testament.

⁵ * And over the ark were the glorious cherubims, shadowing the ^d mercy seat : of which things we will not now speak particularly.

⁶ ² Now when these things were thus ordained, the priests went always into the first tabernacle, and accomplished the service.

⁷ But into the second went the * high priest alone, once every year, not without blood, which he offered for himself, and for the ^c ignorances of the people.

⁸ ¹ Whereby the Holy Ghost this signified, that the way into the holiest of all was not yet opened, while as yet the first tabernacle was standing,

⁹ ⁴ Which was a figure ^f for that present time, wherein were offered gifts and sacrifices that could not make holy, concerning the conscience, him that did the service,

¹⁰ ⁵ Which only stood in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal rites, ^g which were enjoined, until the time of reformation.

¹¹ ⁶ But Christ being come an high priest of good things to come, ⁷ by a ^h greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is not of this building, into those daily sacrifices, and that yearly and solemn sacrifice, with the which the high priest only but once every year, entering into the holiest of all with blood, offered for himself and the people.

^c For the sins, look chap. 5. 2.

³ Of that yearly rite and the ceremony, he gathereth that the way was not by such sacrifices opened into heaven, which was shadowed by the holiest of all : for why did the high priest alone enter in thither, shutting out all other, and that to offer sacrifices there both for himself, and for others, and after, did that the Holiest of all again ?

⁴ An objection : If the way were not opened into heaven by those sacrifices (that is to say, if the worshippers were not purged by them) why then were those ceremonies used ? To wit, that men might be called back to that spiritual example, that is to say, to Christ, who should correct all those things at his coming.

^f For that time that that figure had to last.

⁵ Another reason why they could not make clean the conscience of the worshippers, to wit, because they were outward and carnal, or corporal things.

^g For they were, as you would say, a burden, from which Christ delivered us.

⁶ Now he entereth into the declaration of the figures, and first of all comparing the Levitical high priest with Christ, (that is to say, the figure with the thing itself) he attributeth to Christ the administration of good things to come ; that is, everlasting, which those carnal things had respect unto.

⁷ Another comparison of the first corruptible tabernacle with the latter, (that is to say, with the human nature of Christ) which is the true incorruptible temple of God, whereinto the Son of God entered, as the Levitical high priests into the other, which was frail and transitory.

^h By a more excellent and better.

* Jer. 31. 31, 32, 33. 34. Rom. 11. 27. Ch. 10. 16.

* Num. 1. 10. * 1 Kings 8. 9. * Iron. 5. 10. * Exod. 25. 22.

* Exod. 30. 16. Lev. 16. 7.

A. D. 67. 12 Neither by the blood of goats and calves: but by his own blood entered he once into the holy place, and obtained eternal redemption for us.

• Lev. 16. 13 For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer, sprinkling them that are unclean, sanctifieth as touching the purifying of the flesh,

1 Pet. 1. 14 How much more shall the blood of Christ, which through the eternal Spirit offered himself without fault to God, purge your conscience from dead works, to serve the living God?

• Rom. 5. 1 Pet. 2. 12. 15 And for this cause he is the mediator of the new testament, that through death which was for the redemption of the transgressions that were in the former testament, they which were called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance.

16 For where a testament is, there must be the death of him that made the testament.

• Gal. 3. 17 For the testament is confirmed when men are dead: for it is yet of no force as long as he that made it, is alive.

18 Wherefore, neither was the first ordained without blood.

19 For when Moses had spoken every precept to the people, according to the law, he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water and purple wool and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book, and all the people,

Another comparison of the blood of the sacrifices with Christ. The Levitical high priests entering by those their holy places into their sanctuary, offered corruptible blood for one year only: but Christ entering into that holy edifice of his, entered by it into heaven itself, offering his own most pure blood for an everlasting redemption. For one self, same Christ answereth both to the high priest, and the tabernacle, and the sacrifices, and the offerings themselves, as the truth to the figures; so that Christ is both high priest, and tabernacle, and sacrifice, yea, all those both truly and for ever.

For in this yearly sacrifice of reconciliation, there were two kinds of sacrifices, the one a goat, the other a heifer, or calf.

If the outward sprinkling of blood and ashes of beasts was a true and effectual sign of purifying and cleansing, how much more shall the thing it self, and the truth it self present, which in times past was shadowed by those external sacraments, that is to say, his blood, which is in such sort man's blood, that it is also the blood of the Son of God, and therefore hath an everlasting virtue of purifying and cleansing, do it?

He considereth the signs apart, being separate from the thing itself.

From sins, which proceed from death, and bring forth nothing but death.

The conclusion of the former argument: therefore seeing the blood of beasts did not purge sins, the New Testament, which was before time promised, whereunto those outward things had respect, is now indeed established, by the virtue whereof all transgressions might be taken away, and heaven indeed opened unto us: whereof it followeth, that Christ shed his blood also for the fathers, for he was shadowed by these old ceremonies; otherwise, unless they had served to represent him, they had been nothing at all profitable. Therefore this Testament is called the latter, not as concerning the virtue of it, (that is to say, remission of sins) but in respect of that time, wherein the thing itself was finished, that is to say, wherein Christ was indeed exhibited to the world, and fulfilled all things which were necessary to our salvation.

A reason why the Testament must be established by the death of the Mediator, because this Testament hath the condition of a Testament or gift, which is made effectual by death; and therefore that it might be effectual, it must needs be that he that made the Testament should die.

There must be a proportion between those things which purify, and those which are purified: Under the law all those figures were earthly: the tabernacle, the book, the vessels, the sacrifices, although they were the signs of heavenly things. Therefore it was requisite, that all those should be purified with some matter and ceremony of the same nature, to wit, with the blood of beasts, with 20 Saying, This is the blood of the testament, which God hath appointed unto you.

21 Moreover, he sprinkled likewise the tabernacle with blood also, and all the ministring vessels.

22 And almost all things are by the law purged with blood, and without shedding of blood is no remission.

23 It was then necessary, that the similitudes of heavenly things should be purified with such things: but the heavenly things themselves are purified with better sacrifices than are these:

24 For Christ is not entered into the holy places that are made with hands, which are similitudes of the true sanctuary: but is entered into very heaven, to appear now in the sight of God for us,

25 Not that he should offer himself often, as the high priest entered into the holy place every year with other blood, 26 (For then must he have often suffered since the foundation of the world) but now in the end of the world hath he been made manifest once, to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.

27 And as it is appointed unto men that they shall once die, and after that cometh the judgment:

28 So Christ was once offered to take away the sins of many, and unto them that look for him, shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation.

CHAP.

water, wool, hyssop. But under Christ all things are heavenly, an heavenly tabernacle, an heavenly sacrifice, an heavenly people, an heavenly doctrine, and heavenly life, open before us for an everlasting habitation. Therefore all these things are sanctified in like sort, to wit, with that everlasting offering of the quickening blood of Christ.

As the Lord had commanded.

He used to sprinkle.

The similitudes of heavenly things were earthly, and therefore they were to be set forth with earthly things, as with the blood of beasts, and wool, and hyssop. But under Christ all things are heavenly, and therefore they could not but be sanctified with the offering of his lively blood.

Another double comparison: The Levitical high priest entered into the sanctuary, which was made indeed by the commandment of God, but yet with men's hands, that it might be a pattern of another more excellent, to wit, of the heavenly palace. But Christ entered into heaven itself. Again, he appeared before the ark, but Christ before God the Father himself.

Another double comparison: The Levitical high priest offered other blood, but Christ offered his own: He every year once iterated his offering: Christ offering himself but once, abolished sin altogether, both of the former ages, and of the ages to come.

An argument to prove that Christ's offering ought not to be repeated: Seeing that sins were to be purged from the beginning of the world, and it is proved that sins cannot be purged but by the only blood of Christ: he must needs have died oftentimes, since the beginning of the world. But a man can die but once: therefore Christ's oblation, which was once done in the latter days, neither could nor can be repeated. Seeing then it is so, surely the virtue of it extendeth both to sins that were before, and to sins that are after his coming.

In the latter days.

That whole root of sin.

He speaketh of the natural state and condition of man: For as for Lazarus, and certain others that died twice, that was no usual thing, but extraordinary: and as for them that shall be changed, their changing is a kind of death, 1 Cor. 15. 51.

Thus the general promise is restrained to the elect only: and we have to seek the testimony of our election, not in the secret counsel of God, but in the effects that our faith worketh; and so we must climb up from the lowest step to the highest, there to find such comfort as is most certain, and shall never be moved.

Shortly by the way he setteth out Christ as a judge, partly to terrify them, which do not rest themselves in the only oblation of Christ once made, and partly to keep the faithful in their duty, that they go not back.

C H A P. X.

1 He proveth that the sacrifices of the law were imperfect, 2 because they were yearly renewed. 5 But that the sacrifice of Christ is one, and perpetual, 6 he proveth by David's testimony: 19 Then he addeth an exhortation, 29 and severely threateneth them that reject the grace of Christ. 36 In the end he praiseth patience, 38 that cometh of faith.

FOR the law having the shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices, which they offer year by year continually, sanctify the comers thereunto:

2 For would they not then have ceased to have been offered, because that the offerers once purged, should have no more conscience of sins?

3 But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again of sins every year.

4 For it is impossible that the blood of bulls and goats should take away sins.

5 Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, * Sacrifice and offering thou wouldst not: but a body hast thou ordained me.

6 In burnt-offerings and sin-offerings thou hast had no pleasure.

7 Then I said, Lo, I come (In the beginning of the book it is written of me) that I should do thy will, O God.

8 Above when he said, Sacrifice and offering, and burnt-offerings, and sin-offerings thou wouldst not have, neither hadst pleasure therein (which are offered by the law)

9 Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God: he taketh away the first, that he may establish the second.

10 By the which will we are sanctified, even by the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once made. A. D. 64.

11 And every priest standeth daily ministering, and oft-times offereth one manner of offering, which can never take away sins.

12 But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins, sitteth for ever at the right hand of God, 13 And from henceforth carrieth, till his enemies be made his footstool.

14 For with one offering hath he consecrated for ever them that are sanctified.

15 For the Holy Ghost also beareth us record: for after that he had said before,

16 * This is the testament that I will make unto them after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws in their heart; and in their minds I will write them, 17 And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more.

18 Now where remission of these things is, there is no more offering for sin.

19 Seeing therefore, brethren, that by the blood of Jesus we may be bold to enter into the holy place,

20 By the new and living way, which he hath prepared for us, through the vail, that is, his flesh:

21 And seeing we have an high priest, which is over the house of God,

22 Let us draw near with a true heart in assurance of faith, our hearts being pure from an evil conscience:

23 And washed in our bodies with pure water; let us keep the profession of our hope, without wavering, (for he is faithful that promised)

3 Y 24 And

¹ He preventeth a privy objection. Why then were those sacrifices offered? The apostle answereth, first touching that yearly sacrifice which was the solemnest of all, wherein (saith he) there was made every year a remembrance again of all former sins. Therefore that sacrifice had no power to sanctify: for to what purpose should those sins which are purged be repeated again; and wherefore should new sins come to be repeated every year, if those sacrifices did abolish sin?

² Of things which are everlasting, which were promised to the fathers, and exhibited in Christ.

³ A conclusion following of those things that went before, and comprehending also the other sacrifices. Seeing that the sacrifices of the law could not do it, therefore Christ speaking of himself as of our high priest, manifested in the flesh, witnesseth evidently that God rested not in the sacrifices, but in the obedience of his Son, our high priest, in whose obedience he offered up himself once to his Father for us.

⁴ The Son of God is said to come into the world, when he was made man.

⁵ It is word for word in the Hebrew text, Thou hast pierced mine ears through, that is, thou hast made me obedient, and willing to hear.

⁶ That is, the sacrifices, to establish the second, that is, the will of God.

⁷ A conclusion with the other part of the comparison: The Levitical high priest repeateth the same sacrifices daily in his sanctuary: whereupon it followeth, that neither those sacrifices, neither those offerings, neither those high priests, could take away sins. But Christ having offered one sacrifice once for the sins of all men, and having sanctified his own for ever, sitteth at the right hand of the Father, having all power in his hands.

⁸ At the altar.

⁹ He preventeth a privy objection, to wit, that yet notwithstanding we are subject to sin and death: whereunto the apostle answereth, that the full efficacy of Christ's virtue hath not yet shewed itself, but shall at length appear, when he will at once put to flight all his enemies, with whom as yet we strive.

⁵ Although there do yet remain in us reliques of sin, yet the work of our sanctification which is to be perfected; hangeth upon the self same sacrifice, which never shall be repeated: and that the apostle proveth by alledging again the testimony of Jeremy, thus: Sin is taken away by the New Testament, seeing the Lord saith, that it shall come to pass, that, according to the form of it, he will no more remember our sins: Therefore we need now no purging sacrifice to take away that which is already taken away; but we must rather take pains, that we may now through faith be partakers of that sacrifice.

⁶ Why then, where is the fire of purgatory, and that Popish distinction of the fault, and the punishment?

⁷ He said well, for sin: for there remaineth another offering, to wit, of thanksgiving.

⁸ The sum of the former treatise: We are not shut out now of the holy place, as the fathers were, but we have an entrance into the true holy place (that is, into heaven) seeing that we are purged with the blood, not of beasts, but of Jesus. Neither, as in times past, doth the high priest shut us out, by setting the vail against us, but through the vail, which is his flesh, he hath brought us into heaven itself, being present with us, so that we have now truly an high priest, which is over the house of God.

⁹ So Christ's flesh sheweth us the godhead, as it were under a vail. For otherwise we were not able to abide the brightness of it.

¹⁰ A most grave exhortation, wherein he sheweth how that sacrifice of Christ may be applied to us: to wit, by faith, which also he describeth by the consequences, to wit, by sanctification of the Spirit, which causeth us surely to hope in God, and to procure by all means possible one another's salvation, through the love that is in us one towards another.

¹¹ With no double and counterfeit heart, but with such an heart as is truly and indeed given to God.

¹² This is it which the Lord saith, Be ye holy, for I am holy.

¹³ With the grace of the Holy Ghost.

25 Not forsaking the fellowship that we have among ourselves, as the manner of some is: but let us exhort one another,^s and that so much the more, because ye see that the day draweth near.

• Ca. 5. 4. 26 * For if we sinⁿ willingly after that we have received and acknowledged that truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, 27 But a fearful looking for of judgment, and violent fire, which shall devour theⁿ adversaries.

• Deut. 19. 28 ^o He that despiseth Moses's law, dieth without mercyⁿ under two or three witnesses:

• Deut. 19. 15. 29 Of how much sorer punishment suppose ye shall he be worthy, which treadeth under foot the Son of God, and counteth the blood of the testament as an unholy thing, wherewith he was sanctified, and doth despite the Spirit of grace?

• Deut. 32. 30 ^o For we know him that hath said, * Vengeance belongeth unto me: I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again, the Lord shall^o judge his people.

31 It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

32 ^o Now call to remembrance the days that are passed, in the which, after ye had received light, ye endured a great fight in afflictions, 33 Partly while ye were made a^p gazing stock both by reproaches and afflictions, and partly while ye becameⁿ companions of them which were so tossed to and fro.

34 For both ye sorrowed with me for my bonds, and suffered with joy the spoiling of your goods, knowing in yourselves how that ye have in heaven a better, and an enduring^r substance.

35 Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompence of reward.

36 For ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise.

37 For yet a very^r little while, and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry.

^s Having mentioned the last coming of Christ, he stirreth up the godly to the meditation of an holy life, and cirteth the faithless fallers from God to the fearful judgment seat of the Judge, because they wickedly rejected him in whom only salvation consisteth.

ⁿ Without any cause or occasion, or shew of occasion.

^o For it is another matter to sin through the frailty of man's nature, and another thing to proclaim war as it were to God as to an enemy.

^o If the breach of the law of Moses was punished by death, how much more worthy death is it to fall away from Christ?

^o The reason of all these things is, because God is a revenger of such as despise him: otherwise he should not rightly govern his church. Now there is nothing more horrible than the wrath of the living God.

^o Rule or govern.

^o As he terrified the fallers away from God, so doth he now comfort them that are constant, and stand; strongly setting before them the success of their former fights, so stirring them up to a sure hope of a full and ready victory.

C H A P. XI.

1 He declareth in the whole chapter, that the fathers, which from the beginning of the world were approved of God, attained salvation no other way than by faith, that the Jews may know, that by the same only, they are knit unto the fathers in an holy union.

NOW^r faith is the ground of things which are hoped for, and the evidence of things which are not seen.

2 ⁿ For by it *our*ⁿ elders were well reported of.

3 ^o Through faith we understand that the world was ordained by the word of God, so that the things which we^b see, are not made of things which did appear.

4 ^o By faith Abel^o offered unto God a greater sacrifice than Cain, by the which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts: by the which faith also he being dead, yet speaketh.

5 ^o By faith was^o Enoch translated, that he should not^c see death: neither was he found: for God had translated him: for before he was translated, he was reported of, that he had pleased God.

6 But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God, must believe that God is, and that he is a^d rewarder of them that seek him.

7 ^o By faith^o Noah, being warned of God of the things which were as yet not seen, moved with repentance, prepared the ark to the saving of his household, through the which ark he condemned the world, and was made heir of the righteousness which is by faith.

8 ^o By faith^o Abraham, when he was called, obeyed God, to go out into a place which he should afterward receive for inheritance: and he went out, not knowing whither he went.

9 By faith he abode in the land of promise, as in a strange country, as one that dwelt in tents with Isaac and Jacob, heirs with him of the same promise:

10 For he looked for a city having a^c foundation, whose builder and maker is God.

11 Through faith^o Sarah also received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when effect, because it is the only way to life: which sentence he setteth forth, and amplifieth, by setting the contrary against it.

^r An excellent description of faith by the effects, because it representeth things which are but yet in hope, and setteth, as it were, before our eyes things that are invisible.

ⁿ He sheweth that the fathers ought to be accounted of by this virtue.

^o That is, those fathers of whom we came: and whose authority and example ought to move us very much.

^o He sheweth the property of faith, by setting out unto us most picked examples of such as from the beginning of the world excelled in the church.

ABRAHAM'S FAITH.

A. D. when she was past age, because she judged him faithful which had promised.

12 And therefore sprang there of one, even of one which was ^f dead, so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand of the sea shore which is innumerable.

13 All these died in ^e faith, and received not the ^h promises, but saw them afar off, and believed them, and ⁱ received them thankfully, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth:

14 For they that saw such things declare plainly, that they seek a country.

15 And if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they had leisure to have returned.

16 But now they desire a better, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed of them to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a city.

* Gen. 22. 17 By faith * Abraham offered up Isaac, when he was ^k tried, and he that had received the ^l promises, offered his only begotten son,

* Gen. 21. 18 (To whom it was said, * In Isaac shall thy seed be called)

Rom. 9. 7. 19 For he considered that God was able to raise him up even from the dead: from ^m whence he received him also after a ⁿ sort.

* Gen. 27. 20 ^o By faith * Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau, concerning things to come.

* Gen. 48. 21 ^p By faith * Jacob when he was a dying, blessed both the sons of Joseph, and * leaning on the end of his staff, worshipped God.

* Gen. 47. 31. * Gen. 50. 25. 22 ^q By faith * Joseph, when he died, made mention of the departing of the children of Israel, and gave commandment of his bones.

* Exod. 2. 23 ^r By faith, Moses, when he was born, was hid three months of his parents, because they saw he was a proper child, neither ^s feared they the * king's commandment.

* Exod. 1. 16. * Exod. 2. 11. 24 By faith * Moses, when he was come to age, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter,

25 And chose rather to suffer adversity with the people of God, than to enjoy the ^t pleasures of sins for a season, 26 Esteeming the rebuke of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompence of the reward.

27 By faith he forsook Egypt, and feared not the fierceness of the king: for he endured, as he that saw him which is invisible.

A. D. 28 Through faith he ordained the * passover, and the effusion of blood, lest he that destroyed the first born should touch them. Exod. 12. 64. 22.

29 ^u By faith they * passed through the red sea, as by dry land, which when the Egyptians had assayed to do, they were swallowed up. Exod. 14. 22.

30 ^v By faith the * walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compassed about seven days. Josh. 6. 20.

31 ^w By faith the ^x harlot * Rahab perished not with them which obeyed not, when * she had received the spies ^y peaceably. Josh. 6. 23. Josh. 2. 1.

32 ^z And what shall I more say? for the time would be too short for me to tell of * Gideon, of * Barac, and of * Sampson, and of * Jephtha, also of David, and Samuel, and of the prophets: Judg. 6. 11. Judg. 4. 6. Judg. 13. 24. Judg. 11. 1. and 12. 7.

33 Which through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained the ^z promises, stopped the mouths of lions,

34 Quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, of weak were made strong, waxed valiant in battle, turned to flight the armies of the aliens:

35 The ^z women received their dead raised to life: others also were ^z racked, and would not be delivered, that they might receive a better resurrection.

36 And others have been tried by mockings and scourgings; yea, moreover by bonds and imprisonment:

37 They were stoned, they were hewn asunder, they were tempted, they were slain with the sword, they wandered up and down in * sheeps skins, and in goats skins, being destitute, afflicted, and tormented:

38 Whom the world was not worthy of: they wandered in wildernesses, and mountains, and dens, and caves of the earth.

39 ^z And these all through faith obtained good report, and received ^z not the promise, 40 God providing a better thing for us, that they ^z without us should not be made perfect.

^z An amplification taken of the circumstance of the time: their faith is so much the more to be marvelled at, by how much the promises of things to come were more dark, yet at length were indeed exhibited to us, so that their faith and ours is as one, as is also their consecration and ours.

Wherefore, * let us also, seeing that we are compassed with so great a cloud of witnesses, cast away every thing that presseth down, and the sin that hangeth fast on: let us run with patience the race that is set before us,

2 * Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, and despised the shame, and is set at the right hand of the throne of God.

3 Consider therefore him that endured such speaking against of sinners, lest ye should be wearied and faint in your minds.

4 * Ye have not resisted yet unto blood, striving against sin.

5 * And ye have forgotten the consolation, which speaketh unto you as unto children, * My son, despise not the chastening of the Lord, neither faint when thou art rebuked of him.

6 For whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth: and he scourgeth every son that he receiveth.

7 If ye endure chastening, God offereth himself unto you as unto sons: for what son is it whom the father chasteneth not?

8 If therefore ye be without correction, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons.

9 * Moreover we have had the fathers of our bodies which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: should we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits, that we might live?

10 * For they verily for a few days chastened us after their own pleasure: but he chasteneth us for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness.

11 Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: but afterward it bringeth the quiet fruit of righteousness unto them which are thereby exercised.

12 * Wherefore lift up your hands which hang down, and your weak knees, 13 And make straight steps unto your feet, lest that which is halting be turned out of the way, but let it rather be healed.

14 * Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without the which no man shall see the Lord.

15 * Take heed that no man fall away from the grace of God: let no root of bitterness spring up and trouble you, lest thereby many be defiled.

16 * Let there be no fornicator, or prophane person as * Esau, which for one portion of meat sold his birth-right:

17 * For ye know how that afterward also, when he would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected: for he found no place to repentance, though he sought that blessing with tears.

18 * For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched, nor unto burning fire, nor to blackness and darkness, and tempest,

19 Neither unto the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words, which they that heard it, excused themselves, * that the word should not be spoken to them any more,

20 (For they were not able to abide that which was commanded, * yea, though a beast touch the mountain, it shall be stoned, or thrust through with a dart:

21 And so terrible was the sight which appeared, that Moses said, I fear and quake)

22 But ye are come unto the mount Sion, and to the city of the living God, the celestial Jerusalem, and to the company of innumerable angels,

23 And to the assembly and congregation of the first born which are written in heaven, and to God the judge of all, and to the spirits of just and perfect men, 24 And to Jesus the Mediator of the new testament, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel.

25 * See that ye despise not him that speaketh: for if they escaped not which refused him that

* An applying of the former examples, whereby we ought to be stirred up to run the whole race, casting away all stops and impediments.

* For sin besiegeth us on all sides, so that we cannot escape out.

* He setteth before us, as the mark of this race, Jesus himself our Captain, who willingly overcame all the roughness of the same way.

* As it were upon the mark of our faith.

* Whereas he had all kind of blessedness in his hand and power, yet suffered willingly the ignominy of the cross.

* An amplification, taken of the circumstance of the persons and the things themselves, which he compareth between themselves: for how great is Jesus in comparison of us, and how far more grievous things did he suffer than we?

* He taketh an argument of the profit which cometh to us by God's chastisements, unless we be in fault. First of all, because sin, or that rebellious wickedness of our flesh, is by this means tamed.

* Secondly, because they are testimonies of his fatherly good will toward us, insomuch that they shew themselves to be bastards, who cannot abide to be chastened of God.

* Thirdly, if all men yield this right to fathers, to whom next after God we owe this life, that they may righteously correct their children; shall we not be much more subject to that our Father, who is the author of the spiritual and everlasting life?

* An amplification of the same argument: Those fathers have corrected us after their fancy, for some frail and transitory profit: but God chasteneth and instructeth us for our singular profit, to make us partakers of his holiness: which thing although these our senses do not presently perceive, yet the end of the matter proveth it.

* The conclusion, we must go forward courageously, and keep always a right course, and (as far forth as we may) without any staggering or stumbling.

* The description of a man that is out of heart, and clean discouraged.

* Keep a right course, and so that you shew example of good life for others to follow.

* We must live in peace and holiness with all men.

* We must study to edify one another, both in doctrine and example of life.

* That no herey or backsliding be an offence.

* We must eschew fornication, and a prophane mind, that is, such a mind as giveth not to God his due honour, which wickedness, how severely God will at length punish, the horrible example of Esau teacheth us.

* There was no place left for his repentance: and it appeareth by the effects, what his repentance was; for when he was gone out of his father's sight, he threatened his brother to kill him.

* Now he applieth the same exhortation to the prophetic and kingly office of Christ, compared with Moses, after this sort. If the majesty of the law was so great, how great think you that the glory of Christ and the gospel is? And this comparison he declareth also particularly.

* Which might be touched with hands, which was of a gross and earthly matter.

* The shape and form which he saw, which was no counterfeit and forged shape, but a true one.

* So he calleth them that are taken up into heaven, although one part of them doth still remain in the earth.

* The applying of the former comparison: if it were not lawful to contemn his word, which spake on the earth, how much less his voice which is from heaven?

A. D. 64. that spake on earth: much more shall we not escape, if we turn away from him that speakes from heaven,

26 ¹⁴ Whose voice then shook the earth: and now hath declared, saying, *¹ Yet once more will I shake not the earth only, but also heaven

27 And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things which are shaken, as of things which are made with hands, that the things which are not shaken, may remain.

28 ¹⁵ Wherefore seeing we receive a kingdom, which cannot be shaken, let us have grace whereby we may so serve God, that we may please him with ^m reverence and ⁿ fear.

¹⁴ He compareth the steadfast majesty of the gospel, wherewith the whole world was shaken, and even the very frame of heaven was, as it were, astonished, with the small and vanishing sound of the governance by the law.

¹ It appeareth evidently in this, that the prophet speaketh of the calling of the Gentiles, that these words must be referred to the kingdom of God.

¹⁵ A general exhortation to live reverently and religiously under the most happy subjection of so mighty a King, who, as he blesteth his most mightily, so doth he most severely revenge the rebellious. And this is the sum of a christian life, respecting the first table.

^m By reverence is meant, that honest shamefacedness which kepeth them in their duties.

ⁿ Religious and godly fear.

¹ He cometh to the second table; the sum whereof is charity, especially toward strangers, and such as are afflicted.

^a Be so much touched, as if their misery were yours.

² He commendeth chaste matrimony in all sorts of men, and threateneth utter destruction from God against whoremongers and adulterers.

³ Covetousness is condemned; against which is set a contented mind with that which the Lord hath given.

^b Even the Lord himself.

^c He setteth man against God.

⁴ We have to set before us the example of valiant captains, whom we ought diligently to follow.

⁵ He repeateth the sum of the doctrine, to wit, the only ground of all precepts of manners, and that is this: That we ought to quiet and content ourselves in Christ only: for there was yet never any man saved without the knowledge of him, neither is at this day saved, neither shall be saved hereafter.

⁶ He toucheth them which mixed an external worship, and especially the difference of meats, with the gospel, which doctrine he plainly condemneth as clean repugnant to the benefit of Christ.

^d By this one kind, which concerneth the difference of clean and unclean meats, we have to understand all the ceremonial worship.

^e Which observed the difference of them superstitiously.

⁷ He refuteth their error by an apt and fit comparison. They which in times past served the tabernacle, did not eat of the sacrifices whose blood was brought for sin into the holy place by the high priest. Moreover, the ^e sacrifices did represent Christ our offering. Therefore they cannot be partakers of him which serve the tabernacle, that is, such as stand in the service of the law: but let us not be ashamed to follow him out of Jerusalem, from whence he was cast out, and suffered: for in this also Christ, who is the truth, answereth that figure, in that he suffered without the gate.

^f By the altar, he meaneth the offerings.

^g Whereof they cannot be partakers which stubbornly retain the rites of the law.

^h He goeth on further in this comparison, and sheweth that this also is signified unto us, that the godly followers of Christ must, as it were, go out of the world bearing his cross.

⁹ Now that those corporal sacrifices are taken away, he teacheth us that the true sacrifices of confession remain, which consist partly in giving of thanks, and partly in liberality, with which sacrifices indeed God is now delighted.

¹⁰ We must obey the warnings and admonitions of our ministers and elders, which watch for the salvation of the souls which are committed unto them.

¹¹ The last part of this epistle, wherein he commendeth his ministry to the Hebrews, and wisheth them continuance and increase of graces from the Lord: and excuseth himself in that he hath used but few words to comfort them, having spent the epistle in disputing, and saluteth certain brethren familiarly and friendly.

A. D. 64. 21 Make you ^a perfect in all good works, to do his will, ^b working in you that which is pleasant in his sight through Jesus Christ, to whom ^c praise for ever and ever. Amen.

22 I beseech you also, brethren, suffer the words of exhortation: for I have written unto you in few words.

The ^a General Epistle of JAMES.

CHAP. I.

^a He is the author of patience, ^b of faith, ^c 10 and of ^d double minded in rich men. ^e 13 That temptation cometh not of God for our evil, ^f 17 because he is the author of all good things. ^g 21 In what manner the word of life must be received.

JAMES a servant of God, and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes, which are scattered abroad, salutation.

2 ^a My brethren, ^b count it exceeding joy, when ye fall into divers temptations;

3 ^a Knowing that the ^b trying of your faith bringeth forth patience,

4 ^a And let patience have ^b her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, lacking no thing.

5 ^a If any of you lack ^b wisdom, let him ask of God, which giveth to all men liberally, and reproacheth no man, and it shall be given him.

6 ^a But let him ask in faith, and ^b waver not: for he that wavereth, is like a wave of the sea, tost of the wind, and carried away.

^a That is, written to no one man, city, or country, but to all the Jews generally, being now dispersed.

^b To all the believing Jews, of what tribe soever they be, and are dispersed through the whole world.

^c The first place, or part touching comfort in affliction, wherein we ought not to be cast down and be faint hearted, but rather rejoice and be glad.

^d Seeing their condition was miserable in that scattering abroad, he doth well to begin as he doth.

^e The first argument, because our faith is tried through afflictions: which ought to be most pure, for so it is becomable for us.

The second, because patience, a far passing and most excellent virtue, is by this means ingendered in us.

^f That wherewith your faith is tried, to wit, those manifold temptations.

^g The third argument propounded in manner of an exhortation, that true and continual patience may be discerned from feigned, and for a time. The cross is, as it were, the instrument wherewith God doth polish and fine us. Therefore the work and effect of afflictions, is the perfecting of us in Christ.

^a An answer to a privy objection. It is easily said, but it is not so easily done. He answereth, that we need in this case a far other manner of wisdom, than the wisdom of man, to judge those things best for us, which are most contrary to the flesh: but yet we shall easily obtain this gift of wisdom, if we ask it rightly, that is, with a sure confidence of God, who is most bountiful and liberal.

^b By wisdom, he meaneth the knowledge of that doctrine whereof mention was made before, to wit, wherefore we are afflicted of God, and what fruit we have to reap of affliction.

^c Why then, what need other mediators?

^d A digression or going aside from his matter, against prayers which are conceived with a doubting mind, where as we have a certain promise of God, and this is the second

7 Neither let that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord.

8 A double minded man is unstable in ^a all his ways.

9 Let the brother of ^b low degree rejoice in that he is exalted:

10 ^a Again, he that is ^b rich, in that he is made low: ^c for as the flower of the grass, shall he ^d vanish away:

11 For ^a as when the sun riseth with heat, then the grass withereth, and his flower falleth away, and the goodly shape of it perisheth: even so shall the rich man wither away in ^b all his ^c ways.

12 ^a Blessed is the man that endureth ^b temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.

13 Let no man say when he is ^a tempted, I am tempted of God: ^b for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man.

14 But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away by his own concupiscence, and is enticed:

15 Then

part of the epistle.

^a In all his thoughts and his deeds.

^b He returneth to his purpose, repeating the proposition, which is, that we must rejoice in the cross, for it doth not press us down, but exalt us.

^c Who is afflicted with poverty, or contempt, or with any kind of calamity.

^d Before he concludeth, he giveth a doctrine contrary to the former: to wit, how we ought to use prosperity, which is plenty of all things: to wit, so that no man therefore please himself, but be so much the more void of pride.

^e Who hath all things at his will.

^f An argument taken of the very nature of the thing themselves, for that they are most vain and uncertain.

^g What soever he either purposeth in his mind, or doth.

^h The conclusion: therefore we must patiently bear the cross: and he addeth a fourth argument, which comprehendeth the sum of all the former, to wit, because we come by this way to the crown of life, but yet of grace according to the promise.

ⁱ Affliction, whereby the Lord trieth him.

^j The third part of this epistle, wherein he descendeth from outward temptations, that is, from afflictions whereby God trieth us, to inward, that is, to those lusts whereby we are stirred up to do evil. The sum is this: Every man is the author of these temptations to himself, and not God: for we bear about in our bosoms that wicked corruption, which taketh occasion, by what means soever, to stir up evil motions in us, whence out at length proceed wicked doings, and in conclusion followeth death, the just reward of them.

^k When he is provoked to do evil.

^l Here is a reason shewed, why God cannot be the author of evil doing in us, because he desireth not evil

A. D. 60. 15 Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth^a sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death.

16^b Err not, my dear brethren.

17 Every good giving, and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the^c Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither^d shadow of turning.

18^e Of his own^f will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be as the^g first fruits of his creatures.

19 Wherefore, my dear brethren, ^h let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, and slow to wrath.

20 For the wrath of man doth not accomplish theⁱ righteousness of God.

21 Wherefore lay apart all filthiness, and superfluity of malicioufness, and receive with^j meekness the word that is grafted in you, which is able to save your souls.

22^k And be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, ^l deceiving your ownfelves.

23^m For if any hear the word, and do it not, he is like unto man that beholdeth hisⁿ natural face in a glafs:

24 For when he hath considered himself, he goeth his way, and forgetteth immediately what manner of one he was.

25 But whofo looketh in the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he not being a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, shall be blessed in his^o deed.

26^p If any man among you seemeth religious, and refraineth not his tongue, but deceiveth his^q own heart, this man's religion is vain.

27^r Pure religion and undefiled before God, even the Father, is this, to^s visit the fatherless and widows in their aduersity, and to keep himself unspotted of the world. A. D. 60.

C H A P. II.

1 He saith, that to have respect of persons is not agreeable to christian faith, 14 which to profess in words is not enough, unless 15 we shew it also in deeds of mercy and charity, 21 after the example of Abraham.

MY^t brethren, have not the faith of our^u glorious Lord Jesus Christ^v in respect of perions.

2 For if there come into your company a man with a gold ring, and in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment,

3 And ye have a respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here in a^w goodly place, and say unto the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool,

4 Are ye not partial in^x yourselves, and are become judges of evil thoughts?

5^y Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the^z poor of this world that they should be rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he promised to them that love him?

6 But ye have despised the poor. ^{aa} Do not the rich oppress you by tyranny, and do not they draw you before the judgment-seats?

7 Do not they blaspheme the worthy name after which ye be^{ab} named?

8^{ac} But if ye fulfil the^{ad} royal law according to the scripture, which saith, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, ye do well.

9 But if ye regard the persons, ye commit sin, and are rebuked of the law, as transgressors.

• Prov. 17. 27.
• 1. 1. 7.
• 1. 1. 15.

* Lev. 19. 15.
Deut. 1. 17. and 16. 19.
Prov. 24. 23.

^a By sin is meant in this place, actual sin.
^b Another reason taken of contraries: God is the author of all goodness, and so, that he is always like himself: how then can he be thought to be the author of evil?
^c From him who is the fountain and author of all goodness.
^d He goeth on in the metaphor: for the sun, by his manifold and sundry kinds of turning, maketh hours, days, months, years, light and darkness.
^e The fourth part, concerning the excellency and fruit of the word of God; the sum is this: we must hear the word of God most carefully and diligently, seeing it is the seed wherewith God of his free favour and love hath begotten us unto himself, picking us out of the number of his creatures. And the apostle condemneth two faults which do greatly trouble us in this matter, to wit, for that we so please ourselves, that we had rather speak ourselves, than hear God speaking: yea, we snuff and are angry when we are reprehended: against which faults he setteth a peaceable and quiet mind, and such an one as is desirous of purity.
^f This is it which Paul calleth gracious favour, and good-will, which is the fountain of our salvation.
^g As it were an holy kind of offering, taken out of the residue of men.
^h That which God appointeth.
ⁱ By meekness, he meaneth modesty, and whatsoever is contrary to an haughty and proud stomach.
^j Another admonition: therefore is God's word heard, that we may frame our lives according to the prescript thereof.
^k He addeth reasons, and those most weighty: First, because they that do otherwise, do very much hurt themselves.
^l Secondly, because they lose the chiefest use of God's word, which correct not by it the faults that they know.
^m He alludeth to that natural spot, to which is contrary that purity whereunto we are born again, the lively image whereof we behold in the law.
ⁿ Behaving himself so: for works do shew faith.
^o The third admonition: the word of God prescribeth a rule not only to do well, but also to speak well.

^p The fountain of all babbling and cursed speaking, and fauciness, is this, that men know not themselves.
^q The fourth: the true service of God standeth in charity toward our neighbours (especially such as need others help, as the fatherless and widows) and purity of life.
^r To have a care of them, and to help them as much as we can.
^s The fifth: charity which proceedeth from a true faith, cannot stand with the accepting of persons: which he proveth plainly, by setting forth their example, who, with the reproach or disdain of the poor, honour the rich.
^t For if we knew what Christ's glory is, and esteemed it as we ought to do, there would not be such respect of persons as there is.
^u In a worshipful and honorable place.
^v Have ye not (which ye ought not to do) by this means within yourselves judged one man to be preferred before another?
^w He sheweth, that they are perverse and naughty judges, which prefer the rich before the poor; by that that God on the contrary side preferreth the poor, whom he hath enriched with true riches, before the rich.
^x The needy and wretched, and (if we measure it after the opinion of the world) the veriest abjects of all men.
^y Secondly, he proveth them to be mad men: for that the rich men are rather to be holden execrable and cursed, considering that they persecute the church, and blaspheme Christ: for he speaketh of wicked and profane rich men, such as the most part of them have been always, against whom he setteth the poor and abject.
^z Word for word, which is called upon of you.
^{aa} The conclusion: Charity which God prescribeth cannot agree with the accepting of persons, seeing that we must walk in the king's highway.
^{ab} The law is said to be royal, and like the king's highway: for that it is plain, and without turnings; and that the law calleth every one our neighbour without respect, whom we may help by any kind of duty.

A. D. 60. 10 ⁵ For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet faileth in one point, he is guilty of all.

11 ⁶ For he that said, Thou shalt not commit adultery, said also, Thou shalt not kill. Now though thou doest none adultery, yet if thou killest, thou art a transgressor of the law.

12 ⁷ So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty.

13 ⁸ For there shall be condemnation mercileſs to him that sheweth not ^h mercy, and mercy rejoiceth against condemnation.

14 ⁹ What availeth it, my brethren, though a man faith, he hath faith, when he hath no works? can that faith save him?

15 ¹⁰ For if a brother or a sister be naked and destitute of daily food, 16 ¹¹ And one of you say unto them, Depart in peace: warm yourselves, and fill your bellies, notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body, what helpeth it?

17 ¹² Even so the faith, if it have no works, is dead in itself.

18 ¹³ But ¹ some man might say, Thou hast the faith, and I have works: shew me thy faith out of thy works, and I will shew thee my faith by my works.

19 ¹⁴ Thou believest that there is one God: thou doest well: the devils also believe it, and tremble.

20 ¹⁵ But wilt thou understand, O thou vain man, that the faith which is without works, is dead?

¹⁶ Was not Abraham our father ^k justified through works? ^{*} when he offered Isaac his son upon the altar?

22 ¹⁷ Seest thou not that the faith ¹ wrought with

⁵ A new argument to prove the same conclusion: They do not love their neighbours, which neglect some, and ambitiously honour others: for he doth not obey God, which cutteth off from the commandments of God, that that is not so commodious for him; nay, he is rather guilty generally of the breach of the whole law, although he observe the residue.

⁶ Not that all sins are equal, but because he that breaketh one tittle of the law, offendeth the majesty of the law giver.

⁷ A proof: because the law-maker is always one and the self-same, and the body of the law cannot be divided.

⁸ The conclusion of the whole triarise: we are upon this condition delivered from the curse of the law by the mercy of God, that in like sort we should maintain and cherish charity and good-will one towards another, and whoſo doth not so, shall not taste of the grace of God.

⁹ He that is hard and curriſh against his neighbour, or else helpeth him not, he shall find God an hard and rough judge to himself-ward.

¹⁰ The sixth place, which hangeth very well with the former treatise, touching a true and lively faith. And the proposition of this place is this: Faith which bringeth forth works, is not that faith whereby we are justified, but an image of faith: or else this; they are not justified by faith, which shew not the effects of faith.

¹¹ The first reason taken of a similitude: If a man say to one that is hungry, Fill thy belly, and yet giveth him nothing, this shall not be true charity: so if a man say, he believeth, and bringeth forth no works of his faith, this shall not be a true faith, but a certain dead thing set out with the name of faith, whereof no man hath to brag, unless he will openly incur reprehension, seeing that the cause is understood by the effect.

¹² Nay, thus may every man beat down thy pride.

¹³ Another reason taken of an absurdity: If such a faith were the true faith whereby we are justified, the devils should be justified, for they have that, but yet notwithstanding they tremble, and are not justified therefore, neither is that faith a true faith.

¹⁴ The third reason taken from the example of Abraham, who no doubt had a true faith: but he in offering his works? and through the works was the faith made ^m perfect.

23 ¹⁸ And the Scripture was ⁿ fulfilled which faith, ⁷ Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness: and he was called the friend of God.

24 ¹⁹ Ye see then how that of works a man is ^o justified, and not of ^p faith only.

25 ²⁰ Likewise also was not ¹ Rahab the harlot justified through works, when she had received the messengers, and sent them out another way?

26 ²¹ For as the body without the spirit is dead, even so the faith without works is dead.

C H A P. III.

3 To shew that a Christian man must govern his tongue with the bridle of faith and charity, 6 he declareth the commodities and mischiefs that ensue thereof: 15 and how much man's wisdom 17 differeth from heavenly.

MY ¹ brethren, be not many masters, ² knowing that we ³ shall receive the greater condemnation.

2 ⁴ For in many things we ⁵ sin all. ⁶ If any man sin not in word, he is a perfect man, and able to bridle all the body.

3 ⁷ Behold, we put bits into the horses mouths, that they should obey us, and we turn about all their body.

4 ⁸ Behold also the ships, which though they be so great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small rudder, whithersoever the governor listeth.

5 ⁹ Even so the tongue is a little member, and boasteth of great things: ¹⁰ behold how great a thing a little fire kindleth! ¹¹ And his son, shewed himself to have that faith: which was not void of works, and therefore he received a true testimony, when it was said, that faith was imputed to him for righteousness.

¹² Was he not by his works known and found to be justified? for he speaketh not here of the causes of justification, but by what effects we may know that a man is justified.

¹³ Was effectual and fruitful with good works.

¹⁴ That the faith was declared to be a true faith, and that by works.

¹⁵ Then was the scripture fulfilled, when it appeared plainly, how truly it was written of Abraham.

¹⁶ The conclusion: He is only justified that hath that faith which hath works following it.

¹⁷ It is proved to be just.

¹⁸ Of that dead and fruitless faith which you boast of.

¹⁹ A fourth reason taken from a like example of Rahab the harlot, who also proved by her works that she was justified by a true faith.

²⁰ The conclusion repeated again: faith which bringeth not forth fruits and works, is not faith, but a dead carcass.

²¹ The sixth part or place: Let no man usurp (as most men ambitiously do) authority to judge and censure others rigorously.

²² A reason, because they provoke God's severity against themselves, which do so curiously and rigorously condemn others, being themselves guilty and faulty.

²³ Unless we surcease from this masterlike and proud finding fault with others.

²⁴ The seventh place, touching the bridling of the tongue joined with the former, so that it is manifest that there is no man which may not justly be found fault withal, seeing it is a rare virtue to bridle the tongue.

²⁵ He sheweth by two similitudes, the one taken from the bridles of horses, the other from the rudders of ships, how great matters may be brought to pass by the good moderation of the tongue.

²⁶ On the contrary part he sheweth how great discommodities arise by the intemperancy of the tongue throughout the whole world, to the end that men may so much the more diligently give themselves to moderate it.

A. D. 60. 6 And the tongue is a fire, yea, a^b world of wickedness: so is the tongue set among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature, and it is set on fire of hell.

7 For the whole nature of beasts, and of birds, and of creeping things, and things of the sea is tamed, and hath been tamed of the nature of man:

8 But the tongue can no man tame. It is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison.

9⁶ Therewith blest we God, even the Father: and therewith curse we men, which are made after the⁷ similitude of God.

10⁸ Out of one mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing: my brethren, these things ought not so to be.

11 Doth a fountain send forth at one place sweet water and bitter?

12 Can the fig-tree, my brethren, bring forth olives, either a vine figs? so can no fountain make both salt-water and sweet.

13⁹ Who is a wise man, and endued with knowledge among you? let him shew by good conversation his works in meekness of wisdom.

14 But if ye have bitter envying, and strife in your hearts, rejoice not, neither be lyars against the truth.

15 This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual and devilish.

16 For where envying and strife is, there is sedition, and all manner of evil works.

17 But the wisdom that is from above, is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be intreated, full of^d mercy and good fruits, without judging, and without hypocrisy.

18¹⁰ And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace, of them that make peace.

C H A P. IV.

1 He reckoneth up the mischiefs that proceed of the ^b An heap of all mischiefs.

^c It is able to set the whole world on fire.

⁶ Amongst other faults of the tongue, the apostle chiefly reproveth backbiting and speaking evil of our neighbours, even in them especially which otherwise will seem godly and religious.

⁷ He denieth by two reasons, that God can be praised by that man that useth cursed speaking, or to backbite: first, because man is the image of God, which whosoever reve- renceth not, doth not honour God himself.

⁸ Secondly, because the order of nature which God hath set in things, will not suffer things that are so contrary the one to the other, to stand the one with the other.

⁹ The eighth part, which hangeth with the former, touching meekness of mind, against which he setteth envy and a contentious mind. And in the beginning he stoppeth the mouth of the chief fountain of all these mischiefs, to wit, a false persuasion of wisdom, whereas notwithstanding there is no true wisdom but that is heavenly, and frameth our minds to all kind of true moderation and simplicity.

^d He setteth mercy against the fierce and cruel nature of man, and sheweth that heavenly wisdom bringeth forth good fruits; for he that is heavenly wise, referreth all things to God's glory, and the profit of his neighbours.

¹⁰ Because the world persuadeth itself that they are miserable which live peaceably and simply: on the contrary side, the apostle pronounceth that they shall at the length reap the harvest of peaceable righteousness.

¹ He goeth on forward in the same argument, condemning certain other causes of wars and contentions, to wit, unbridled pleasures and immoderate lusts, by their effects, forso much as the Lord doth worthily make them void, so that they bring nothing else to them in whom they are, but incurable torments.

² He reprehendeth them by name, which are not ashaworks of the flesh. 7 He exhorteth to humility, 8 and to purge the heart 9 from pride, 10 backbiting, 14 and the forgetfulness of our infirmities.

A. D. 60.

FROM¹ whence are wars and contention among you? are they not hence, even of your pleasures, that fight in your members?

2 Ye lust, and have not: ye envy, and desire immoderately, and cannot obtain: ye fight, and war, and get nothing,² because ye ask not.

3 Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye might lay the same out on your pleasures.

4³ Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the amity of the world is the enmity of God? Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world, maketh himself the enemy of God.

5⁴ Do ye think that the scripture saith in vain, The spirit that dwelleth in us, lusteth after envy?

6 But the scripture offereth more grace, and therefore saith, * God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.

7 *⁵ Submit yourselves to God: resist the devil, and he will flee from you.

8 Draw near to God, and he will draw near to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners: and purge your hearts, ye double minded.

9⁶ Suffer afflictions, and sorrow ye, and weep: let your laughter be turned into mourning, and your joy into^a heaviness.

10 * Cast down yourselves before the Lord, and he will lift you up.

11⁷ Speak not evil one of another, brethren. He that speaketh evil of his brother, or he that condemneth his brother, speaketh evil of the law, and condemneth the law: and if thou condemnest the law, thou art not an observer of the law, but a judge.

12 There is one Lawgiver which is able to save, and to destroy. * Who art thou that judgest another man?

med to go about to make God the minister and helper of their lusts and pleasures, in asking things which either are of themselves unlawful, or being lawful ask them to wicked purposes and uses.

³ Another reason, why such unbridled lusts and pleasures are utterly to be condemned, to wit, because that he that giveth himself to the world, divorceth himself from God, and breaketh the band of that holy and spiritual marriage.

⁴ The taking away of an objection: Indeed our minds run headlong into these vices, but we ought so much the more diligently to take heed of them: which care and study shall not be in vain, seeing that God resisteth the stubborn, and giveth that grace to the modest and humble that surmounteth all those vices.

⁵ The conclusion: We must set the contrary virtues against those vices, and therefore whereas we obeyed the suggestions of the devil, we must submit our minds to God, and resist the devil, with a certain and assured hope of victory. To be short, we must employ ourselves to come near unto God by purity and sincerity of life.

⁶ He goeth on in the same comparison of contraries, and setteth against those profane joys an earnest sorrow of mind, and against pride and arrogance holy modesty.

^a By this word the Grecians mean an heaviness joined with a shamefacedness, which is to be seen in a cast-down countenance, and settled as it were upon the ground.

⁷ He reprehendeth most sharply another double mischief of pride: the one is, in that the proud and arrogant will have other men to live according to their will and pleasure, and therefore they do most arrogantly condemn whatsoever pleaseth them not: which thing cannot be done without great injury to our only Law-maker, for by this means his laws are found fault withal, as not circumspcctly enough written, and men challenge that unto themselves which properly belongeth to God alone, in that they lay a law upon men's consciences.

A. D. 60. 13 ³ Go to now, ye that say, To-day or to-morrow we will go into such a city, and continue there a year, and buy and sell, and get gain, 14 (And yet ye cannot tell what shall be to-morrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapour that appeareth for a little time, and afterward vanisheth away)

15 For that ye ought to say, ^{*} If the Lord will, and, If we live, we will do this or that.

16 But now ye rejoice in your boastings: all such rejoicing is evil.

17 ² Therefore to him that knoweth how to do well, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

C H A P. V.

1 He threateneth the rich with God's severe judgment, for their pride, 7 that the poor bearing the miserable end of the rich, 8 may patiently bear afflictions, 11 as Job did, 14 even in their distresses.

GO ¹ to now, ye rich men: weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you.

2 Your riches are corrupt, and your garments are moth-eaten.

3 Your gold and silver is cankered, and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh, as it were fire. Ye have heaped up treasure for the last days.

4 Behold, the hire of the labourers, which have reaped your fields (which is of you kept back by fraud) crieth, and the cries of them which have reaped, are entered into the ² ears of the Lord of hosts.

5 Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and in wantonness: ye have ² nourished your hearts, as in a ⁶ day of slaughter.

6 Ye have condemned, and have killed the just, and he hath not resisted you.

7 ² Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the

⁵ The other fault is this: That men do so confidently determine upon these and those matters and businesses, as though that every moment of their life did not depend of God.

² The conclusion of all the former treatise. The knowledge of the will of God doth not only nothing at all profit, unless the life be answerable unto it, but also maketh the sins far more grievous.

² The Lord, who is more mighty than ye are, hath heard them.

² Ye have pampered up yourselves.

⁶ The Hebrews call a day that is appointed to solemn banquetting, a day of slaughter, or feasting.

² He applieth that to the poor which he spake against the rich, warning them to wait for the Lord's coming patiently, who will revenge the injuries which the rich men do them.

⁴ He commendeth christian patience, for that whereas others through impatience use to accuse one another, the faithful on the contrary side complain not, although they receive injury.

⁴ By grudging he meaneth a certain inward complaining which betokeneth impatience.

⁵ The conclusion: the Lord is at the door; who will defend his own, and revenge his enemies, and therefore we need not to trouble ourselves.

⁶ Because most men are wont to object, that it is good to repel injuries by what means soever, he setteth against coming of the Lord. ³ Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the former and the latter rain.

8 Be ye also patient therefore, and settle your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth near.

9 ⁴ Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned: ⁵ behold, the Judge standeth before the door.

10 ⁶ Take, my brethren, the prophets for an ensample of suffering adversity, and of long patience, which have spoken in the name of the Lord.

11 Behold, we count them blessed which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have known what ^c end the Lord made. For the Lord is very pitiful and merciful.

12 ⁷ But before all things, my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, nor by earth, nor by any other oath: but let ^f your yea, be yea, and ^g your nay, nay, lest ye fall into condemnation.

13 ⁸ Is any among you afflicted? Let him pray. Is any merry? Let him sing.

14 ⁹ Is any sick among you? Let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray for him, and anoint him with ^h oil in the name of the Lord.

15 And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up: and if he have committed ⁱ sins, they shall be forgiven him.

16 ¹⁰ Acknowledge your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed: ¹¹ for the prayer of a righteous man availeth much, if it be fervent.

17 ^{*} Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are, and prayed earnestly that it might not rain, and it rained not on the earth for three years and six months.

18 And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit.

19 Brethren, that the examples of the fathers, whose patience had a most happy end, because God, as a most bountiful Father, never forsaketh his.

^c What end the Lord gave.

⁷ Because even the best men sometimes through impatience break out into oaths sometimes lesser, sometimes greater, the apostle warneth us to detest such wickedness, and to accustom our tongues to simple and true talk.

⁶ That that you have to say or affirm, speak or affirm it simply, and without an oath: and that that you will deny, deny it simply and flatly.

⁸ He sheweth the best remedy against all afflictions, to wit, prayers, which have their place both in sorrow and joy.

⁹ He sheweth peculiarly to what physicians especially we must go, when we are diseased, to wit, to the prayers of the elders, which then also could cure the body (for so much as the gift of healing was then in force) and take away the chiefest cause of sicknesses and diseases, by obtaining for the sick, through their prayers and exhortation, remission of sins.

¹¹ This was a sign of the gift of healing: and now seeing we have the gift no more, the sign is no longer necessary.

^h By calling on the name of the Lord.

ⁱ He hath reason in making mention of sins, for diseases are for the most part sent because of sins.

¹⁰ Because God pardoneth their sins which confess and acknowledge them, and not theirs which justify themselves: therefore the apostle addeth, that we ought freely to confer one with another touching those inward diseases, that we may help one another with our prayers.

¹¹ He commendeth prayers by the effects that come of them, that all men may understand that there is nothing more effectual than they are, so that they proceed from a pure mind.

A. D. 60. ¹⁹ Brethren, * if any of you hath erred from the truth, and some man hath ^k converted him, ²⁰ Let him know, that he which hath converted the sinner from going astray out of his way, shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins. A. D. 60.

¹² The taking away of an objection: All reprehensions are not condemned, seeing that on the contrary part there is nothing more acceptable to God than to call into the way, a brother that was wandering out of the way.

^k Hath called him back from his way.

The First Epistle General of P E T E R.

C H A P. I.

A. D. 60. ¹ He extolletb God's mercy shewed in Christ, which we lay hold on by faith, and possess through hope: ¹⁰ Whereof the prophets foretold. ¹³ He exhorteth ¹⁵ to renounce the world, ²³ and their former life, and so wholly yield themselves to God.

PETER an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the strangers that dwell here and there throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia, ² Elect according to the ^a foreknowledge of God the Father unto ^b sanctification of the Spirit, through obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: Grace and peace be multiplied unto you.

³ Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a ^c lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead,

⁴ To an inheritance immortal and undefiled, and that withereth not, reserved in heaven for us,

⁵ Which are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, which is prepared to be shewed in the ^d last time:

⁶ Wherein ye rejoice, though now for a season (if need require) ye are in heaviness, through manifold temptations,

^a Peter purposing to speak of the duties of a Christian life, reasoneth first of the principles and beginnings of all Christian actions, rising far higher than nature, and carrying us also far above the same. For he sheweth that we which are otherwise of nature sinners, were, through the free mercy of God the Father, first chosen from everlasting: then according to that everlasting decree, were by a certain second creation made his sons in Christ, his only begotten, by whose Spirit we are inwardly changed, and by whose blood we are also reconciled, to the end that, as Christ himself rose again from the dead, we also might be received into that same heavenly and everlasting glory.

^b Or, according to the purpose of God, who never altereth nor changeth the same.

^c That being set apart from the rest of this wicked world, through the working of the Holy Ghost, they should be consecrated to God, Ephes. 1. 5.

^d Everlasting hope.

^e Now he sheweth by what way we come unto that glory, to wit, through all kind of afflictions, wherein notwithstanding faith maketh us so secure, that we are not only not overcome with sorrow, but also through the beholding of God himself (who otherwise is invisible) with the eyes of faith, are unspeakably joyful: because all such things, as they are but for a time, so are they not applied unto us to destroy us, but as it were by fire to purge us, and to make us perfect, that at the length we may obtain salvation.

^f This is that time which Daniel calleth the time of the end, whenas that great restoring of all things shall be, which all creatures look for, Rom. 8. 19.

^g He speaketh of the second coming of Christ.

^h He putteth a difference between true faith, that is to say, that faith which only hath an eye to the doctrine of the prophets and apostles, and false faith: Afterward he maketh two degrees of one and the self-same faith, accord-

⁷ That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than gold that perisheth (though it be tried with fire) might be found unto your praise, and honour and glory at the ^e appearing of Jesus Christ: A. D. 60.

⁸ Whom ye have not seen, and yet love him: in whom now, though ye see him not, yet do you believe, and rejoice with joy unspeakable and glorious,

⁹ Receiving the ^f end of your faith, even the ^g salvation of your souls. † Or, reward.

¹⁰ Of the which salvation the prophets have enquired and searched, which prophesied of the grace that should come unto you,

¹¹ Searching when or what time the Spirit which testified before of Christ which was in them, should declare the sufferings that should come unto Christ, and the glory that should follow:

¹² Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us they should minister the things which are now shewed unto you by them which have preached unto you the gospel by the Holy Ghost ^f sent down from heaven, the which things the angels desire to behold.

¹³ Wherefore, ^e gird up the loins of your mind: be sober, ^g and trust ^h perfectly on that grace ^g that is brought unto you, ⁷ in the revelation of Jesus Christ,

ing to the manner of divers revelations, whenas indeed it is but one only faith. Thirdly, he saith, that the preaching of the apostles is the fulfilling of the preaching of the prophets, although the latter end of it be as yet looked for of the very angels.

^f He alludeth to the prophecy of Joel, which was exhibited upon the day of Pentecost, in the apostles, as it were in the first-fruits of the Holy Ghost, which this same our Peter declareth, Acts 2. 6.

^g He goeth from faith to hope, which is indeed a companion that cannot be sundered from faith: and he useth an argument taken of comparison: We ought not to be wearied in looking for so excellent a thing, which the very angels wait for with great desire.

^h This is a borrowed speech, taken of a common usage amongst them: for by reason that they wore long garments, they could not travel, unless they girded up themselves: and hence it is that Christ said, Let your loins be girded up.

ⁱ He setteth forth very briefly what manner of hope ours ought to be, to wit, continual, until we enjoy the thing we hope for: then, what we have to hope for, to wit, grace (that is, free salvation) revealed to us in the gospel, and not that that men do rashly and fondly promise to themselves.

^j Soundly and sincerely.

^k An argument to stir up our minds, seeing that God doth not wait till we seek him, but causeth so great a benefit to be brought even unto us.

^l He setteth out the end of faith, lest any should promise himself, either sooner or later, that full salvation, to wit, the latter coming of Christ, and therewithal warneth us, not to measure the dignity of the gospel according to the present estate, seeing that that which we are now, is not yet revealed.

A. D. 14 As obedient children, not fashioning yourselves unto the former lusts of your ignorance:

15 But as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation, 16 Because it is written, Be ye holy, for I am holy.

17 And if ye call him Father, which without respect of person judgeth according to every man's work, pass the time of your dwelling here in fear,

18 Knowing that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation, received by the traditions of the fathers,

19 But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb undefiled, and without spot:

20 Which was ordained before the foundation of the world, but was declared in the last times for your sakes,

21 Which by his means do believe in God that raised him from the dead, and gave him glory, that your faith and hope might be in God,

22 Having purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit, to love brotherly without feigning: love one another with a pure heart fervently, 23 Being born anew not of mortal seed, but of immortal, by the word of God, who liveth and endureth for ever.

24 For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man is as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower falleth away, 25 But the word of the Lord endureth for ever: and this is the word which is preached among you.

C H A P. II.

1 He exhorteth the new born in faith, to lead their lives answerable to the same: 6 And lest their faith should stagger, he bringeth in that which was foretold touching Christ. 11 Then he willet them to be obedient to magistrates, 19 and that they patiently bear adversity, after Christ's example.

Wherefore laying aside all malice, and envy, and all evil speaking,

2 As new-born babes desire that sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby,

3 Because ye have tasted that the Lord is bountiful.

4 To whom coming as unto a living stone, disallowed of men, but chosen of God, and precious,

5 Ye also as lively stones, be made a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.

6 Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture, Behold, I put in Sion a chief corner stone, elect and precious: and he that believeth therein, shall not be ashamed.

7 Unto you therefore which believe, it is precious:

there is no other word of the Lord to be looked for, than this which is preached, in which only we must rest.

1 Having laid for the foundation the Spirit of God, effectually working by the word, and having built thereupon three virtues which are the grounds of all christian actions, to wit, faith, hope, and charity: now he proceedeth to a general exhortation, the first member whereof is, that we flee all shew, both of secret and also open malice.

2 The second is, that being newly begotten and born of the new seed of the uncorrupt word, drawing and sucking greedily the same word as milk, we should more and more as it were grow up in that spiritual life. And he calleth it sincere, not only because it is a most pure thing, but also that we should take heed of them which corrupt it.

3 As it becometh new men.

4 He commendeth that spiritual nourishment for the sweetness and profit of it.

5 He goeth on forward in the same exhortation, but useth another kind of borrowed speech, alluding to the temple. Therefore he saith, that the company of the faithful is, as it were, a certain holy and spiritual building, built of the lively stones, the foundation whereof is Christ, as a lively stone sustaining all that are joined unto him with his living virtue, and knitting them together with himself, although this so great a treasure be neglected of men.

6 Going forward in the same similitude, he compareth us now to priests, placed to this end in that spiritual temple, that we should serve him with a spiritual worship, that is, with holiness and righteousness: but as the temple, so is the priesthood built upon Christ, in whom only all our spiritual offerings are accepted.

7 He proveth it by the testimony of the prophet Isaiah.

8 By setting the most blessed condition of the believers, and the most miserable of the rebellious, one against the other, he pricketh forward the believers, and triumpheth over the other: and also preventeth an offence which ariseth hereof, that none do more resist this doctrine of the gospel, than they which are chiefest amongst the people of God, as were, at that time that Peter wrote these things, the priests, and elders, and scribes. Therefore he answereth first of all, that there is no cause why any man should be astonished at this their stubbornness, as though it were a strange matter, seeing we have been forewarned so long before, that it should so come to pass: and moreover, that it pleased God to create and make certain to this self-same purpose, that the Son of God might be glorified in their just condemnation. Thirdly, for that the glory of Christ is hereby set forth greatly, whereas notwithstanding Christ remaineth the sure head of his church, and they that stumble at him, call down

A. D. 63.
 7. precious: but unto them which be disobedient, the ^a stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner,
 8 And a ^a stone to stumble at, and a rock of offence, even to them which stumble at the word, being disobedient, unto the which thing they were even ordained.

9 But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a people set at liberty, that ye should shew forth the virtues of him that hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light:

10 ^a Which in time past were not a people, yet are now the people of God: which in time past were not under mercy, but now have obtained mercy.

11 ^a Dearly beloved, ¹⁰ I beseech you, as strangers and pilgrims, ^a abstain from fleshly lusts, ^a which fight against the soul, 12 ^a And have your conversation honest among the Gentiles, that they which speak evil of you as of evil doers, ¹⁴ may by your good works which they shall see, glorify God in the day of ^a visitation.

13 ^a Therefore submit yourselves unto ^a all manner ordinance of man, ¹⁶ for the Lord's sake, ¹⁷ whether it be unto the king, as unto the superior, 14 Or unto governors, as unto them that are down and overthrow themselves, and not Christ. Fourthly, although they be created to this end and purpose, yet their fall and decay is not to be attributed to God, but to their own obstinate stubbornness, which cometh between God's decree and the execution thereof, or their condemnation, and is the true and proper cause of their destruction.

^a The contrary member; to wit, he describeth the singular excellency of the elect: and also lest any man should doubt whether he be chosen or not, the apostle calleth us back to the effectual calling, that is, to the voice of the gospel sounding both in our ears and minds, by the outward preaching and sacraments, whereby we may certainly understand that everlasting decree of our salvation, (which otherwise is most secret and hidden) and that through the only mercy of God, who freely chuseth and calleth us. Therefore this only remaineth, saith he, that by all means possible we set forth so great goodness of the most mighty God.

^a He returneth to that general exhortation.

¹² A reason why we ought to live holily, to wit, because we are citizens of heaven, and therefore we ought to live according to the laws not of this world, which is most corrupt, but of the heavenly city, although we be strangers in the world.

¹¹ Another argument: The children of God live not according to the flesh, that is, according to that corrupt nature, but according to the Spirit. Therefore fleshly motions ought not to bear rule in us.

¹² The third argument: For although those lusts flatter us, yet they cease not to fight against our salvation.

¹³ The fourth argument, taken of the profit of so doing: for by this means also we provide for our good name and estimation, whilst we compel them at length to change their minds, which speak evil of us.

¹⁴ The fifth argument, which also is of great force: Because the glory of God is greatly set forth by that means, whilst by example of our honest life, even the most profane men are brought unto God, and submit themselves unto him.

^b When God shall have mercy on them.

¹⁵ That which he spake generally, he now expoundeth by parts, describing severally every man's duty. And first of all he speaketh of obedience, which is due both to the laws, and also to the magistrates both higher and lower.

^c By ordinance, is meant the framing and ordering of civil government, which he calleth ordinance of man, not because man invented it, but because it is proper to men.

¹⁶ The first argument: Because the Lord is the author and revenger of this policy of men, that is, which is set amongst men: and therefore the true servants of the Lord must above all others be diligent observers of this order.

sent of him, ¹⁸ for the punishment of evil doers, and for the praise of them that do well. A. D. 60.

15 ¹⁹ For so is the will of God, that by well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of the foolish men:

16 As free, and not as having the liberty for a cloak of maliciousness, but as the servants of God.

17 ²⁰ Honour all men: ^a and love ^c brotherly fellowship: fear God: honour the king. Ch. 1. 22. Rom. 12. 10.

18 ^a Servants, be subject to your masters, with all fear, not only to the good and courteous, but also to the froward. Ephes. 5. 6. Col. 3. 22.

19 ^a For this is thank worthy, if a man for ^a conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully: 2 Cor. 7. 10.

20 For what praise is it, if when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye take it patiently? but and if when ye do well, ye suffer wrong and take it patiently, this is acceptable to God.

21 ^a For hereunto ye are called: for Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an ^a ensample that ye should follow his steps, 22 ^a Who did no sin, neither was there guile found in his mouth. Isa. 53. 9. 1 John 3. 5.

23 Who when he was reviled, reviled not again: when he suffered, he threatened not, but committed it to him ^a that judgeth righteously. 4 B 24 Who

¹⁵ The second argument taken of the end of this order, which is not only most profitable, but also very necessary: seeing that by this means virtue is rewarded, and vice punished: wherein the quietness and happiness of this life consisteth.

¹⁹ He declareth the first argument more amply, shewing that Christian liberty doth amongst all things least, or not at all, consist herein, to wit, to cast off the bridle of laws, (as at that time some altogether unskilful in the kingdom of God reported) but rather in this, that living holily according to the will of God, we should make manifest to all men, that the gospel is not a cloak for sin and wickedness, seeing we are in such sort free, that yet we are still the servants of God, and not of sin.

²⁰ He divideth the civil life of man, by occasion of those things which he spake, into two general parts, to wit, into those duties which private men owe to private men, and especially the faithful to the faithful, and into that subjection whereby inferiors are bound to their superiors: but so, that kings be not made equal to God: seeing that fear is due to God, and honour to kings.

^d Be charitable and dutiful towards all men.

^e The assembly and fellowship of the brethren, as Zech. 11. 12.

²¹ He goeth to the duty of servants towards their masters, which he describeth with these bounds, that servants submit themselves willingly, and not by constraint, not only to the good and courteous, but also to the froward and sharp masters.

²² The taking away of an objection. Indeed the condition of servants is hard, especially if they have froward masters: but this their subjection shall be so much the more acceptable to God, if his will prevail more with servants, than the master's injuries.

^f Because he maketh a conscience of it, to offend God, by whose good will and appointment he knoweth this burden is laid upon him.

²³ He mitigateth the grievousness of servitude, while he sheweth plainly that Christ died also for servants, that they should bear so much the more patiently this inequality betwixt men which are of one self-same nature: moreover setting before them Christ that Lord of lords for an ensample, he signifieth that they cannot but seem too delicate, which shew themselves more grieved in bearing of injuries, than Christ himself, who was most just, and most sharply of all afflicted, yet was most patient.

^g A borrowed kind of speech, taken of painters and schoolmasters.

²⁴ He sheweth them a remedy against injuries, to wit, that they commend their cause to God, by the example of Christ.

²⁵ He seemeth now to turn his speech to masters, which have also themselves a master and judge in heaven, who will justly revenge the injuries done to servants, without any respect of persons.

A. D. 60. ry man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you, with meekness and reverence.

16 Having a good conscience, that when they speak evil of you as of evil doers, they may be ashamed, which slander your good conversation in Christ.

17 ¹⁷ For it is better (if the will of God be so) that ye suffer for well doing, than for evil doing.

¹⁸ * ¹⁸ For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, ¹⁹ the just for the unjust, ²⁰ that he might bring us to God: ²¹ and was put to death concerning the ^m flesh, but was quickened by the Spirit.

19 ²² By ⁿ the which he also went, and preached unto the ^o spirits that are in prison, ²⁰ Which were in time passed disobedient, when ^p once the long suffering God abode in the days of * Noah, while the ark was preparing, wherein few, that is, eight ^q souls, were saved in the water.

²¹ ²³ Whereof the baptism that now is, answering that figure (which is not a putting away of the filth of the flesh, but a confident demanding which a good conscience maketh to God) saveth us also ²⁴ by the resurrection of Jesus Christ,

22 Which is at the right hand of God, gone into heaven, to whom the angels, and powers, and might are subject.

¹⁷ A reason which standeth upon two general rules of Christianity, which notwithstanding all men allow not of. The one is, if we must needs suffer afflictions, it is better to suffer wrongfully than rightfully: the other is this, because we are so afflicted not by hap, but by the will of our God.

¹⁸ A proof of either of the rules, by the example of Christ himself our chief pattern, who was afflicted not for his own sins (which were none) but for ours, and that according to his Father's decree.

¹⁹ An argument taken of comparison: Christ the just, suffered for us that are unjust, and shall it grieve us which are unjust to suffer for the just's cause?

²⁰ Another argument, being partly taken of things coupled together, to wit, because Christ bringeth us to his Father that same way that he went himself, and partly from the cause efficient: to wit, because that Christ is not only set before us for an example to follow, but also he holdeth us up by his virtue in all the difficulties of this life, until he bring us to his Father.

²¹ Another argument, taken of the happy end of these afflictions, wherein Christ also goeth before us both in example and virtue, as one who suffered most grievous torments even unto death, although but in one part only of him, to wit, in the flesh, or man's nature: but yet became conqueror by the virtue of his divinity.

^m As touching his manhood, for his body was dead, and his soul felt the sorrows of death.

²² A secret objection: Christ indeed might do this, but what is that to us? Yes (saith the apostle) for Christ hath shewed forth his virtue in all ages both to the preservation of the godly, were they never so few and miserable, and to revenge the rebellion of his enemies, as it appeareth by the history of the flood: for Christ is he which in those days (when God through his patience appointed a time of repentance to the world) was present, not in corporal presence, but by his divine virtue, preaching repentance, even by the mouth of Noah himself, who then prepared the ark, to those disobedient spirits which are now in prison, waiting for the full recompence of their rebellion, and saved those few, (that is, only eight persons) in the water.

ⁿ By the virtue of which Spirit, that is to say, of the divinity: therefore this word, Spirit, cannot in this place be taken for the soul, unless we will say that Christ was raised up again, and quickened by the virtue of his soul.

^o He calleth them spirits in respect of his time, not in respect of the time that they were in the flesh.

^p This word (once) sheweth, that there was a furthest day appointed, and if that were once past, there

C H A P. IV.

A. D. 60.

1 He bringeth in Christ's example, and applieth it 6 to the mortifying of the flesh, especially commending charity: 12 And so extreateth of patience. 17 That it is necessary that correction begin at the church.

FORasmuch ¹ then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind, which is, that he which hath suffered in the flesh, hath ceased from sin.

2 That he henceforward should live (as much time as ^a remaineth in the flesh) not after the lusts of men, but after the will of God.

3 ^a For it is sufficient for us that we have spent the time past of the life after the ^b lust of the Gentiles, walking in wantonness; lusts, drunkenness, in gluttony; drinkings, and in abominable idolatries: ²²

4 ¹ Wherein it seemeth to them ^c strange, that ye run not with them unto the same excess of riot: therefore speak they of evil of you.

5 Which shall give accounts to him that is ready to judge quick and dead.

6 ⁴ For unto this purpose was the gospel preached also unto the dead; that they might be condemned according to men in the flesh, but might live according to God in the Spirit.

7 Now

should be no more.

^q Men.

²³ A proportional applying of the former example to the time which followed the coming of Christ: for that preservation of Noah in the waters was a figure of our baptism: not as though the material water of baptism saveth us, as those waters which bore up the ark saved Noah, but because Christ, with his inward virtue, which the outward baptism shadoweth, preserveth us being washed, so that we may call upon God with a good conscience.

^r The conscience being sanctified, may freely call upon God.

²⁴ That self-same virtue, whereby Christ rose again, and now being carried up into heaven, hath received all power, doth at this day defend and preserve us.

¹ Having ended his digression, and sliding from his matter, now he returneth to the exhortation which he brake off, taking occasion by that which he said touching the death and resurrection of Christ, so defining our sanctification, that to be sanctified, is all one as to suffer in the flesh, that is to say, to leave off from our wickedness and viciousness: and to rise again to God, that is to say, to be renewed by the virtue of the Holy Ghost; that we may lead the rest of our life which remaineth after the will of God.

^a So much of this present life as remaineth yet to be passed over.

² By putting us in mind of the dishonesty of our former life led in the filth of sin, he calleth us to earnest repentance.

^b Wickedly and licentious; after the manner of the Gentiles.

³ That we be not moved with the enemies perverse and slanderous judgments of us, we have to let against them that last judgment of God which remaineth for them: for none, whether they be then found living, or were dead before, shall escape it.

^c They think it a new and strange matter.

⁴ A digression: because he made mention of the last general judgment. And he preventeth an objection, that seeing Christ came very lately, they may seem to be excusable which died before. But this the apostle denieth: for (saith he) this self-same gospel was preached unto them also (for he speaketh unto the Jews) and that to the same end that I now preach it unto you, to wit, that the flesh being abolished, and put away (that is to say, that wicked and naughty corruption which reigneth in men) they should suffer themselves to be governed by the virtue of the Spirit of God.

A. D. 60. 7 Now the end of all things is at hand. Be ye therefore sober, and watching in prayer.

8 But above all things have fervent love among you: for love shall cover the multitude of sins.

9 Be ye harbourous one to another, without grudging.

10 Let every man as he hath received the gift, minister the same one to another, as good disposers of the manifold grace of God.

11 If any man speak, let him speak as the words of God. If any man minister, let him do it as of the ability which God ministereth, that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom is praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

12 Dearly beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial, which is among you to prove you, as though some strange thing were come unto you.

13 But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings, that when his glory shall appear, ye may be glad and rejoice.

14 If ye be railed upon for the name of Christ, blessed are ye: for the Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you: which on their part is evil spoken of, but on your part is glorified.

15 But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or an evil doer, or as a busy-body in other men's matters.

16 But if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed: but let him glorify God in this behalf:

17 For the time is come, that judgment must begin at the house of God. If it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them which obey not the gospel of God?

18 And if the righteous be scarcely saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?

19 Wherefore let them that suffer according to the will of God, commit their souls to him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator.

C H A P. V.

1 He warneth the elders not to usurp authority over the church, 5 willing the younger sort to be willing to be taught, and to be modest, 8 to be sober, and watchful to resist the cruel adversary.

TH E elders which are among you, I beseech, which am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed:

2 Feed the flock of God, which dependeth upon you, caring for it not by constraint, but willingly: not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind:

3 Not as though ye were lords over God's heritage, but that ye may be ensamples to the flock:

4 And when that chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive an incorruptible crown of glory.

5 Like-

He returneth to his purpose, using an argument taken from the circumstance of the time. Because the last end is at hand, and therefore we must so much the more diligently watch and pray with true sobriety of mind.

He commendeth charity of one towards another, because it doth, as it were, bury a multitude of sins, and therefore preserveth and maintaineth peace and concord for they that love one another, do easily forgive one another their offences.

Of all the duties of charity, he commendeth one, namely, which was at that time most necessary, to wit, hospitality, which he will have to be voluntary, and most courteous and beautiful.

He sheweth the use of charity, to wit, that every man bestow that gift, which he hath received, to the profit of his neighbour.

A reason: Because that whatsoever gift we have, we have received it of God upon this condition, to be his disposers and stewards.

He reasoneth up two kinds of these gifts as chief, to wit, the gift of teaching the church, and the other ecclesiastical gift, wherein two things especially are to be observed, to wit, that the pure word of God be taught, and that all that is done, be referred to the glory of God the Father, and to the proper mark.

Because the cross is joined with the sincere profession of religion, the apostle fitly repeateth that which he touched before, warning us not to be troubled at persecutions and afflictions, as at a new and strange thing.

As though some new thing had befallen you, which you never thought of before.

The first reason: Because the Lord meaneth not to consume us with this fire (as it were) but to purge us of our dross, and make us perfect.

Another reason: Because the afflictions of the godly and the wicked differ very much, and chiefly in three points. First, because the godly communicate with Christ in their afflictions, and therefore shall in their time be partakers also of his glory.

Secondly, because that although the infidels think far otherwise, who in afflicting the godly, blaspheme God; yet the godly, in that they are so railed upon, are honoured of God with the true spiritual glory, and their adoption is sealed to them by the Spirit of God.

By spirit, he meaneth the gifts of the Spirit.

The third difference: for the godly are not afflicted for their evil doings, but for righteousness sake as Christians: whereby it cometh to pass that the cross, seeing it is a testimony unto them of faith and righteousness, ministereth to them not an occasion of sorrow, but of unspeakable joy:

now the apostle propoundeth this third difference under the form of an exhortation.

The third reason: because the Lord of all the world being especially careful for them of his household, doth therefore chastize them first of all, yet so that he keepeth a measure in his greatest severity. And as he hath always used to do heretofore; so doth he now, especially whenas he exhibited himself in person to his church.

Lest the godly should be offended and stumble at that vain shadow or felicity of the wicked, as though God were not the governor of the world, for that the wicked are in good case, and the godly in evil, the apostle teacheth by an argument of a comparison of them together, that God who spareth not his own, but nurtureth them under the cross, will at length in his time handle the rebellious and wicked far otherwise, whom he hath appointed to utter destruction.

The conclusion: Seeing the godly are not afflicted by chance, but by the will of God, they ought not to despair, but go forward notwithstanding in the way of holiness and well doing, commending themselves to God their faithful Creator, that is to say, their Father.

He describeth peculiarly the office of the elders, that is to say, of them that have the care of the church.

He useth a preface touching the circumstance of his own person: to wit, that he as their companion communiceth with them not of matters which he knoweth not, but wherein he is as well experienced as any, and propoundeth unto them no other condition but that which he himself hath sustained before them, and doth still take the same pains, and also hath one self-same hope together with them.

The first rule: He that is a shepherd, let him feed the flock.

He saith not, offer for the quick and the dead, and sing patched shreds in a strange tongue, but (feed.)

The second: Let the shepherd consider, that the flock is not his, but God's.

The third: Let not the shepherds invade other men's flocks, but let them feed that which God hath committed unto them.

Let the shepherd govern the church with the word, and example of godly and unblameable life; not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; not as lords over God's portion and heritage, but as his ministers.

Which is the Christian people.

That the shepherds minds be not overcome with either the wickedness of men, or their cruelty, warneth them to cast their eyes continually upon that chief Shepherd, and the crown which is laid up for them in heaven.

A. D. 60. 5 Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elders: and submit yourselves every man, one to another: * deck yourselves inwardly in lowliness of mind: 9 for * God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.

6 Humble * yourselves therefore 10 under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time.

7 * Cast all your care on him: for he careth for you.

8 Be sober, and watch: * for your adversary the devil as a roaring lion walketh about, seeking whom he may devour:

9 Whom resist steadfast in the faith, 12 knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren which are in the world.

8 He commendeth many peculiar Christian virtues, and especially modesty: which admonition all of us stand in need of, but especially the younger sort, by reason of the untowardness and pride of that age.

9 Because pride seemeth to many to be the way unto the glory of this life, the apostle witnesseth on the contrary side, that ignominy and shame is the reward of pride, and glory the reward of modesty.

10 Because those proud and lofty spirits threaten the modest and humble, the apostle warneth us to set the power of God against the vanity of proud men, and to hang wholly upon his providence.

11 The cruelty of Satan, who seeketh by all means to devour us, is overcome by watchfulness and faith.

12 The persecutions which Satan stirreth up, are neither new nor proper to any one man, but from old and ancient time common to the whole church, and therefore we must

10 13 And the God of all grace, which hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered a little, make you perfect, confirm, strengthen and stablish you:

11 To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

12 14 By Silvanus, a faithful brother unto you, as I suppose, have I written briefly, exhorting and testifying how that this is the true grace of God, wherein ye stand;

13 15 The church that is at Babylon, elected together with you, saluteth you, and Marcus my son.

14 Greet ye one another with the * kiss of love: Peace be with you, all which are in Christ Jesus. Amen.

suffer that patiently; wherein we have such and so many fellows of our conflicts and combats:

9 Amongst your brethren which are dispersed throughout the world.

10 He sealeth up as it were with a seal the former exhortation, with a solemn prayer, again willing them to ask increase of strength at his hands, of whom they had the beginning, and hope to have the accomplishment: to wit, of God the Father in Christ Jesus, in whom we are sure of the glory of eternal life.

11 Continuance and perseverance in the doctrine of the apostles, is the only ground and foundation of Christian strength: now the sum of the apostles doctrine, is salvation freely given of God.

The Second Epistle General of PETER.

CHAPTER I.

A. D. 66. 3 Having spoken of the bountifulness of God, 5 and of the virtues of faith, 6 he exhorteth them to holiness of life. 12 And that his counsel may be the more effectual, 14 he sheweth that his death is at hand, 16 and that himself did see the power of Christ which he opened unto them.

SIMON Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to you which have obtained like precious faith with us by the righteousnes of our God and Saviour Jesus Christ:

2 Grace and peace be multiplied unto you, through the acknowledging of God, and of Jesus our Lord,

3 According as his divine power hath giv-

1 A salutation, wherein he giveth them to understand, that he dealeth with them as Christ's ambassador: and otherwise agreeth with them in one self-same faith, which is grounded upon the righteousness of Jesus Christ, our God and Saviour.

2 In that that God standing to his promises, shewed himself faithful, and therefore just unto us.

3 Faith is the acknowledging of God and Christ; from whence all our blessedness issueth and floweth.

4 Christ setteth forth himself unto us plainly, in the gospel, and that by his only power, and giveth us all things which are requisite both to eternal life; wherein he hath appointed to glorify us, and also to godliness; in that he doth furnish us with true virtue.

5 He speaketh of Christ, whom he maketh God, and the only Saviour.

6 Unto salvation.

7 This is the sum of true religion, to be led by Christ to the Father, as it were by the hand.

8 An explication of the former sentence, declaring the cause of so great benefits, to wit, God and his free promise, from whence all these benefits proceed; I say, these most excellent benefits, whereby we are delivered from the en unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the acknowledging of him that hath called us unto glory and virtue.

4 Whereby most great and precious promises are given unto us, that by them ye should be partakers of the divine nature, in that ye flee the corruption which is in the world through lust.

5 Therefore give even all diligence thereunto: join moreover virtue with your faith: and with virtue, knowledge:

6 And with knowledge, temperance: and with temperance, patience: and with patience, godliness:

7 And with godliness, brotherly kindness: and with brotherly kindness, love.

8 For corruption of the world, (that is, from the wicked lusts which we carry about us) and are made after a sort, like unto God himself.

9 By the divine nature he meaneth not the substance of the godhead, but the partaking of those qualities; whereby the image of God is restored in us.

10 In men.

11 For lust is the seat of corruption; and hath his place even in our very bowels, and inmost parts.

12 Having laid the foundation, (that is, having declared the causes of our salvation, and especially of our sanctification) now he beginneth to exhort us to give our minds wholly to the true use of this grace. And he beginneth with faith; without which nothing can please God, and he warneth us to have it full fraught with virtue (that is to say, with good and godly manners), being joined with the knowledge of God's will, without which there is neither faith, neither any true virtue.

13 Supply also, and support or aid.

14 He reckoneth up certain other principal virtues; whereof some pertain to the first table of the law, others to the last.

A. D. 65. 8 For if these things be among you, and abound, they will make you that ye neither shall be idle, nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ:

9 For he that hath not these things, is blind, and cannot see far off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins.

10 Wherefore, brethren, give rather diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall.

11 For by this means an entering shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

12 Wherefore, I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though that ye have knowledge, and be stablished in the present truth.

13 For I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in remembrance, 14 Seeing I know that the time is at hand that I must lay down this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath shewed me.

15 I will endeavour therefore always, that ye also may be able to have remembrance of these things after my departing:

16 For we followed not deceivable fables when we opened unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but with our eyes we saw his majesty:

17 For he received of God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from that excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

18 And this voice we heard when it came from heaven, being with him in the holy mount.

19 We have also a most sure word of the prophets, to the which ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day-star arise in your hearts.

7 As those fruits do spring from the true knowledge of Christ, so in like sort the knowledge itself is fostered, and groweth, by bringing forth such fruits, insomuch that he that is unfruitful, did either never know the true light, or hath forgotten the gift of sanctification, which he hath received.

8 He that hath not an effectual knowledge of God in him, is blind as touching the kingdom of God, so he cannot see things that are afar off, that is to say, heavenly things.

9 The conclusion: Therefore seeing our calling and election is approved by those fruits, and is confirmed in us: and moreover seeing this is the only way to the everlasting kingdom of Christ, it remaineth that we cast our minds wholly that way.

10 An amplifying of the conclusion joined with a modest excuse, wherein he declareth his love towards them, and foretelleth them of his death, which is at hand.

11 In this body.

12 Another amplification, taken both of the great certainty and also excellency of his doctrine, as whereof our Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is author, whose glory the apostle himself both saw and heard.

13 The truth of the gospel is hereby also manifest, in that it agreeth wholly with the foretellings of the prophets.

14 The doctrine of the apostles doth not shut out the doctrine of the prophets, for they confirm each other by each other's testimonies; but the prophets were as candles which gave light unto the blind, until the brightness of the gospel began to shine.

A more full and open knowledge than was under the shadows of the law.

15 That clearer doctrine of the gospel.

16 The prophets are to be read, but so, that we ask of God the gift of interpretation: for he that is the author of the writings of the prophets, is also the interpreter of them.

17 He joineth the scripture and prophecy together, to distinguish true prophecies from false.

20 So that ye first know this, that no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation:

21 For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

C H A P. II.

1 He foretelleth them of false teachers, 3 whose wicked sleights and destruction he declareth. 12 He compareth them to brute beasts, 17 and to wells without water, 20 because they seek to withdraw men from God to their old filthiness.

BUT there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you: which privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that hath bought them, and bring upon themselves swift damnation.

2 And many shall follow their destructions, by whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of:

3 And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandize of you: whose condemnation long since resteth not, and their destruction slumbereth not.

4 For if God spared not the angels that had sinned, but cast them down into hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be kept unto damnation:

5 Neither hath spared the old world, but saved Noah the eighth person, a preacher of righteousness, and brought in the flood upon the world of the ungodly:

6 And turning the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah into ashes, condemned them, and overthrew them, and made them an ensample unto them that after should live ungodly:

7 And delivered just Lot, vexed with the uncleanly conversation of the wicked:

8 (For he being righteous, and dwelling among them, in seeing and hearing, vexed his his

9 For all interpretation cometh from God.

10 The godly interpreters and messengers.

11 Inspired of God: and these their motions were in very good order, and not such as were the motions of the prophane soothsayers, and foretellers of things to come.

12 As in times past there were two kinds of prophets, the one true, the other false, so Peter foretelleth them, that there shall be some true and some false teachers in the church, insomuch that Christ himself shall be denied of some, which notwithstanding shall call him Redeemer.

13 Under the law, while the state and policy of the Jews was yet standing.

14 There shall not only be heresies, but also many followers of them.

15 Covetousness for the most part is a companion of heresy, and maketh merchandise even of souls.

16 They will abuse you, and sell you, as they sell cattle in a fair.

17 A comfort for the godly: God, who cast the angels, that fell away from him, headlong into the darkness of hell, at length to be judged: and who destroyed the old world with the flood, and preserved Noah, the eighth person: and who burned Sodom, and saved Lot: will deliver his elect from these errors, and will utterly destroy those unrighteous.

18 So the Grecians called the deep dungeons under the earth, which should be appointed to torment the souls of the wicked in.

19 Bound them with darkness, as it were with chains: and by darkness he meaneth that most miserable state of life, that is full of horror.

20 Which was before the flood: not that God made a new world, but because the world seemed new.

21 For he ceased not the space of an hundred and twenty years to warn the wicked, both by word and deed, what wrath of God hanged over their heads.

22 Which way soever he looked, and turned his ears.

23 He had a troubled soul, and being vehemently grieved, lived a painful life.

9 The Lord knoweth to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment under punishment:

10 And chiefly them that walk after the flesh, in the lust of uncleanness, and despise government, which are bold, and stand in their own conceit, and fear not to speak evil of them that are in dignity.

11 Whereas the angels, which are greater both in power and might, give not railing judgment against them before the Lord.

12 But these, as natural brute beasts, led with sensuality, and made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of those things which they know not, and shall perish through their own corruption,

13 And shall receive the wages of unrighteousness, as they which count it pleasure daily to live deliciously. † Spots they are and blots, delighting themselves in their deceivings, in feasting with you,

14 Having eyes full of adultery, and that cannot cease to sin, beguiling unstable souls: they have hearts exercised with covetousness, they are the children of curse:

15 Which forsaking the right way, have gone astray, following the way of Balaam, the son of Bofor, which loved the wages of unrighteousness:

16 But he was rebuked for his iniquity: for the dumb beast, speaking with man's voice, forbade the foolishness of the prophet.

17 These are wells without water, and clouds carried about with a tempest, to whom the black darkness is reserved for ever.

18 For in speaking swelling words of vanity, they beguile with wantonness, through the lusts of the flesh, them that were clean escaped from them which are wrapped in error:

C H A P. III.

1 He sheweth that he writeth the same things again, 2 because they must often be stirred up, 4 because dangers hang over their heads through certain mockers. 8 Therefore be warneth the godly that they do not, after the judgment of the flesh, 12 appoint the day of the Lord, 14 but that they think it always at hand: 15 in which doctrine he sheweth that Paul agreeth with him.

THIS second epistle I now write unto you, beloved, wherewith I stir up and warn your pure minds,

2 To call to remembrance the words which were told before of the holy prophets, and also the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Saviour.

3 This first understand, that there shall come in the last days, mockers, which will walk after their lusts,

4 And say, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers died, all things continue alike from the beginning of the creation.

5 For this they willingly know not, that the heavens were of old, and the earth that was of the water and by the water, by the word of God.

6 Where-

1 T. Jude 18.

1 Hath been long practised in saving and delivering the righteous.

5 He goeth to another sort of corrupt men, which notwithstanding are within the bosom of the church, which are wickedly given, and do seditiously speak evil of the authority of magistrates (which the angels themselves that minister before God, do not dispraise). A true and lively description of the Romish clergy (as they call it.)

k Princes and great men, be they never so high in authority.

6 A lively painting out of the same persons, wherein they are compared to beasts which are made to snare themselves to destruction, while they give themselves to fill their bellies: for there is no greater ignorance than is in these men; although they most impudently find fault with those things which they know not: and it shall come to pass that they shall destroy themselves as beasts with those pleasures wherewith they are delighted, and dishonour and defile the company of the godly.

1 Made to this end to be a prey to others: So do these men willingly cast themselves into Satan's snares.

m Their own wicked manners shall bring them to destruction.

n When as by being amongst the Christians in the holy banquets which the church keepeth, they would seem by that means to be true members of the church, yet they are indeed but blots of the Church.

7 He condemneth those men, as shewing, even in their behaviour and countenance, an unmeasurable lust, as making merchandise of the souls of light persons, as men exercised in all the crafts of covetousness; to be short, as men that sell themselves for money, to curse the sons of God after Balaam's example, whom the dumb beast reproved.

8 Another note, whereby they may be well known what manner of men they are, because they have inwardly nothing but either utterly vain or very hurtful, although they make a shew of some great goodness, but they shall not escape unpunished for it, because under pretence of false liberty, they draw men into most miserable slavery of sin.

o Which boast of knowledge, and have nothing in them.

p Most gross darkness.

q They deceive men with vain and swelling words.

r They take them as fishes are taken with the hook.

s Unfeignedly and indeed, clean departed from idolatry.

t It were better to have never known the way of righteousness, than to turn back from it to the old filthiness: and men that do so are compared to dogs and swine.

u The remedy against those wicked enemies, both of true doctrine and holiness, is to be sought for by the continual meditation of the writings of the prophets and apostles.

v He voucheth the second coming of Christ against the Epicures by name.

w Monstrous men, who would seem wise by their contempt of God, and wicked boldness.

x The reason which these mockers pretend, because the course of nature is all one as it was from the beginning, therefore the world was from everlasting, and shall be for ever.

y He setteth against them the creation of heaven and earth by the word of God, which these men are willingly ignorant of.

b Which appeared, when the waters were gathered together into one place.

A. D. 66. 6^s Wherefore the world that then was, perished, overflowed with the^e water.

7^s But the heavens and the earth, which are now, are kept by the same word in store, and reserved unto fire against the day of condemnation, and of the destruction of ungodly men.

8^s Dearly beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord^s as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.

9^s The Lord of that promise is not slack (as some men count slackness)⁹ but is patient toward us, and^s would have no man to perish, but would all men to come to repentance.

10^s But the^s day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens shall pass away with a^d noise, and the elements shall melt with heat, and the earth with the works that are therein, shall be burnt up.

11^s Seeing therefore that all these things must be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in holy conversation and godliness!

12 Looking for, and^s hastning unto the coming of that day of God, by which the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with heat.

^s Secondly, he setteth against them the universal flood which was the destruction, as it were, of the whole world.

^e For the waters returning into their former place, this world, that is to say, this beauty of the earth which we see, and all living creatures which live upon the earth, perished.

^e Thirdly, he pronounceth that it shall not be harder for God to burn heaven and earth with fire, in that day which is appointed for the destruction of the wicked (which thing he will also do) than it was for him in times past to make them with his only word, and afterward to overwhelm them with water.

^s The raising away of an objection: In that he seemeth to defer this judgment a long season, in respect of us it is true, but not before God, with whom there is no time either long or short.

^s The Lord will surely come, because he hath promised: and that neither sooner nor later than he hath promised.

^s A reason why the latter day cometh not out of hand, because God doth patiently wait till the elect be brought to repentance, that none of them may perish.

^s A very short description of the last destruction of the world, but in such sort as nothing could be spoken more grievously.

^e With the violence as it were of a hissing storm.

^s An exhortation of purity of life, setting before us that

13: But we look for^s new heavens, and a new earth, according to his promise, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

14 Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in^s peace, without spot and blame.

15^s And suppose that the long suffering of our Lord is salvation, even as our beloved brother Paul, according to the wisdom given unto him, wrote unto you,

16 As one that in all his epistles speaketh of these things: among the^s which, some things are hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable, wrest, as they do also other scriptures, unto their own destruction.

17 Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye be also plucked away with the error of the wicked, and fall from your own steadfastness.

18 But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ: to him be glory both now and evermore. Amen.

horrible judgment of God, both to bridle our wantonness and also to comfort us, so that we be found watching, and ready to meet him at his coming.

^e He requireth patience of us, yet such patience as is not slothful.

^e In which heavens.

^s That you may try to your profit, how gentle and peaceable he is.

^s Paul's epistles are allowed by the express testimony of Peter.

^s There be certain of these things obscure and dark, whereof the unlearned take occasion to overthrow some men that stand not fast, wresting the testimonies of the scripture to their own destruction. But this is the remedy against such deceit, to labour that we may daily more and more grow up and increase in the knowledge of Christ.

^s That is to say, among the which things: for he disputeth not here whether Paul's epistles be plain or dark, but saith, that amongst those things which Paul hath written of in his epistles: and Peter himself in these two of his owns, there are some things which cannot be so easily understood, and therefore are of some drawn to their own destruction: and this he saith to make us more attentive and diligent, and not to remove us from the reading of holy things, for to what end should they have written vain speculations?

The First Epistle General of J O H N.

C H A P. I.

A. D. 90. 1 He testifieth that he bringeth the eternal Word wherein is life, and light. 9 God will be merciful unto the faithful, if groaning under the burden of their sins, they learn to flee unto his mercy.

THAT^s which was from the beginning, which we have^s heard, which we have seen with these our eyes, which we have looked upon, and these hands of ours have handled of that^s Word of life,

^s He beginneth with the description of the person of Christ, whom he maketh one, and not two: and him both God from everlasting (for he was with the Father from the beginning, and is that eternal life) and also made true man, whom John himself and his companions, both heard, and beheld, and handled.

^s I heard him speak, I saw him myself with mine eyes, I handled with mine hands him that is very God, being made very man; and not I alone, but others also that were with me.

2 (For that life was made manifest, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and^s shew unto you that eternal life which was with the Father, and was manifest unto us)

3 That, I say, which we have seen and heard, declare we unto you, that ye may also have fellowship with us, and that our fellowship also may be with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ.

4 And

^s That same everlasting Word by whom all things are made, and in whom only there is life.

^e Being sent by him: and that doctrine is rightly said to be shewed, for no man could so much as have thought of it, if it had not been thus shewed.

^s The use of this doctrine is this, that all of us being conpled and joined together with Christ by faith, might become the sons of God: in which thing only consisteth all happiness.

A. D. 90. 4 And these things write we unto you, that your joy may be full.

5 This then is the message which we have heard of him and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness.

6 If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lye, and do not truly.

7 But if we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.

8 If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and truth is not in us.

9 If we acknowledge our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

10 If we say we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us.

CHAP. II.

1 He declareth that Christ is our mediator and advocate, 3 and sheweth that the knowledge of God consisteth in holiness of life, 12 which appertaineth to all sorts, 14 that depend on Christ alone. 15 Then having exhorted them to contemn the world, 18 he giveth warning that anticrists be avoided, 24 and that the known truth be stood unto.

MY little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not: and if any 1 Now he entereth into a question, whereby we may understand that we are joined together with Christ, to wit, if we be governed with his light, which is perceived by the ordering of our life. And thus he reasoneth: God is in himself most pure light, therefore he agreeth well with them which are lightfome, but with them that are darkfome he hath no fellowship.

2 God is said to be light of his own nature, and to be in light, that is to say, in that everlasting infinite blessedness: and we are said to walk in light, in that the beams of that light do shine unto us in the word.

3 A digression, or going from the matter he is in hand with, to the remission of sins: for this our sanctification which walk in the light, is a testimony of our joining and knitting together with Christ: but because this our light is very dark, we must needs obtain another benefit in Christ, to wit, that our sins may be forgiven us being sprinkled with his blood: and this in conclusion is the prop and stay of our salvation.

4 There is none but needeth this benefit, because there is none that is not a sinner.

5 This place doth fully refute that perfectness and works of supererogation, which the Papists dream of.

6 So then, John speaketh not thus for modesty's sake, as some men say, but because it is so indeed.

7 Therefore the beginning of salvation is to acknowledge our wickedness, and to require pardon of him, who freely forgiveth all sins, because he hath promised so to do, and he is faithful and just.

8 So then our salvation hangeth upon the free promises of God, who because he is faithful and just, will perform that which he hath promised.

9 Where are then our merits? for this is our true felicity.

10 A rehearsal of the former sentence, wherein he condemned all of sin without exception: insomuch that if any man persuade himself otherwise, he doth as much as in him lieth make the word of God himself vain, and to no purpose, yea, he maketh God a liar: for to what end, either in times past, needed sacrifices, or now Christ and the gospel, if we be not sinners?

11 They do not only deceive themselves, but are blasphemous against God.

12 His doctrine shall have no place in us: that is, in our hearts.

13 It followeth not hercof, that we must give our wicked nature the bridle, or sin so much the more freely, because our sins are cleaned away by the blood of Christ, but we must rather so much the more diligently resist sin. And yet we must not despair because of our weakness, for we have an advo-

Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Just.

2 And he is the reconciliation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.

3 And hereby we are sure that we know him, if we keep his commandments.

4 He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him.

5 But he that keepeth his word, in him is the love of God perfect indeed: hereby we know that we are in him.

6 He that saith he remaineth in him, ought even so to walk as he hath walked.

7 Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you: but an old commandment, which ye have had from the beginning: this old commandment is that word, which ye have heard from the beginning.

8 Again, a new commandment I write unto you, that which is true in him, and also in you: for the darkness is past, and that true light now shineth.

9 He that saith that he is in that light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness until this time.

10 He that loveth his brother, abideth in that light, and there is none occasion of evil in him.

11 But he that hateth his brother, is in darkness, cate and a purger, Christ Jesus the just, and therefore acceptable unto his Father.

4 D

2 In that he nameth Christ, he shutteth forth all other.

3 Reconciliation and intercession go together, to give us to understand that he is both advocate and high priest.

4 For men of all sorts, of all ages, and all places, so that this benefit belongeth not to the Jews only, of whom he speaketh, as appeareth, ver. 7. but also to other nations.

5 He returneth to the testimony of our conjunction with God, to wit, to sanctification, declaring what it is to walk in the light, to wit, to keep God's commandments. Whereby it followeth that holiness doth not consist in those things which men have devised, neither in a vain profession of the gospel.

6 This must be understood of such a knowledge as hath faith with it, and not of a common knowledge.

7 For the tree is known by the fruit.

8 Holiness, that is, a life ordered according to the precept of God's commandments, how weak soever we be, is of necessity joined with faith, that is, with the true knowledge of the Father in the Son.

9 He that keepeth God's commandments, loveth God indeed: He that loveth God, is in God, or is joined together with God. Therefore he that keepeth his commandments, is in him.

10 Wherewith we love God.

11 He meaneth our conjunction with Christ.

12 He that is one with Christ, must needs live his life, that is, must walk in his steps.

13 The apostle going about to expound the commandment of charity one towards another, telleth first, that when he urgeth holiness, he bringeth no new trade of life (as they use to do which devise tradition one after another) but putteth them in mind of that same law which God gave in the beginning, to wit, by Moses, at that time that God began to make laws to his people.

14 He addeth, that the doctrine indeed is old, but it is now after a sort new, both in respect of Christ, and also of us, in whom he, through the gospel, engraveth his law effectually, not in tables of stone, but in our minds.

15 Which thing, (to wit, that the doctrine is new which I write unto you) is true in him, and in you.

16 Now he cometh to the second table, that is, to charity one towards another, and denieth that that man hath true light in him, or is indeed regenerate, and the son of God, which hateth his brother: and such an one wandereth miserably in darkness, brag he of never so great knowledge of God, for that wittingly and willingly he casteth himself headlong into hell.

A. D. 90. 90. ⁹⁰ness, and walketh in darknes, and knoweth not whether he goeth, because that darknes hath blinded his eyes.

12 ⁹¹ Little children, ⁹¹ I write unto you, because your sins are forgiven you for his ⁹¹ name's sake.

13 ⁹² I write unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. ⁹² I write unto you, young men, because ye have overcome that wicked one. ⁹² I write unto you, little children, because ye have known the Father.

14 ⁹³ I have written unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome that wicked one.

15 ⁹⁴ Love not this ⁹⁴ world, neither the things that are in this world. If any man love this world, the ⁹⁴ love of the Father is not in him.

16 For all that is in this world (as the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life) is not of the Father, but is of this world.

17 ⁹⁵ And this world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that fulfilleth the will of God, abideth for ever.

18 ⁹⁶ Little children, ⁹⁶ it is the last time: ⁹⁶ and as ye have heard that Antichrist shall come, even now there are many Antichrists:

⁹⁰ He returneth again from sanctification to remission of sins, because that free reconciliation in Christ is the ground of our salvation, wherespon afterwards sanctification must be built as upon a foundation.

⁹¹ Therefore I write unto you, because you are of their number whom God hath reconciled to himself.

⁹² For his own sake: And in that he nameth Christ, he shutteth out all other, whether they be in heaven or earth.

⁹³ He sheweth, that this doctrine agreeth to all ages: and first of all speaking to old men, he sheweth, that Christ and his doctrine are passing ancient, and therefore if they be delighted with old things, nothing ought to be more acceptable unto them.

⁹⁴ He advertiseth young men, if they be desirous to shew their strength, that they have a most glorious combat set here before them, to wit, Satan, the worst enemy, who must be overcome: willing them to be as sure of the victory as if they had already gotten it.

⁹⁵ Finally, he sheweth to children, that that true Father, from whom they have to look for all good things, is set forth unto them in the gospel.

⁹⁶ He addeth afterward in like order as many exhortations: as if he should say, Remember, you fathers, as I wrote even now, that the everlasting Son of God is revealed to us. Remember, ye young men, that that strength whereby I said that you put Satan to flight, is given you by the word of God which dwelleth in you.

⁹⁷ The world, which is full of wicked desires, lusts, or pleasures, and pride, is utterly hated of our heavenly Father. Therefore the Father and the world cannot be loved together: and this admonition is very necessary for green and flourishing youth.

⁹⁸ He speaketh of the world, as it agreeth not with the will of God, for otherwise God is said to love the world with an infinite love, John 3. 16. that is to say, those whom he chose out of the world.

⁹⁹ Wherewith the Father is loved.

¹⁰⁰ He sheweth how much better it is to obey the Father's will, than the lusts of the world, by both their natures and unlike event.

¹⁰¹ Now he turneth himself to little children, which notwithstanding are well instructed in the sum of religion, and willet them by divers reasons to shake off slothfulness, which is too familiar with that age.

¹⁰² He useth this word (Little): not because he speaketh to children, but to allure them the more by using such sweet words.

¹⁰³ First, because the last time is at hand, so that the matter suffereth no delay.

¹⁰⁴ Secondly, because Antichrists, that is, such as fall from God, are already come, even as they heard that they whereby we know that it is the last time. A. D. 90.

19 ⁹⁷ They went out from us, but they were not of us: for if they had been of us, ⁹⁷ they should have continued with us. ⁹⁷ But this cometh to pass, that it might appear, that they are not all of us.

20 ⁹⁸ But ye have an ⁹⁸ ointment from that ⁹⁸ Holy one, and know all things.

21 ⁹⁹ I have not written unto you, because ye know not the truth: but because ye know it, and that no lye is of the truth.

22 ¹⁰⁰ Who is a liar, but he that denieth that Jesus is ¹⁰⁰ that Christ? the same is that Antichrist that denieth the Father and the Son.

23 ¹⁰¹ Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father.

24 ¹⁰² Let therefore abide in you that same which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning, shall remain in you, ye also shall continue in the Son, and in the Father.

25 And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even that eternal life.

26 ¹⁰³ These things have I written unto you, concerning them that deceive you.

27 But that ¹⁰⁴ anointing which ye received of him, dwelleth in you: and ye ¹⁰⁴ need not that any man teach you: but as the same ¹⁰⁴ anointing teacheth should come. And it was very requisite to warn that unneedy and wariless age of that danger.

⁹⁷ A digression against certain offences and stumbling-blocks wh.reat that rude age especially might stumble and be shaken. Therefore that they should not be terrified with the soul falling back of certain, first he maketh plain unto them, that although such as fall from God and his religion had place in the church, yet they were never of the church: because the church is the company of the elect, which cannot perish, and therefore cannot fall from Christ.

⁹⁸ So then the elect can never fall from grace.

⁹⁹ Secondly, he sheweth, that these things fall out to the profit of the church, that hypocrites may be plainly known.

¹⁰⁰ Thirdly, he comforteth them, to make them stand fast, insomuch as they are anointed of the Holy Ghost with the true knowledge of salvation.

¹⁰¹ The grace of the Holy Ghost, and this is a borrowed kind of speech, taken from the ointings used in the law.

¹⁰² From Christ, who is peculiarly called holy.

¹⁰³ The taking-away of an objection. He wrote not these things as to men which are ignorant of religion, but rather as to them which do well know the truth, yea, so far forth, that they are able to discern truth from falsehood.

¹⁰⁴ He sheweth now plainly that false doctrine of the Antichrists, to wit, that either they fight against the person of Christ, or his office, or both together, and at once. And they that do so, do in vain boast and brag of God, for that in denying the Son, the Father is also denied.

¹⁰⁵ Is the true Messias.

¹⁰⁶ They then are deceived themselves, and also deceive others, which say that the Turks and other infidels worship the same God that we do.

¹⁰⁷ The whole preaching of the prophets and apostles is contrary to that doctrine. Therefore it is utterly to be cast away, and this wholly to be holden, and kept, which leadeth us to seek eternal life in the free promise, that is to say, in Christ alone, who is given us of the Father.

¹⁰⁸ The same Spirit which endueth the elect with the knowledge of the truth, and sanctifieth them, giveth them therewithal the gift of perseverance, to continue to the end.

¹⁰⁹ The Spirit which you have received of Christ, and which hath led you into all truth.

¹¹⁰ You are not ignorant of those things, and therefore I teach them not as things that were never heard of, but call them to your remembrance as things which you do know.

¹¹¹ He commendeth both the doctrine which they had embraced, and also highly praiseth their faith, and the diligence of such as taught them, yet so, that he taketh nothing from the honour due to the Holy Ghost.

A. D. 90. teacheth you of all things, and it is true and is not lying, and as it taught you, ye shall abide in him.

28 ²⁶ And now, little children, abide in him, that when he shall appear, we may be bold, and not be ashamed before him at his coming.

29 ²⁷ If ye know that he is righteous, know ye that he which doth righteously, is born of him.

C H A P. III.

1 Setting down the inestimable glory of this, that we are God's sons, 7 he sheweth that newness of life must be testified by good works, whereof charity is a manifest token 19 of faith, 22 and praying unto God.

BEHOLD, ¹ what love the Father hath given to us, that we should be ^b called the sons of God! ² for this cause this world knoweth you not, because it knoweth not him.

2 ³ Dearly beloved, now are we the sons of God, but yet it is not made manifest what we shall be: and we know that when he shall be made manifest, we shall be ^c like him: for we shall see him ^d as he is.

3 ⁴ And every man that hath this hope in him, purgeth himself, even ^e as he is pure.

4 ⁵ Whosoever ^f committeth sin, transgresseth also the law: for ^g sin is the transgression of the law.

5 ⁶ And ye know that he was made manifest,

²⁶ The conclusion both of the whole exhortation, and also of the former treatise.

²⁷ A passing over to the treatise following, which tendeth to the same purpose, but yet is more ample, and handieth the same matter after another order, for before he taught us to go up from the effects to the cause, and in this that followeth, he goeth down from the causes to the effects: And this is the sum of this argument, God is the fountain of all righteousness, and therefore they that give themselves to righteousness, are known to be born of him, because they resemble God the Father.

¹ He beginneth to declare this agreement of the Father and the Son, at the highest cause, to wit, at that free love of God towards us, wherewith he so loveth us, that also he adopteth us to be his children.

^a What a gift, of how great love?

^b That we should be the sons of God, and so that all the world may perceive we are so.

² Before he declareth this adoption, he saith two things: the one, that this is so great a dignity, is not to be esteemed according to the judgment of the flesh; because it is unknown to the world, for the world knoweth not God the Father himself.

³ The other, this dignity is not fully made manifest to us ourselves, much less to strangers; but we are sure of the accomplishment of it, insomuch that we shall be like unto the Son of God himself, and shall enjoy his sight indeed; such as he is now, but yet notwithstanding this is deferred until his next coming.

^c Like, but not equal.

^d For now we see as in a glass, 1 Cor. 13. 12.

⁴ Now he describeth this adoption, (the glory whereof as yet consisteth in hope) by the effect, to wit, because that whosoever is made the Son of God, endeavoureth to resemble the Father in purity.

^e This word signifieth a likeness, but not an equality.

⁵ The rule of this purity can from no whence else be taken but from the law of God; the transgression whereof is that which is called sin.

^f Giveth not himself to pureness.

^g A short definition of sin.

⁶ An argument taken from the material cause of our salvation: Christ in himself is most pure, and he came to take away our sins by sanctifying us with the Holy Ghost. Therefore whosoever is truly partaker of Christ, doth not give himself to sin; and contrarywise he that giveth himself to sin, knoweth not Christ.

^a He is said to sin, that giveth not himself to pureness, that he might ^h take away our sins, and in him, A. D. is no sin.

6 Whosoever abideth in him, sinneth not: whosoever ^h sinneth, hath not seen him, neither hath known him.

7 ⁷ Little children, let no man deceive you: he that doth righteousness, is righteous, as he is righteous.

8 ⁸ He that ^h committeth sin, is of the ⁱ devil: for the devil ^k sinneth from the ^l beginning: for this purpose was made manifest that Son of God, that he might loose the works of the devil.

9 Whosoever is born of God, sinneth not: for his ^m seed remaineth in him, neither can he sin, because he is born of God.

10 ⁹ In this are the children of God known, and the children of the devil: whosoever doeth not righteousness, is not of God, ⁿ neither he that loveth not his brother.

11 ¹¹ For this is the message that ye heard from the beginning, that ^o we should love one another.

12 ¹² Not as ^o Cain which was of that wicked one, and slew his brother: ¹³ and wherefore slew he him? because his own works were evil, and his brother's good.

13 Marvel not, my brethren, through this world hate you.

14 ¹⁴ We ^o know that we are translated from death unto life, because we love the brethren: ¹⁵ he that loveth not his brother, abideth in death.

15 Who-

and in him sin reigneth: but sin is said to dwell in the faithful, and not to reign in them.

⁷ Another argument of things coupled together: He that liveth justly, is just, and resembleth Christ that is just, and by that is known to be the Son of God.

⁸ An argument taken of contraries: the devil is the author of sin, and therefore he is of the devil, or is ruled by the inspiration of the devil, that serveth sin: and if he be the devil's son, then is he not God's son: for the devil and God are so contrary the one to the other, that even the Son of God was sent to destroy the works of the devil. Therefore on the contrary side, whosoever resisteth sin is the son of God, being born again of his Spirit as of new seed, insomuch that of necessity he is now delivered from the slavery of sin.

ⁱ Resembleth the devil, as the child doth the father, and is governed by his spirit.

^k He saith not, sinned, but sinneth, for he doth nothing else but sin.

^l From the very beginning of the world.

^m The Holy Ghost is so called of the effect he worketh, because by his virtue and mighty working, as it were by seed, we are made new men.

⁹ The conclusion: By a wicked life they are known, which are governed by the spirit of the devil: and by a pure life, which are God's children.

¹⁰ He beginneth to commend charity towards the brethren, as another mark of the sons of God.

¹¹ The first reason taken of the authority of God, which giveth the commandment.

¹² An amplification taken of the contrary example of Cain, which slew his brother.

¹³ He bringeth forth a very fit and very old example, wherein we may behold both the nature of the sons of God, and the sons of the devil, and what state and condition remaineth for us in this world, and what shall be the end of both at length.

¹⁴ A short digression: Let us not marvel that we are hated of the world for doing our duty, for such was the condition of Abel, who was a just person: and who would not rather be like him than Cain?

¹⁵ The second reason: because charity is a testimony that we are translated from death to life: and therefore hatred towards the brethren is a testimony of death: and whosoever nourisheth it, doth as it were foster death in his bosom.

^o Love is a token that we are translated from death to life, forasmuch as by the effects the cause is known.

A. D. 90. 15 ¹ Whosoever hateth his brother, is a manslayer: and ye know that no manslayer hath eternal life abiding in him.

16 ² Hereby have we perceived love, that he laid down his life for us: therefore we ought also to lay down our lives for the brethren.

17 ³ And whosoever hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?

18 ⁴ My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue only, but in deed and in truth.

19 ⁵ For thereby we know that we are of the truth, and shall before him assure our hearts.

20 ⁶ For if our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things.

21 ⁷ Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then have we boldness toward God.

22 ⁸ And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things which are pleasing in his sight.

23 ⁹ This is then his commandment, that we believe in the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave commandment.

24 ¹⁰ For he that keepeth his commandments, dwelleth in him, and he in him: and hereby we know that he abideth in us, even by that spirit which he hath given us.

C H A P. IV.

1 Having spoken somewhat touching the trying of spi-

¹ A confirmation: Whosoever is a murderer, is in eternal death: whose hateth his brother, is a murderer, therefore is in death. And thereupon followeth the contrary: He that loveth his brother, hath passed to life, for indeed we are born dead.

² Now he sheweth how far christian charity extendeth, even so far, that according to the example of Christ, every man forget himself, to provide for, and help his brethren.

³ He reasoneth by comparison: for if we are bound even to give our life for our neighbours, how much more are we bound to help our brother's necessity with our goods and substance?

⁴ Wherewith this life is sustained.

⁵ Openeth not his heart to him, nor helpeth him willingly and cheerfully.

⁶ Christian charity standeth not in words, but in deed, and proceedeth from a sincere affection.

⁷ He commendeth charity by a triple effect: for first of all, by it we know that we are indeed the sons of God, as he shewed before.

⁸ Therefore it cometh that we have a quiet conscience: as on the contrary side, he that thinketh that he hath God for a judge, because he is guilty to himself, either he is never, or else very rarely quiet, for God hath a far quicker sight than we, and judgeth more severely.

⁹ If an evil conscience convinceth us, much more ought the judgment of God to condemn us, who knoweth our hearts better than we ourselves do.

¹⁰ A third effect also riseth out of the former, that in these miseries we are sure to be heard, because we are the sons of God: as we understand by the grace of sanctification, which is proper to the elect.

¹¹ The conclusion. That faith in Christ, and love one towards another, are things joined together, and therefore the outward testimonies of sanctification must, and do, answer that inward testimony of the Spirit given unto us.

¹² He meaneth the Spirit of sanctification, whereby we are born anew, and live unto God.

¹³ Taking occasion left, by the name of the Spirit, love and charity should be separated from the worship of God, which chiefly dependeth on his true knowledge, he returneth to that which he spake of in the second chapter, touching the taking heed of Antichrists. And he will have us here to take heed of two things, the one is, that, seeing there be many false prophets, we do not lightly give credit to every man: the other is, that because many men teach false things, we should not therefore believe any. We must then observe a mean, that we may be able to discern the Spirit of God, which is altogether to be followed, from impure spirits, which are to be eschewed.

¹⁴ This is spoken by the figure Metonymy, and it is, as if he had said, Believe not every one that saith, that he hath the gift of the Holy Ghost to do the office of a prophet.

¹⁵ He giveth a certain and perpetual rule to know the doctrine of Antichrist by, to wit, if either the divine or human nature of Christ, or the true uniting of them together, be denied: or if the least jot that may be, be derogated from his office, who is our only King, Prophet, and everlasting high Priest.

¹⁶ He speaketh simply of the doctrine, and not of the person.

¹⁷ The true Messias.

¹⁸ Is true Man.

¹⁹ He comforteth the elect with a most sure hope of victory: but yet so, that he teacheth them that they fight not with their own virtue, but with the virtue and power of God.

²⁰ He bringeth a reason why the world receiveth these teachers more willingly than the true: to wit, because they breathe out nothing but that which is worldly: which is another note also to know the doctrine of Antichrist by.

²¹ He testifieth unto them, that his doctrine, and the doctrine of his fellows, is the assured word of God, which of necessity we have boldly to set against all the mouths of the whole world, and thereby discern the truth from fallhood.

²² The true prophets, against whom are set false prophets, that is, such as err themselves, and lead others into error.

²³ He returneth to the commending of brotherly love and charity.

²⁴ The first reason: Because it is a very divine thing, and therefore very meet for the sons of God: so that whosoever is void of it, cannot be said to know God aright.

²⁵ A confirmation: for it is the true nature of God to love men, whereof we have a most manifest proof above all others, in that, that of his only free and infinite good will towards us his enemies, he delivered unto death, not a common man, but that his own Son, yea his only begotten Son, to the end that we, being reconciled through his blood, might be made partakers of his everlasting glory.

²⁶ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

²⁷ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

²⁸ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

²⁹ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

³⁰ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

³¹ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

³² In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

³³ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

³⁴ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

³⁵ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

³⁶ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

³⁷ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

³⁸ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

³⁹ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

⁴⁰ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

⁴¹ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

⁴² In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

⁴³ In that he calleth God Love, he saith more than if he had said, that he loveth us infinitely.

A. D. 90. begotten Son into this world, that we might live through him.

10 Herein is that love: not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be a reconciliation for our sins.

11 ⁹ Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another.

12 * ¹⁰ No man hath seen God at any time.

* John 1. 18. 1 Tim. 6. 16. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is ⁸ perfect in us.

13 Hereby know we, that we dwell in him, and he in us: because he hath given us of his Spirit.

14 ¹¹ And we have seen, and do testify, that the Father sent that Son to be the Saviour of the world.

15 Whosoever ^h confesseth that Jesus is the Son of God, in him dwelleth God, and he in God.

16 And we have known, and believed the love that God hath in us. ¹² God is love, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him.

17 ¹³ Herein is that love perfect in us, that we should have boldness in the day of judgment: for ¹ as he is, even so are we in this world.

18 There is no ^k fear in love, but perfect love casteth out fear: for fear hath painfulness: and he that feareth, is not perfect in love.

19 ¹⁴ We love him, because he loved us first.

20 ¹⁵ If any man say, I love God, and hate

⁹ Another reason by comparison: if God so loved us, shall not we his children love one another?

¹⁰ A third reason: Because God is invisible, therefore by this effect of his Spirit, to wit, by charity, he is understood, yea, and to be not out of us, but joined with us, and in us, in whom he is so effectually working.

⁸ Is surely in us in deed and in truth.

¹¹ He underlayeth this charity with another foundation, to wit, faith in Jesus, which joined us indeed with him, even as charity witnesseth that we are joined with him. Furthermore, he testifieth of Christ, as who had seen him with his eyes.

^h With such a confession as cometh from true faith, and is accompanied with love, so that there be an agreement of all things.

¹² A fourth reason: God is the fountain and well-spring of charity; yea, charity itself: therefore whosoever abideth in it, hath God with him.

¹³ Again (as a little before) he commendeth love: for that, seeing that by our agreement with God in this thing, we have a certain testimony of our adoption, it cometh thereby to pass, that without fear we look for that latter day of judgment, so that trembling, and that torment of conscience, is cast out by this love.

^k If we understand by love, that we are in God, and God in us; that we are sons, and that we know God, and that everlasting life is in us: he concludeth aright, that we may well gather peace and quietness thereby.

¹⁴ Lest any man should think, that that peace of conscience proceedeth from our love, as from the cause, he goeth back to the fountain, to wit, to the free love wherewith God loveth us, although we deserved and do deserve his wrath. And hereof springeth another double charity, which both are tokens and witnesses of that first, to wit, that therewithal we love God, who loved us first, and then for his sake our neighbours also.

¹⁵ As he shewed that the love of our neighbour cannot be separate from the love wherewith God loveth us, because this last engendereth the other: so he denieth that the other kind of love wherewith we love God can be separate from the love of our neighbour: whereof it followeth, that they lye impudently which say they worship God, and yet regard not their neighbours.

¹⁶ The first reason taken of comparison, why we cannot hate our neighbour, and love God, to wit, because that he that cannot love his brother, whom he seeth, how can he love God, whom he seeth not?

¹⁷ A second reason, why God cannot be hated, and our neighbour loved, because the self-same law maker commandeth both to love him and our neighbour.

his brother, he is a liar: ¹⁶ for how can he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, love God whom he hath not seen?

21 * ¹⁷ And this commandment have we of him, that he that loveth God, should love his brother also.

CHAP. V.

1 He sheweth that brotherly love and faith, are things inseparable. 10 And that there is no faith towards God, but by believing in Christ. 14 Hence proceedeth calling upon God with assurance, 16 and also that our prayers be available for our brethren.

W Hosoever ^a believeth that Jesus is that ^a Christ, is born of God: and every one that loveth him which begat, loveth ^b him also which is begotten of him:

2 ² In this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his ^c commandments.

3 ³ For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: ⁴ and ⁵ his commandments are not ^d burdensome.

4 ⁵ For all that is born of God, overcometh this world: ⁶ and this is the victory that ^e hath overcome this world, even our ^f faith.

5 * ⁷ Who is it that overcometh this world, but he which believeth that Jesus is that Son of God?

6 ⁸ This is that Jesus Christ that came by

4 F

¹ He goeth on forward to the same argument, shewing how both the ^e loves come into us, from that love wherewith God loveth us, to wit, by Jesus, our Mediator, laid hold on by faith, in whom we are made the children of God, and do love the Father, of whom we are to be begotten, and also our brethren, which are begotten with us.

^a Is the true Messias.

^b By one he meaneth all the faithful.

² The love of our neighbour doth so hang upon the love wherewith we love God, that this last must needs go before the first: whereof it followeth, that that is not to be called love, when men agree together to do evil, neither that, when as in loving our neighbours, we respect not God's commandment.

^c There is no love where there is no true doctrine.

³ The reason: for to love God, is to keep his commandments, which being so and seeing that both the loves are commanded of one and the self-same Law-maker, (as he taught before) it followeth also, that we do not love our neighbours, when we break God's commandments.

⁴ Because experience teacheth us, that there is no ability in our flesh, neither yet will to perform God's commandments; therefore lest the apostle should seem, by so often putting them in mind of the commandments of God, to require things that are impossible, he pronounceth that the commandments of God are not in such sort grievous or burdensome, that we can be oppressed with the burden of them.

^d To them that be regenerate, that is to say, born anew, which are led by the Spirit of God, and are through grace delivered from the curse of the law.

⁵ A reason: Because by regeneration we have gotten strength to overcome the world, that is to say, whatsoever striveth against the commandments of God.

⁶ He declareth what that strength is, to wit, faith.

^e He useth the time that is past, to give us to understand, that although we be in the battle, yet undoubtedly we shall be conquerors, and are most certain of the victory.

^f Which is the instrumental cause, and as a mean and hand whereby we lay hold on him, who indeed doth perform this, that is, hath and doth overcome the world, even Christ Jesus.

⁷ Moreover, he declareth two things, the one, what true faith is, to wit, that which resteth upon Jesus Christ the Son of God alone: whereupon followeth the other, to wit, that this strength is not proper to faith, but by faith, as an instrument, is drawn from Jesus Christ the Son of God.

⁸ He proveth the excellency of Christ, in whom only all things are given us, by six witnesses, three heavenly, and three earthly, which wholly and fully agree together. The heavenly witnesses are, the Father, who sent the Son,

A. D. 90. water and blood: ⁹ not by water only, but by water and blood: and it is that ⁵ Spirit that beareth witness: for that Spirit is truth.

7 For there are three which bear record in heaven, the Father, the ³ Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are ¹ one.

8 And there are three which bear record in the earth, the spirit, and the water, and the blood: and these three agree in one.

9 ¹² If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater: for ⁸ this is the witness of God, which he testified of his Son.

10 ¹¹ He that believeth in that Son of God, hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God, hath made him a liar, because he believed not the record that God witnessed of that his Son.

11 ¹² And this is that record, to wit, that God hath given unto us eternal life, and this life is in that his Son.

12 He that hath that Son, hath that life: and he that hath not that Son of God, hath not that life.

13 ¹³ These things have I written unto you that believe in the name of that Son of God, that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe in the name of that Son of God.

the Word itself, which became flesh, and the Holy Ghost. The earthly witnesses are water, (that is, our sanctification) blood, (that is, our justification) the Spirit, (that is, acknowledging of God the Father in Christ by faith through the testimony of the Holy Ghost.)

⁹ He warneth us not to separate water from blood (that is, sanctification from justification, or righteousness begun, from righteousness imputed) for we stand not upon sanctification, but so far forth as it is a witness of Christ's righteousness imputed unto us: and although this imputation of Christ's righteousness be never separated from sanctification, yet is it the only matter of our salvation.

⁵ Our spirit, which is the third witness, testifieth, that the Holy Ghost is truth, that is to say, that that is true which he telleth us, to wit, that we are the sons of God.

¹² He sheweth by an argument of comparison, of what great weight the heavenly testimony is that the Father hath given of the Son, unto whom agreeth both the Son himself and the Holy Ghost.

⁸ I conclude thus aright: for that testimony which I said is given in heaven, cometh from God, who setteth forth his Son.

¹¹ He proveth the sureness of the earthly witness by every man's conscience, having that testimony in itself, which conscience, he saith, cannot be deceived, because it consenteth to the heavenly testimony which the Father giveth of the Son: for otherwise the Father must needs be a liar, if the conscience which accordeth and assenteth to the Father, should lye.

¹² Now at length he sheweth what this testimony is, that is confirmed with so many witnesses: to wit, that life, or everlasting felicity, is the mere and only gift of God, which is in the Son, and proceedeth from him unto us, which by faith are joined with him, so that without him, life is nowhere to be found.

¹³ The conclusion of the epistle, wherein he sheweth first of all, that even they which already believe, do stand in 14 ¹⁴ And this is that assurance that we have in him, ⁸ that if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us.

15 And if we know that he heareth us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we have desired of him.

16 ¹⁵ If any man see his brother sin a sin that is not unto death, let him ¹ ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death.

⁸ There is a sin unto death: I say not that thou shouldst pray for it.

17 ¹⁶ All unrighteousness is sin, but there is a sin not unto death.

18 ¹⁷ We know that whosoever is born of God, sinneth not: but he that is begotten of God, keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not.

19 ¹⁸ We know that we are of God, and this whole world lieth in wickedness.

20 But we know that that Son of God is ²⁰ come, and hath given us a mind to know him which is true: and we are in him that is true, that is, in that his Son Jesus Christ: this same is that very ²⁰ God and that eternal life.

21 ¹⁹ Little children, keep yourselves from idols. Amen.

need of this doctrine, to the end that they may grow more and more in faith: that is to say, to the end that they may be daily more and more certified of their salvation in Christ through faith.

¹⁴ Because we do not yet in effect obtain that which we hope for, the apostle joineth invocation or prayer with faith, which he will have to proceed from faith, and moreover to be conceived in such sort, that nothing be asked but that which is agreeable to the will of God: and such prayers cannot be vain.

¹⁵ We are to make prayers not only for ourselves, but also for our brethren which do sin, that their sins be not unto them, to death: and yet he excepteth that sin which is never forgiven, or the sin against the Holy Ghost, that is to say, an universal and wilful falling away from the known truth of the gospel.

¹ This is as much as if he said, Let him desire the Lord to forgive him, and he will forgive him, being so desired.

¹⁶ The taking away of an objection: Indeed all iniquity is comprehended under the name of sin: but yet we must not despair therefore, because every sin is not deadly, and without hope of remedy.

¹⁷ A reason why not all; nay rather why no sin is mortal to some: to wit, because they be born of God, that is to say, made the sons of God in Christ, and being endued with his Spirit, they do not serve sin, neither are deadly wounded of Satan.

¹⁸ Every man must particularly apply to himself the general promises, that we may certainly persuade our selves, that whereas all the world is by nature lost, we are freely made the sons of God, by the sending of Jesus Christ his son unto us, of whom we are lightened with the knowledge of the true God and everlasting life.

²⁰ The divinity of Christ is most plainly proved by this place.

¹⁹ He expresseth a plain precept of taking heed of idols: which he setteth against the only true God, that with this seal as it were he might seal up all the former doctrine.

The Second Epistle of J O H N.

A. D. 90. ¹ This epistle is written to a woman of great renown, ⁴ who brought up her children in the fear of God. ⁶ He exhorteth her to continue in Christian charity, ⁷ that she accompany not with antichrists, ¹⁰ but avoid them.

THE elder to the ^a elect ^b lady, and her children, ¹ whom I love in the truth, and not I only, but also all that have known the truth,

² For the truth's sake which dwelleth in us, and shall be with us for ever:

³ Grace be with you, mercy and peace from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ the Son of the Father, with ^c truth and love.

⁴ ² I rejoiced greatly, that I found of thy children walking in ^d truth, as we have received a commandment of the Father.

⁵ And now beseech I thee, lady, (not as writing a new commandment unto thee, but that same which we had from the beginning) that we ^e love one another.

⁶ And this is that love, that we should walk after his commandments. This commandment is, that as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it.

^a This is no proper name, but to be taken as the word sounce, that is to say, to the worthy and noble lady.

^b Excellent and honourable dame.

^c The Lord of Christian conjunction, or linking together, is the true and constant profession of the truth.

^d With true knowledge, which hath always love joined with it, and following it.

^e This true profession consisteth both in love one towards another, which the Lord hath commanded, and also especially in wholesome and sound doctrine, which also is delivered unto us: for the commandment of God is a sound

⁷ ³ For many deceivers are entered into this world, which confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. He that is such one, is a deceiver and an Antichrist.

⁸ ⁴ Look to yourselves, that we lose not the things which we have done, but that we may receive a full reward.

⁹ Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that continueth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.

¹⁰ ⁵ If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, ^{*} receive him not to house, ¹⁷ neither bid him God speed: ¹⁶ Rom. 16.

¹¹ For he that biddeth him God speed, is partaker of his evil deeds. Although I had many things to write unto you, yet I would not write with paper and ink: but I trust to come unto you, and speak mouth to mouth, that our joy may be full.

¹² The sons of thine elect sister greet thee. Amen.

and sure foundation, both of the rule of manners, and of doctrine, and these cannot be separated the one from the other.

^d According as the truth directeth them.

^e Antichrists, fighting against the person and office of Christ, were already crept into the church, in the time of the apostles.

⁴ He that maketh shipwreck of doctrine, loseth all.

^{*} Beware, and take good heed.

¹⁷ We ought to have nothing to do with them that defend perverse doctrine.

The Third Epistle of J O H N.

A. D. 90. ¹ He commendeth Gaius for hospitality, ⁹ and reprehendeth Diotrephes for vain glory. ¹⁰ He exhorteth Gaius to continue in well doing, ¹² and in the end commendeth Demetrius.

THE ¹ elder unto the beloved Gaius, whom I love in the truth.

² Beloved, I wish chiefly that thou prosperedst and farest well, as thy soul prospereth.

³ For I rejoiced greatly when the brethren came, and testified of the truth that is in thee, how thou walkest in the truth.

⁴ I have no greater joy than ^a these; that is, to hear that my sons walk in verity.

⁵ Beloved, thou doest ^b faithfully, what-

^a An example of a Christian gratulation.

^b Than these joys.

^c As becometh a believer, and a Christian.

^d He commendeth to Gaius, either those self-same men whom he had entertained before, returning now again to him, about the affairs of the church, or else some other soever thou doest to the brethren, and to strangers, A. D. 90.

⁶ Which bare witness of thy love before the churches. Whom if thou ^c bringest on their journey as it becometh, according to God, thou shalt do well, ⁷ Because that for his name's sake they went forth, and took nothing of the Gentiles.

⁸ We therefore ought to receive such, that we might be ^d helpers to the truth.

⁹ ² I wrote unto the church: but Diotrephes, which loveth to have the pre-eminence among them, receiveth us not:

¹⁰ Where-which had like business.

^d That we ourselves may help somewhat to the preaching of the truth.

^e Ambition and covetousness, two pestilent plagues (especially in them which have any ecclesiastical function) are condemned in Diotrephes' person.

A. D. 99. 10 Wherefore if I come, I will call to your remembrance the deeds which he doth, prating against us with malicious words, and not there-with content, neither he himself receiveth the brethren, but forbiddeth them that would, and thrusteth them out of the church.

11 Beloved, follow not that which is evil, but that which is good: he that doth well, is of God: but he that doth evil, hath not^e seen God.

12 Demetrius hath good report of all men, and of the truth itself: yea, and we ourselves bear record, and ye know that our record is true. A. D. 99.

13 I have many things to write: but I will not with ink and pen write unto thee:

14 For I trust I shall shortly see thee, and we shall speak mouth to mouth. Peace be with thee. The friends salute thee. Greet the friends by name.

^e Hath not known God.

The General Epistle of J U D E.

A. D. 100. 3 He warneth the godly to take heed of such men, 4 that make the grace of God a cloak for their wantonness, 5 and that they shall not escape unpunished, for the contempt of that grace, 6, 7 he proveth by three examples, 14 and alledgeth the prophecy of Enoch. 20 Finally, he sheweth the godly mean to overthrow all the janes of these deceivers.

JUDE a servant of Jesus Christ, and^a brother of James, to them which are called and sanctified^b of God the Father, and^c reserved to Jesus Christ:

2 Mercy unto you, and peace and love be multiplied.

3^d Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the^e common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you to exhort you, that ye should^f earnestly contend for the maintenance of the faith which was^g once given unto the saints.

4^h For there are certain men crept in, which were before of old ordained to this condemnation: ungodly menⁱ they are, which turn the grace of God into wantonness, and^j deny God the only Lord, and our Lord Jesus Christ.

5^k I will therefore put you in remembrance, forasmuch as ye once knew this, how that the Lord, after that he had delivered the people out of Egypt, ^ldestroyed them afterward which believed not. A. D. 66. Num. 14. 37.

6^m Theⁿ angels also which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day. 2 Pet. 2. 4.

7 As^o Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them, which, in like manner as they did, committed fornication, and followed^p strange flesh, are set forth for an ensample, and suffer the vengeance of eternal fire. Gen. 19. 24.

8 Likewise notwithstanding, these^q sleepers also defile the flesh, ^rand despise^s government, and speak evil of them that are in authority.

9^t Yet Michael the archangel, when he strove against the devil, and disputed about the body of Moses, durst not blame him with cursed speaking, but said, The Lord rebuke thee.

10^u But these speak evil of those things which they know not: and whatsoever things they know naturally as beasts, which are without reason, in those things they corrupt themselves.

11^v Wo be unto them: for they have followed

^a This is put to make a difference between him and Judas Iscariot.

^b By God the Father.

^c Set apart by the everlasting counsel of God, to be delivered to Christ to be kept.

^d The end and mark whereat he shooteth in this epistle, is that he confirme the godly against certain wicked men, which in some doctrine and good manners.

^e Of those things that pertain to the salvation of all of us.

^f That ye should defend the faith by all the might you can, both by true doctrine and good example of life.

^g Which was once so given, that it may never be changed.

^h It is by God's providence, and not by chance, that many wicked men creep into the church.

ⁱ He condemneth this first in them, that they take a pretence or occasion to wax wanton, by the grace of God: which cannot be, but the chief empire of Christ must be derogated, in that such men give up themselves to Satan, as at this day the sect of Anabaptists doth, which they call Libertines.

^j He setteth forth the horrible punishment of them which have abused the grace of God to follow their own lusts.

^k The fall of the angels was most severely punished, how much more then will the Lord punish wicked and faithless men?

^l Following the steps of Sodom and Gomorrah.

^m Thus he covertly setteth forth their horrible and monstrous lusts.

ⁿ Which are so blockish and void of reason, as if all their senses and wits were in a most dead sleep.

^o Another most pernicious doctrine of theirs, in that they take away the authority of magistrates, and speak evil of them, as at this day the Anabaptists do.

^p It is a greater matter to despise government than the governors, that is to say, the matter itself, than the persons.

^q An argument of comparison: Michael, one of the chiefest angels, was content to deliver Satan, although a most cursed enemy, to the judgment of God to be punished: and these perverse men are not ashamed to speak evil of the powers which are ordained of God.

^r The conclusion: These men are in a double fault, to wit, both for their rash folly in condemning some, and for their impudent and shameless contempt of that knowledge, which when they had gotten, yet notwithstanding they lived as brutish beasts, serving their bellies.

^s He foretelleth their destruction, because they resemble or shew forth Cain's shameless malice, Balaam's filthy covetousness, and, to be short, Korah's seditious and ambitious head.

A. D. 66. lowed the way of * Cain, and are cast away by deceit * of Balaam's wages, and perish in the gainfaying * of Core.

12 ¹⁰ These are rocks in your ¹ feasts of charity when they feast with you, without ^m all fear, feeding themselves: * clouds they are without water, carried about of winds, corrupt trees and without fruit; twice dead, and plucked up by the roots.

13 They are the raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame: they are wandering stars, to whom is reserved the ⁿ blackness of darkness for ever.

14 And Enoch also the seventh from Adam prophesied of such, saying, * Behold, the Lord ^o cometh with thousands of his saints, 15 To give judgment against all men, and to rebuke all the ungodly among them of all their wicked deeds, which they have ungodly committed, and of all their cruel speakings, which wicked sinners have spoken against him.

16 These are murmurers, complainers, walking after their own lusts: * whose mouths speak proud things, having mens persons in admiration, because of advantage.

¹⁰ He rebuketh most sharply, with many other notes and marks, both their dishonesty or filthiness, and their fauciness, but especially their vain bravery of words, and most vain pride, joining therewithal a most grave and heavy threatening out of a most ancient prophecy of Enoch touching the judgment to come.

¹ The feasts of charity were certain banquets, which the brethren, which were members of the church, kept all together, as Tertullian setteth them forth in his Apology, chap. 39.

^m Impudently, without all reverence either to God or man.

ⁿ Most gross darkness.

^o The present time, for the time to come.

¹¹ The rising up of such monsters was spoken of before; that we should not be troubled at the newness of the matter.

¹² It is the property of Antichrists to separate themselves from the godly, because they are not governed by the Spirit

17 ¹¹ But ye, beloved, remember the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ:

18 How that they told you that there should be mockers * in the last time, which should walk after their own ungodly lusts.

19 ¹² These are they that separate themselves from other, natural, having not the Spirit.

20 But ye, beloved, edify yourselves in your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, 21 And keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, unto eternal life.

22 ¹³ And have compassion of some, in putting difference:

23 And other save with ^p fear, pulling them out of the fire, and hate even that ^q garment which is spotted by the flesh.

24 ¹⁴ Now unto him that is able to keep you, that ye fall not, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with joy, 25 That is, to God only wise, our Saviour, be glory, and majesty, and dominion, and power, both now and for ever. Amen.

of God: and contrarywise, it is the property of Christians to edify one another through godly prayers, both in faith, and also in love, until the mercy of Christ appear to their full salvation.

¹³ Amongst them which wander and go astray, the godly have to use this choice, that they handle some of them gently, and that other some, being even in the very flame, they endeavour to save with severe and sharp instruction of the present danger: yet so, that they do in such sort abhor the wicked and dishonest, that they eschew even the least contagion that may be.

^p By fearing them, and holding them back with godly severity.

^q An amplification, taken from the forbidden things of the law, which did defile.

¹⁴ He commendeth them to the grace of God, declaring sufficiently, that it is God only that can give us that constancy which he requireth of us.

The year of Christ.

- 1, &c. TH E dragon watcheth the church of the Jews, which was ready to travail: She bringeth forth, fleeth, and hideth herself, whilst Christ was yet upon the earth.
34. The dragon persecuteth Christ ascending into heaven: he fighteth, and is thrown down; and after persecuteth the church of the Jews.
67. The church of the Jews is received into the wilderness, for three years and an half.
70. When the church of the Jews was overthrown, the dragon invaded the catholic church: all this is in chap. 12.
The dragon is bound for a thousand years, chap. 20.
The dragon raiseth up the beast with seven heads, and the beast with two heads, which make havock of the church catholic and her prophets for 1260 years after the passion of Christ, chap. 13 and 11.
97. The seven churches are admonished of things present, somewhat before the end of Domitian's reign, and are forewarned of the persecution to come under Trajan for ten years, chap. 2 and 3.
God by word and signs provoketh the world, and sealeth the godly, chap. 6. and 7.
He sheweth forth examples of his wrath upon all creatures, mankind excepted, chap. 8.
1073. The dragon is let loose after a thousand years, and Gregory the VIIth. being pope, rageth against Henry the III. then emperor, chap. 20.
1217. The dragon vexeth the world 150 years unto Gregory the IXth. who wrote the Decretals, and most cruelly persecuted the emperor Frederic the II.
The dragon by both the beasts persecuteth the church, and putteth the godly to death, chap. 9.
1295. The dragon killeth the prophets after 1260 years, when Boniface the VIIIth. was pope, who was the author of the sixth book of the Decretals: he excommunicated Philip the French king.
1300. Boniface celebrateth the Jubilee.
1301. About this time was a great earthquake, which overthrew many houses in Rome.
1305. Prophecy ceaseth for three years and an half, until Benedict the II. succeeded after Boniface the VIIIth. Prophecy is revived, chap. 11.
The dragon and the two beasts oppugn prophecy, chap. 13.
Christ defendeth his prophecy in word and deed, chap. 14.
With threats and arms, chap. 16.
Christ giveth his church victory over the harlot, chap. 17, 18.
Over the two beasts, chap. 19.
Over the dragon and death, chap. 20.
The church is fully glorified in heaven with eternal glory, in Christ Jesus, chap. 21, and 22.

REVELATION of ST. JOHN the Apostle and Evangelist, with the Annotations of FRANC. JUNIUS.

C H A P. I.

A. D.
96.

1 He declareth what kind of doctrine is here handled,
8 even his, that is the beginning and ending: 12
Then the mystery of the seven candlesticks and stars 20 is expounded.

THE ¹ Revelation of ^b Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants things which must shortly be done: which he sent, and shewed by his angel unto his servant
John,

2 Who bare record of the word of God, and of the testimony of Jesus Christ, and of all things that he saw.

3 Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein: for the time is at hand.

4 ² John to the seven churches which are in Asia, Grace be with you, and peace ³ from him
^c which ^{*} is, and which was, and which is to ⁴ Exod. 3.

¹ This chapter hath two principal parts; the title or inscription, which standeth instead of an exordium: and a narration going before the whole prophecy of this book.
The inscription is double, general and particular. The general containeth the kind of prophecy, the author, end, matter, instruments, and manner of communicating the same, in the first ver. e: the most religious faithfulness of the apostle as a public witness, verse 2. And the use of communicating the same, taken from the promise of God, and from the circumstance of the time, ver. 3.

² An opening of a hid and secret thing.

^b Which the Son opened to us out of his Father's bosom by angels.

² This is the particular or singular inscription, wherein salvation is written unto certain churches by name, which represent the church catholic: and the certainty and truth of the same is declared, from the author thereof, unto the eighth verse.

³ That is, from God the Father, eternal, immortal, immutable: whose unchangeableness Saint John declareth by a form of speech which is undeclined. For there is no incongruity in this place, where, of necessity, the words must be attempted unto the mysteries, and not the mysteries corrupted or impaired by the words.

^c By these three times, is, was, and shall be, is signified this word Jehovah, which is the proper name of God.

⁴ That is, from the Holy Ghost, which proceedeth from the Father and the Son. This Spirit is one in person according to his substance: but in communication of his virtue, and in demonstration of his divine works in those seven churches, doth so perfectly manifest himself, as if there were so many spirits, every one perfectly working in his own church. Wherefore after, chapter 5, 6. they are called the seven horns, and seven eyes of the Lamb, as much as to say, as his most absolute power and wisdom: and chapter 3. 1. Christ is said to have those seven spirits of God: and chapter 4. 5. it is said, that seven lamps do burn before his throne, which also are those seven Spirits of God. That this place ought to be so understood, it is thus proved. For first, grace and peace is asked by prayer of this Spirit, which is a divine work, and an action incommunicable in respect of the most high Deity. Secondly, he is placed between the Father and the Son, as set in the same degree of dignity and operation with them; besides, he is before the throne, as of the same substance with the Father and the Son: as the seven eyes and the seven horns come, and from ⁴ the ^d seven spirits which are before his throne, A. D.

96.

5 And from Jesus Christ, ⁵ which is that ^{} faithful witness, and ^{} that first begotten of the dead, and that Prince of the kings of the earth, unto him that loved us; and washed us from our sins in his ^{*} blood;

6 And made us ^{*} kings and priests unto God even his Father, to him, I say, be glory and dominion for evermore. Amen.

7 Behold, he cometh with ^{*} clouds, and every ^e eye shall see him: yea, even they which pierced him through: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail before him. Even so. Amen.

8 ⁶ I ^{*} am ^f Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending; saith the Lord, Which is,
and which was, and which is to come, even the Almighty. ^{*} Ch. 21. 6.
and 22. 13.

9 ⁷ I John, even your brother and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of

of the Lamb. Moreover, these spirits are never said to adore God, as all other things are. Finally, that it is the power whereby the Lamb openeth the book, and loosed the seven seals thereof, when none could be found amongst all creatures by whom the book might be opened, chap. 5. Of these things long ago Master John Luide of Oxford wrote-learnedly unto me. Now the Holy Ghost is set in order of words before Christ, because there was in that which followeth a long process of speech to be used concerning Christ.

^d These are the seven spirits, which are afterwards, chap.
5. ver. 6. called the horns and eyes of the Lamb, and are now made as a guard waiting upon God.

⁵ A most ample and grave commendation of Christ, first,
from his offices, the priesthood and kingdom: secondly, from his benefits, as his love towards us, and washing us with his blood, in this verse, and communication of his kingdom and priesthood with us: thirdly, from his eternal glory and power, which is always to be celebrated of us, verse 6. Finally, from the accomplishment of all things once to be effected by him, at his second coming, what time he shall openly destroy the wicked, and shall comfort the godly in the truth, verse 7.

^c All men.

⁶ A confirmation of the salutation aforegoing, taken from the words of God himself: in which he avoucheth his operation in every singular creature, the immutable eternity that is in himself, and his omnipotency in all things: and concludeth in the Unity of his own essence, that Trinity of person which was before spoken of.

^f I am he before whom there is nothing; yea, by whom every thing that is made, was made, and shall remain, tho' all they should perish.

⁷ The narration, opening the way to the declaring of the authority and calling of Saint John the Evangelist in this singular Revelation, and to procure faith and credit unto this prophecy. This is the second part of this chapter, consisting of a proposition, and an exposition. The proposition sheweth; first, who was called unto this Revelation, in what place, and how occupied, verse 9. Then at what time, and by what means, namely by the Spirit, and the word, and that, on the Lord's day, which day, ever since the resurrection of Christ, was consecrated for Christians unto the religion of the sabbath: that is to say, to be a day of rest, verse 10. Thirdly, who is the author that calleth him, and what is the sum of his calling.

A. D. 96. or Jesus Christ, was in the Isle ⁸ called Patmos, for the word of God, and for the witnessing of Jesus Christ:

10 And I was ravished in ⁹ spirit on the Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as it had been a trumpet, 11 Saying, I am Alpha and Omega, that first and that last: and that which thou seest, write in a book, and send it unto the seven churches which are in Asia, unto Ephesus, and unto Smyrna, and unto Pergamus, and unto Thyatira, and unto Sardis, and unto Philadelphia, and unto Laodicea.

12 ⁸ Then I turned back to ⁸ see the voice that spake unto me: ⁹ and when I was turned, I saw seven golden candlesticks, 13 And in the midst of the seven candlesticks, one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the feet, and girded about the paps with a golden girdle.

14 His head and hairs were white as white wool, and as snow, and his eyes were as a flame of fire, 15 And his feet like fine brass burning as in a furnace: and his voice as the sound of many waters.

16 And he had in his right hand seven stars: and out of his mouth went a sharp two-edged sword: and his face shone as the sun shineth in his strength.

17 ¹² And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead: ¹¹ then he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not: ¹² I am the ⁸ first and the last,

18 And am alive, but I was dead: and behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen: and I have the keys of hell and of death.

19 ¹³ Write the things which thou hast seen,

⁸ Patmos is one of the isles of Sporades, whither John was banished, as some write.

⁹ This is that holy ravishment expressed, wherewith the prophets were ravished, and being as it were carried out of the world, were conversant with God: and ⁶ Ezekiel saith often, that he was carried from place to place of the Lord's Spirit: and that the Spirit of the Lord fell upon him.

¹ He calleth it the Lord's day, which Paul calleth the first day of the week, 1 Cor. 16. 2.

⁸ The exposition declaring the third and last point of the proposition (for the other points are evident of themselves) wherein is spoken, first, of the author of his calling, unto the seventeenth verse; secondly, of the calling itself, unto the end of the chapter. And first of all the occasion is noted in this verse, in that St. John turned himself towards the vision: after is set down the description of the author, in the 13, 14, 15 and 16th verses following.

⁸ To see him whose voice I had heard.

⁹ The description of the author, which is Christ: by the candlesticks that stand about him, that is, the churches that stand before him, and depend upon his direction, in this verse: by his properties, that he is one furnished with wisdom and dexterity to be attaining of great things, verse 13: with ancient gravity and most excellent sight of the eye, ver. 14: with strength invincible, and with a mighty word, ver. 15: By his operations, that he ruleth the ministry of his servants in the church, giveth effect thereunto by the sword of his word, and enlightening all things by his countenance, doth most mightily provide for every one by his divine providence, ver. 16.

¹² A religious fear that goeth before the calling of the saints, and th'ir full confirmation to take upon them the vocation of God.

¹¹ A divine confirmation of this calling, partly by signs, and partly by word of power.

¹² A most elegant description of this calling contained in three things, which are necessary unto a just vocation: First, the authority of him that calleth, for that he is the beginning and end of all things, in this verse; for that he is eternal and omnipotent, ver. 18. Secondly, the sum of this prophetic calling and revelation, ver. 19. Lastly, a declaration of those persons unto whom this prophecy is, by the commandment of God, directed in the description and the things which are, and the things which shall come hereafter.

20 ¹⁴ The mystery of the seven stars which thou sawest in my right hand, and the seven golden candlesticks, is this, The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches: and the seven candlesticks which thou sawest, are the seven churches.

C H A P. II.

1 John is commanded to write those things which the Lord knew necessary, to the churches of Ephesus, 8 of the Smyrnians, 12 of Pergamus, 18 and of Thyatira, 25 that they keep those things which they received of the apostles.

U N T O ¹ the angel of the church of Ephesus write, ² These things saith he that holdeth the seven stars in his right hand, and walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks,

2 ³ I know thy works, and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear with them which are evil, and hast examined them which say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars.

3 And thou wast burdened, and hast patience, and for my name's sake hast laboured, and hast not fainted.

4 Nevertheless, I have some what ⁴ against thee, because thou hast left thy first love.

5 Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent and do the first works: or else I will come against thee shortly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou amend.

6 But this thou hast, that thou hatest the works of the Nicolaitans, which I also hate.

7 ⁴ Let him that hath an ear, hear what the thereof, ver. 20.

¹³ The sum of this prophecy, that the apostle must write whatsoever he should see, adding nothing, nor taking away any thing, ver. 2. Hereof there are two parts: one is a narration of those things which are, that is, which then were at that time contained in the second and third chapters: the other part is of those things which were to come, contained in the rest of this book.

¹⁴ That is, the thing which was mystical, signified by the particulars of the vision before going.

¹ By angels he meaneth the ministers of the church.

² The former part of this book is comprised in a narration of those things which then were, as St. John taught us, chap. 1. 19. it belongeth wholly unto instruction, and in these two next chapters, containeth seven places, according to the number and condition of those churches which were named before, chap. 1. 11. figured verse 12, and distributed most aptly into their pastors and flocks, verse 20. which verse of that chapter is as it were a page unto the first part. Every one of these seven places hath three principal numbers: an exordium taken from the person of the author: a proposition, in which is praise and commendation of that which is good, reprehension of that which is evil: and instruction, containing either an exhortation alone, or withal a dissuasion opposite unto it, and a conclusion stirring up unto attention, by divine promises. And this first place is unto the pastors of the church of Ephesus.

³ The exordium, wherein are contained the special praises of Christ Jesus the author of this prophecy, out of the 6th and 13th verses of the first chapter.

⁴ The proposition, first commending the pastor of this church, verse 2, 3; then reproving him, verse 4; after informing him, and withal threatening that he will translate the church to another place, verse 5. This commination or threat, Christ mitigateth by a kind of correction, calling to mind the particular virtue and piety of that church, which God never leaveth without recompense, verse 6. Concerning the Nicolaitans, see after upon the 15th verse.

⁴ To deal with thee for.

⁴ The conclusion, containing a commandment of attention, and a promise of everlasting life, shadowed out in a figure, of which Gen. 2. 9.

A. D. 96. the Spirit saith unto the churches: To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life which is in the midst of the Paradise of God.

8 ¶ And unto the angel of the church of the Smyrnians, write, These things saith he that is first and last, which was dead and is alive:

9 I know thy works and tribulation, and poverty (but thou art rich) and I know the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan.

10 Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, it shall come to pass, that the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried, and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto the death, and I will give thee the crown of life.

11 ¶ Let him that hath an ear, hear what the Spirit saith to the churches. He that overcometh, shall not be hurt of the second death.

12 ¶ And to the angel of the church which is at Pergamus, write, This saith he which hath that sharp sword with two edges:

13 I know thy works, and where thou dwellest, even where Satan's throne is, and thou keepest my name, and hast not denied my faith, even in those days when Antipas my faithful martyr was slain among you, where Satan dwelleth.

14 But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that maintain the doctrine of Balaam, which taught Balac to put a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, that they should eat of things sacrificed unto idols, and commit fornication.

15 Even so hast thou them that maintain the doctrine of the Nicolaitans, which thing I hate.

16 Repent thyself, or else I will come unto thee shortly, and will fight against thee with the sword of my mouth.

17 ¶ Let him that hath an ear, hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches. To him that overcometh, will I give to eat of the Manna that is hid, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no-man knoweth saving he that receiveth it.

18 ¶ And unto the angel of the church which is at Thyatira, write, These things saith the Son of God, which hath his eyes like unto a flame of fire, and his feet like fine brasse:

19 I know thy works and thy love, and service, and faith, and thy patience, and thy works, and that they are more at the last, than at the first.

20 Notwithstanding, I have a few things against thee, that thou sufferest the woman Jezebel, which calleth herself a prophetess, to teach and to deceive my servants, to make them commit fornication, and to eat meat sacrificed unto idols:

21 And I gave her space to repent of her fornication, but she repented not.

22 Behold, I will cast her into a bed, and them that commit fornication with her, into great affliction, except they repent them of their works.

23 And I will kill her children with death: and all the churches shall know that I am he which search the reins and hearts: and I will give unto every one of you according unto your works.

24 And unto you I say, the rest of them of Thyatira, As many as have not this learning, neither have known the deepness of Satan (as they speak) I will put upon you none other burden,

4 G

25 But

⁵ That is, in Paradise, after the manner of the Hebrew phrase.

⁶ This Christ speaketh as he is Mediator.

⁷ The second place is unto the pastors of the church of the Smyrnians. The exordium is taken out of the 17th and 18th verses of the first chapter.

⁸ Smyrna was one of the cities of Ionia in Asia.

⁹ The proposition of praise is in this verse, and of exhortation joined with promise, is in the next verse.

¹⁰ That is, of ten years. For so commonly both in this book and in Daniel, years are signified by the name of days, that God thereby might declare, that the space of time is appointed by him, and the same very short. Now because Saint John wrote this book in the end of Domitian the emperor's reign, as Justinus and Irenæus do witness, it is altogether necessary that this should be referred unto that perfection which was done by the authority of the emperor Trajan, who began to make havock of the Christian churches in the tenth year of his reign, as the historiographers do write: and his bloody persecution continued until Adrian the emperor succeeded in his place: the space of which time is precisely ten years, which are here mentioned.

¹¹ The conclusion, ver. 7.

¹² See chap. 20. 6.

¹³ The third place is unto the pastors of Pergamus. The exordium is taken out of the sixteenth verse of the first chapter.

¹⁴ Pergamus was the name of a famous city in old time in Asia, where the kings of the Attalians were always resident.

¹⁵ The proposition of praise, is in this verse, of reprehension in the two following, and of exhortation joined with a conditional threat, ver. 16. Now this Antipas was the angel or minister of the church of Pergamus, as Aretas writeth.

¹⁶ The faith of them of Pergamus is so much the more highly commended, because they remained constant even in the very heat of persecution.

¹⁷ That which is here spoken of things offered to idols, is meant of the same kind which Paul speaketh of, 1 Cor. 10. 14.

¹⁸ Which follow the footsteps of Balaam, and such as are abandoned to all filthiness, as he shewed in the verse foregoing, and is here signified by a note of similitude. And thus also must the sixth verse be understood. For this matter especially, Irenæus must be consulted withal.

¹⁹ The conclusion, standing of exhortation as before, and of promise.

²⁰ The bread of life, invisible, spiritual, and heavenly, which is kept secretly with God, from before all eternity.

²¹ He alludeth to that sermon which we read of, John 6. and to the place we find, Psalm 105. 40.

²² Aretas writeth, that such a stone was wont to be given to wrestlers at games, or else that such stones did in old time witness the acquitting of a man.

²³ Which is a sign and witness of forgiveness and remission of sins, of righteousness and true holiness, and of purity incorrupted, after that the old man is killed.

²⁵ The fourth place is unto the pastors of Thyatira. The exordium is taken out of the fourteenth and fifteenth verses of the first chapter.

²⁶ The proposition of praise is in this verse of reprehension, for that they tolerated with them the doctrine of unrighteousness and ungodliness, is verse 20. the authors whereof, though they were called back of God, yet repented not, verse 21. whereunto is added a most heavy threatening, verse 22. and 23. of a conditional promise, and of exhortation to hold fast the truth, in the two verses following.

²⁷ So he calleth those offices of charity which are done to the saints.

²⁸ By fornication, is idolatry, oftentimes in the scripture, meant.

²⁹ He pointeth out the bragging of certain men, which boasted of their deep, that is, plentiful and common knowledge, which notwithstanding is devilish.

³⁰ I will speak no worse thing against you, being content to have shewed you what I require to be in you.

A. D. 96. 25 But that which ye have already, hold fast till I come.

26 ²⁵ For he that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over nations.

• Ps. 2. 9. 27 ²⁶ And he shall rule them with a rod of iron: and as the vessels of a potter, shall they be broken.

28 Even as I received of my Father, so will I give him the ²² morning star.

29 Let him that hath an ear, hear what the Spirit saith to the churches.

C H A P. III.

1 The fifth epistle sent to the pastors of the church of Sardis, 7 of Philadelphia, 14 and of the Laodiceans; 16 that they be not lukewarm, 20 but endeavour to further God's glory.

AND ¹ write unto the angel of the church which is at ^a Sardis, These things saith he that hath the seven spirits of God, and the seven stars, ² I know thy works: for thou hast a ^b name that thou livest, but thou art dead.

2 Be awake, and strengthen the things which remain, that are ^c ready to die: for I have not found thy works perfect before God.

• Ch. 16. 15.
• 1. Thess. 5.
• 1. Pet. 5. 10. 3 Remember therefore, how thou hast received and heard, and hold fast: and repent. ⁴ If therefore thou wilt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee.

4 Notwithstanding thou hast a few names yet in Sardis, ⁵ which have not defiled their garments: and they shall walk with me in ^d white: ^e for they are ^f worthy.

• Ch. 20. 12.
• 1. Thess. 5. 2.
• 1. Pet. 2. 13. 5 He that overcometh, shall be clothed in white array, and I will not put out his name out of the ^g book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels.

6 Let him that hath an ear, hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

7 ⁶ And write unto the angel of the church which is of Philadelphia, These things saith he that is holy, and true, which hath the ^h key of David: which openeth, and no man shutteth: and shutteth, and no man openeth.

8 ⁷ I know thy works: behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it: for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name.

9 Behold, I will make them ⁱ of the synagogue of Satan, which call themselves Jews, and are not, but do lye: behold, I say, I will make them that they shall come ^j and worship before thy feet, and shall know that I have loved thee.

10 Because thou hast ^k kept the word of my patience, therefore I will deliver thee from the hour of temptation, which will come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth.

11 Behold, I come shortly: hold that which thou hast, that no man take thy crown.

12 ⁹ Him that overcometh, will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: ¹⁰ and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is the new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God, and I will write upon him my new name.

13 Let him that hath an ear, hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

14 ¹¹ And unto the angel of the church of the Laodiceans write, These things saith ^h Amen, the faithful and true witness, that ⁱ beginning of the creatures of God.

15 ¹² I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou werest cold or hot.

16 Therefore, because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, it will come to pass, that I shall spue thee out of my mouth.

17 For thou sayest, I am rich and increased with goods, and have need of nothing, and knowest not how thou art wretched and miserable, ¹³ and poor, and blind, and naked.

18 I

²² The conclusion, when in Christ assureth unto his servants the communion of his kingdom and glory in this verse, and that following: and commandeth an holy attention in the last verse.

²¹ That is, I will make him a king, by communion with me, and my fellow heir, as it is promised, Matt. 19. 28. and 25. 34. Rom. 8. 17. and 1 Cor. 6. 3. Eph. 2. 6. and 2 Tim. 2. 12. and Apoc. 3. 21. and 44.

¹ The first place is unto the pastors of Sardis. The exordium is taken out of the 4. and 16 verses of the first chapter.

^a Sardis is the name of a most flourishing and famous city, where the kings of Lydia kept their courts.

² The proposition of the proof is in this verse: of exhortation joined with a threatening in the two verses that follow, and of qualification by way of correction, unto the comfort of the good which yet remaineth there, verse 4.

^b Thou art said to live, but art dead indeed.

^c Other things, whose state is such, that they are now going, and unless they be confirmed, will perish forthwith.

^d That is, who have with all religion guarded themselves from sin and contagion, even from the very shew of evil, as Saint Jude exhorteth, verse 23.

^e Pure from all spot, and shining with glory. So it is to be understood always hereafter, as in the next verse.

^f The conclusion standing upon a promise and a commandment, as b. fore.

^g They are meet and fit, to wit, because they are justified in Christ, as they have truly shewed it: for he is righteous that worketh righteousness: but so as the tree bringeth forth the fruit, look Rom. 8. 13.

^h The sixth place is unto the pastors of Philadelphia. The exordium is taken out of the 18 verse of the first

⁶ All power of rule in commanding and forbidding, in delivering and punishing. And the house of David is the church, and the continual promise of David's kingdom belongeth to Christ.

⁷ The proposition of praise is in this verse: of promises, to bring home again them that wander, verse 9. and to preserve the godly, verse 10. and of exhortation, verse 11.

⁸ I will bring them to that ca. e.

⁹ That is, fall down and worship, either thee civilly, or Christ religiously at thy feet (and thus I had rather take it) whether here in the church (which seemeth more proper to the argument of this place) or there in the world to come. For Christ verily shall fulfil his word.

¹⁰ Because thou hast been patient and constant, as I would my servants should be.

¹¹ The conclusion, which containeth a promise and a commandment.

¹² That is, the new man shall be termed after his father, mother, and head, Christ.

¹³ The seventh place is unto the pastors of the church of Laodicea. The exordium is taken out of the 15 verse of the first chapter.

¹⁴ Amen, soundeth as much in the Hebrew tongue, as truly, or truth itself.

¹⁵ Of whom all things that are made, have their beginning.

¹⁶ The proposition of reproof is in this verse, whereunto is adjoined a threatening, verse 16, with a confirmation declaring the same, verse 17, and of exhortation unto faith and repentance, vers: 18, 19, whereunto is adjoined a conditional promise, verse 20.

¹⁷ The spiritual misery of men is metaphorically expressed in three points: unto which are matched, as correspondent, those remedies which are offered, verse 18.

A. D. 96. 18 I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried by the fire, that thou mayest be made rich: and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that thy filthy nakedness do not appear: and anoint thine eyes with eye salve, that thou mayest see.

19 As many as I love, * I rebuke and chasten: be ^k zealous therefore and amend.

20 Behold, I stand at the door, and knock. ¹⁴ If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in unto him, and will sup with him, and he with me.

21 ¹⁵ To him that overcometh, will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I overcame, and sit with my Father in his throne.

22 Let him that hath an ear, hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

C H A P. IV.

1 Another vision, containing the glory of God's majesty: 8 which is magnified of the four beasts, 10 and the four and twenty elders.

AFTER ¹ this I looked, and behold, a door was open in heaven, and the first voice which I heard, was as it were of a trumpet talking with me, saying, Come up hither, and I will shew thee things which must be done hereafter.

2 And ² immediately I was ravished ² in the spirit, ³ and behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat upon the throne.

3 ⁴ And he that sat, was to look upon, like unto a jasper stone, and a sardine, and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like to an emerald.

^k Zeal is set against them which are neither hot nor cold.

¹⁴ This must be taken after the manner of an allegory, as John 14. 23.

¹⁵ The conclusion, consisting of a promise, as chap. 2. verse 26. and of an exhortation. Hitherto hath been the first part of the book of the Apocalypse.

¹ Hereafter followeth the second part of this book, altogether propheticall, foretelling those things which were to come, as was said before, chap. 1. 19. This is divided into two histories: one common unto the whole world, unto the ninth chapter: and another singular of the church of God, thence unto the 22d chapter, and these histories are said to be described in several books, chapter 5. 1. and 10. 2. Now this first verse is, as it were, a passage from the former part unto the second: where it is said, that the heaven was opened, that is, that heavenly things were unlocked, and that the voice of a trumpet sounded in heaven, to stir up the apostle, and call him to the understanding of things to come. The first history hath two parts: one of the causes of things done, and of this whole Revelation, in this and the next chapter. Another of the acts done in the next four chapters. The principal causes according to the distinction of persons in the unity of the divine essence, and according to the oeconomy or dispensation thereof, are two: one the beginning, which none shall approach unto, that is, God the Father, of whom is spoken in this chapter. The other the Son, who is the mean cause, easy to be approached unto, in respect that he is God and man in one person, of whom, chapter 5.

² The manner of Revelation, as before, 1. 10.

³ Look chapter 1. 10.

⁴ A description of God the Father, and of his glory in the heavens, framed unto the manner of men by his office, nature, company, attending, effect, instruments, and events, that follow afterwards. In this verse he is presented in office a judge, as Abraham said, Gen. 18. which is declared by his throne, as an ensign of judgment, and his sitting thereupon.

⁴ By his nature, in that he is the Father, most glorious in his own person, and with his glory overshadowing all other things.

⁵ By the company attending about him, in that, as that most high judge, he is accompanied with the most hon ur-

4 ⁵ And round about the throne were four and twenty seats, and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment, and had on their heads crowns of gold.

5 ⁶ And out of the throne proceeded lightnings, and thunderings, and voices, and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven spirits of God.

6 ⁷ And before the throne there was a sea of glass like unto chrystal: and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four beasts full of eyes before and behind.

7 And the first beast was like a lion, and the second beast like a calf, and the third beast had a face as a man, and the fourth beast was like a flying eagle.

8 And the ^b four beasts had each one of them six wings about him, and they were full of eyes within; and they ceased not ⁸ day nor night, saying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and which is, and which is to come.

9. And when those beasts ^c gave glory, and honour, and thanks to him that sat on the throne, which liveth for ever and ever,

10 ⁹ The four and twenty elders fell down before him that sat on the throne, and worshipped him that liveth for evermore, and cast their crowns before the throne, saying,

11 ¹⁰ Thou art ^{*} worthy, O Lord, ¹¹ to receive glory, and honour, and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy will's sake they are, and have been created. Ch. 5. 12.

CHAP.

able attendants of prophets and apostles both of the old and new church, whom Christ hath made to be priests and kings, chap. 1. 6. and 5. 10.

⁶ By effects, in that most mightily he speaketh all things by his voice and word, as Psalm 29. 3. and with the light of his spirit and prudence, peruseth and passeth through all.

⁷ By instruments used, in that he hath a most ready treasury, and as it were a work-house, excellently furnished with all things, unto the executing of his will, which things flow from his commandment, as is repeated, chap. 15. 2. and hath also the angels most ready administrators of his councils and pleasure, unto all parts of the world, continually watching (in this verse) working by reason otherwise than the instruments without life last mentioned, courageous as lions, mighty as bulls, wise as men, swift as eagles, verse 7. most apt unto all purposes, as furnished with wings on every part, most piercing of sight, and finally, pure and holy spirits, always in continual motion, verse 8.

^b Every beast had six wings.

⁸ By events, in that for all the causes before mentioned, God is glorified both of angels, as holy, judge, omnipotent, eternal, and immutable, verse 8. and also after their example he is glorified of holy men, verse 9. in sign and in speech, ver. 10, 11.

^c God is said to have glory, honour, kingdom, and such like, given unto him, when we godly and reverently set forth that which is properly and only his.

⁹ Three signs of divine honour given to God, prostration or falling down, adoration and casting their crowns before God: in which the godly, though made kings by Christ, do willingly empty themselves of all glory, moved with a religious respect of the majesty of God.

¹⁰ The sum of their speech: that all glory must be given unto God: the reason, because he is the eternal beginning of all things, from whose only will they have their being, and are governed: and finally, in all respects are that which they are.

¹¹ That is, that thou shouldst challenge the same to thyself alone. But as for us, we are unworthy that even by thy goodness we should be made partakers of this glory. And hitherto hath been handled the principal cause unapproachable, which is God.

C H A P. V.

1 The book sealed with seven seals, 3 which none could open, 6 that Lamb of God is thought worthy to open, 12 even by the consent of all the company of heaven.

AND I saw in the right hand of him that sat upon the throne, a book written within, and on the backside sealed with seven seals.

2 And I saw a strong angel which preached with a loud voice, Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof?

3 And no man in heaven nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon.

4 Then I wept much, because no man was found worthy to open and to read the book, neither to look thereon.

5 And one of the elders said unto me, Weep not: behold, that lion which is of the tribe of Judah, that root of David, hath obtained to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof.

6 Then I beheld, and lo, in the midst of the throne, and of the four beasts, and in the midst of the elders, stood a lamb, as though he had been killed, which had seven horns, and seven eyes, which are the seven spirits of God, sent into all the world.

7 And he came, and took the book out of the right hand of him that sat upon the throne.

8 And when he had taken the book, the four beasts, and the four and twenty elders, fell down before the Lamb, having every one harp and golden vials full of odours, which are the prayers of the saints,

9 And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof, because thou wast killed, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation,

10 And hast made us unto our God kings, and priests, and we shall reign on the earth.

11 Then I beheld, and I heard the voice of many angels round about the throne, and about the beasts and the elders, and there were ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands:

12 Saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was killed, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and praise.

13 And all the creatures which are in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I, saying, Praise, and honour, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for evermore.

14 And the four beasts said, Amen, and the four and twenty elders fell down and worshipped him that liveth for evermore.

C H A P. VI.

1 The Lamb openeth the first seal of the book, 3 the second, 5 the third, 7 the fourth, 9 the fifth, 12 and the sixth, and then arise murders, famine, pestilence, outcries of saints, earthquakes, and divers strange sights in heaven.

AFTER

A passing unto the second principal cause, which is the Son of God, God and man, the mediator of all, as the eternal Word of God the Father, manifested in the flesh. This chapter hath two parts: one that prepareth the way unto the Revelation, by rehearsal of the occasions that did occur in the first four verses. Another, the history of the Revelation of Christ: thence unto the end of the chapter.

1 That is, in the very right hand of God.

2 Here are shewed the occasions for which this principal cause, and this Revelation was also necessary: the same are three; the first a present vision of the book of the counsels of God, concerning the government of this whole world, which book is said to be laid up with the Father as it were in his hand: but shut and unknown to all creatures, in this verse. The second is a religious desire of the angels of God to understand the mysteries of this book, verse 2. whereof see 1 Peter, 1. 12. The third is a lamentation of Saint John and all the godly, moved by the same desire, verse 4. when they saw that it was a thing impossible for any creature to effect: which is declared in verse 3.

4 Thus neither of them that are in heaven, nor of them which are in the earth, &c. And this I like better. Now this enumeration of parts is sufficient to the denying of the whole: For of the creatures, one sort is in heaven, above the earth: another in the earth, and another under the earth, in the sea, as is afterwards declared, verse 13.

5 The second part of this chapter, in which is set down the Revelation of the Son, as before was said. This part containeth first an history of the manner how God prepared Saint John to understand this Revelation, in this verse. Secondly, the Revelation of the Son himself, unto the 7th verse. Thirdly, the accidents of this Revelation, in the rest of the chapter. The manner how is here described in two sorts: one from without him, by speech, in this verse: another within, by opening the eyes of Saint John (which before were held) that he might see, in the verse following.

6 That is, the most mighty and most approved prince: according to the use of the Hebrew speech.

7 The fact of this Revelation: Christ the mediator taketh and openeth the book, verse 6, 7. Therefore in this Revelation is described the person of Christ, in this verse. His fact in the next verse. The person is thus described: Christ, the mediator between God, angels, and men, as the eternal Word of God, and our redeemer: as the Lamb of God, standing as slain, and making intercession for us by the virtue and merit of his everlasting sacrifice, is armed with the Spirit of God in his own person, that is, with the power and wisdom of God effectually unto the government of this whole world.

8 The fact of Christ the mediator: that he cometh unto the throne of the Father, of which chap. 4. and taketh the book out of his hand to open it. For that he opened it, it is first expressed, chap. 6, 1, &c.

9 Now follow in the end the accidents of the Revelation last spoken of: that all the holy angels and men did sing unto him: both the chief, verse 9, 10, and the common order of angels, verse 11, 12. and of all things created, verse 13. the princes of both sorts agreeing thereunto, verse 14.

10 The symbols or signs of praise, sweet of savour, and acceptable unto God, see chap. 8. 3.

11 Look chap. 8. 3.

12 No common song.

13 That is, composed according to the present matter, the Lamb having received the book as it were with his feet, and opened it with his horns, as it is said in the Canticles.

14 The song of the nobles or princes standing by the throne, consisting of a publication of the praise of Christ, and a confirmation of the same from his benefits, both which we have received of himself (as are the suffering of his death, our redemption upon the cross by his blood, in this verse: and our communion with him in kingdom and priesthood, which along ago he hath granted unto us with himself) and which we hereafter hope to obtain, as our kingdom to come, in Christ, in the verse following.

15 The consent of the common order of angels, answering in melody unto their princes that stood by the throne.

16 A number finite, but almost infinite, for one infinity indeed, as Daniel 7. 10.

17 By this is meant a great number.

18 To have all praise given to him as to the mightiest and wisest, &c.

19 The consent of all the common multitude of the creatures.

20 A confirmation of the praise beforegoing, from the constellation of the nobles, expressed in word and signs, as once or twice before this.

A. D.
96.

AFTER, I beheld when the Lamb had opened one of the seals, and I heard one of the four beasts say, as it were the noise of thunder, Come and see.

Therefore I beheld, and lo, there was a white horse, and he that sat on him had a bow, and a crown was given unto him, and he went forth conquering that he might overcome.

And when he had opened the second seal, I heard the second beast say, Come and see.

And there went out another horse, that was red, and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another, and there was given unto him a great sword.

And when he had opened the third seal, I heard the third beast say, Come and see. Then I beheld, and lo, a black horse, and he that sat on him had balances in his hand.

And I heard a voice in the midst of the four beasts say, A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny, and oil and wine hurt thou not.

And when he had opened the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth beast say, Come and see.

And I looked, and behold, a pale horse, and his name that sat on him was death, and hell followed him, and power was given unto them over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth.

This is the second part of this first history (which I said was common, and of the whole world) of the works of God in the government of all things. Of this there are generally three members: the fore-signifying the caution, and the execution of all the evils which God poureth out upon this world, which hath most hardly deserved of him. The fore-signifying is set down in this chapter, the caution for preserving the church is in the next chapter, and the execution is described, chap. 8. 9. In every part of the fore-signifying there are three branches: the several and express calling of Saint John to prepare himself to take knowledge of the things that were to be shewed unto him in the opening of the seals: the sign, and the word expounding the sign: and albeit the express calling of Saint John be used only in four of the signs, yet the same is also to be understood in the rest that follow. The author of the fore-signifyings is the Lamb, as that word of the Father made the mediator, opening the seals of the book. The instruments are the angels in most of the visions, who expound the sign and the words thereof. Now this first verse containeth an express calling of Saint John to mark the opening of the first seal,

The first sign joined with declaration is, that God, for the sins and horrible rebellion of the world, will invade the same: and first of all will, as afar off, with his darts of pestilence, most suddenly, mightily, and gloriously, beat down the same as judge, and triumph over it as conqueror.

The second sign joined with words of declaration (after the express calling of Saint John as before) is, that God being provoked unto wrath by the obstinacy and hard-heartedness of the world, not repenting for the former plague: as setting upon the same at hand, will kindle the fire of debate amongst men, and will destroy the inhabitants of this world, one by the sword of another.

The third sign with declaration is, that God will destroy the world with famine, withdrawing all provision: which is, by the figure Synecdoche, comprehended in wheat, barley, wine, and oil.

Hereby is signified what great scarcity of corn there was; for the word here used is a kind of measure of dry things, which is in quantity but the eighth part of a bushel, which was an ordinary portion used to be given to servants for their stint of meat for one day.

I had rather distinguish and read the words thus: "And the wine and the oil thou shalt not deal unjustly." In this sense likewise the oil and the wine shall be sold a very little for a penny. Thou shalt not deal unjustly, namely, when thou shalt measure out a very little for a great price: so is the place evident: otherwise that is most true which the wise man saith, That who withholdeth the 9 And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were killed for the word of God, and for the testimony which they maintained,

10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, Lord; which art holy and true! doest not thou judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

11 And long white robes were given unto every one, and it was said unto them, that they should rest for a little season until their fellow servants and their brethren that should be killed even as they were, were fulfilled.

12 And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and lo, there was a great earthquake, and the sun was as black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon was like blood.

13 And the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, as a fig-tree casteth her green figs, when it is shaken of a mighty wind.

14 And heaven departed away, as a scroll when it is rolled, and every mountain and isle were moved out of their places.

15 And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every free man, hid themselves in dens, and among the rocks of the mountains,

16 And said to the mountains and rocks, * Fall on us, and hide us from the presence of

4 H

him

* Isa. 2. 19.
Hib. 10. 8.
Luke 23. 30.

corn, shall be cursed of the people, Prov. 11. 26.

The fourth sign, joined with words of declaration, is, that God will addict the fourth part of the world indifferently, unto death and hell, or the grave, by all those means at once, by which before severally and in order he had recalled their minds unto amendment. Unto these are also added the wild and cruel beasts of the earth, out of Levit. 26. 22. Thus doth God, according to his wisdom, dispense the treasures of his power justly towards all, mercifully towards the good, and with patience or long-sufferance towards his enemies.

The fifth sign is, that the holy martyrs, which are under the altar, whereby they are sanctified, that is, received into the trust and tuition of Christ (into whose hands they are committed) shall cry out for the justice of God, in an holy zeal to advance his kingdom, and not of any private perturbation of the mind, in this and the next verse, and that God will, in deed, sign, and word, comfort them; verse 11.

As before, 3. 4.

Until their number be fulfilled.

The sixth sign, the narration whereof hath two parts: the sign, and the event. The sign is, that the earth, heaven, and the things that are in them, for horror of the sins of the world upon those most heavy foretellings of God and complaint of the saints, shall be shaken most vehemently, trembling in horrible manner, and losing their light, in this verse: falling from on high, verse 13. withdrawing themselves, and flying away for the greatness of the trouble, verse 14. So holily do all creatures depend upon the will of God, and content themselves in his glory.

So they called in old time those woven works that were of hair.

The event of the sign foregoing: that there is no man that shall not be astonished at that general commotion, flee away for fear, and hide himself, in this verse, and wish unto himself most bitter death, for exceeding horror of the wrath of God, and of the Lamb, at which before he was astonished. Now this perplexity is not of the godly, but of the wicked, whose portion is in this life, as the Psalmist speaketh, Psalm 17. 14. Not that sorrow which is according unto God, which worketh repentance unto salvation, whereof a man shall never repent him, but that worldly sorrow that bringeth death, 2 Cor. 7. 9. as their wishings do declare: for this history of the whole world, is severed from the history of the church, as I have shewed before, chap. 4. 1.

These are words of such as despair of their escape: of which despair there are two arguments, the presence of God and of the Lamb provoked to wrath against the world,

A. D. 96. him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb.

17 For the great day of his wrath is come, and who can stand?

C H A P. VII.

1 The angels coming to hurt the earth, 3 are stayed until the elect of the Lord 5 of all tribes were sealed. 13 such as suffered persecution for Christ's sake, 16 have great felicity 17 and joy.

AND ¹ after that, I saw four angels stand on the ² four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth, that the winds should not blow on the earth, neither on the sea, ³ neither on any tree.

2 ⁴ And I saw ⁴ another angel come up from the east, which had the seal of the living God, and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels to whom power was given to hurt the earth, and the sea, saying,

3 Hurt ye not the earth, neither the sea, neither the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads.

4 And I heard the number of them which were sealed, and there were sealed ⁵ an hundred and four and forty thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel.

5 Of the tribe of Judah were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Reuben were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Gad were sealed twelve thousand.

6 Of the tribe of Aser were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Naphtali were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Manasses were sealed twelve thousand.

in this verse: and the conscience of their own weakness, where y men feel that they are no way able to stand in the day of the wrath of God, verse 17. as it is said, Isaiah 44. 27.

¹ The second member of this part is a preventing of danger, as we distinguished the same before, chapter 6. 1. that is, of the caution which God took care beforehand, and provided for his, that after the example of the Israelites of old, Exod. 8. 23. the faithful might be exempted from the plagues of this wicked world. This whole piece is a certain interlocation and bringing in for this whole chapter, by occasion of the prediction and argument of the next verse. For first that evil is prevented in the elect, unto the 9th verse. Then thanks are given by the elect for that cause, ver. 10, 11, 12. Lastly, the accomplishment of the things is set forth unto the end of the chapter. The first verse is a transition, speaking of the angels which keep the inferior parts from all evil until God do command. For (as it is excellently figured by Ezek. chap. 1. 11, 12.) their faces and their wings are reached upwards, continually waiting upon and beholding the countenance of God for their direction, and every of them goeth into that part that is right before his face: whithersoever the Spirit shall go, they go, they step not out of the way, that is, they depart not so much as a foot's breadth from the path commanded them of God.

² On the four quarters or coasts of the earth.

³ That is, neither into the air, into which the tops of trees are advanced.

⁴ Now God provideth against the danger of his elect, by his commandment, verse 2 and 3, and by sign or figure, both for those of the nation of the Jews, thence unto the 8th verse, and also of the Gentiles, verse 9.

⁵ Not only another, or differing in number from the common angels of God: but also in essence, office, and operation, exceeding all angels: that is, Christ Jesus, the eternal angel or word of God, and mediator of the covenant. So hereafter, chapter 8. 3. and 10. 15.

⁶ That is, of the Jews, a number certain in itself before God, and such as may be numbered of us: for which cause also the same is here set down as certain. But of the elect which are of the Gentiles, the number indeed is in it self certain with God, but of us not possibly to be numbered, as God, Gen. 5. 5. and often elsewhere, and Isaiah figured in it excellently, chap. 49. and 60. This therefore 7 Of the tribe of Simeon were sealed twelve thousand. ⁸ Of the tribe of ⁹ Levi were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Issachar were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Zebulun were sealed twelve thousand.

8 Of the tribe of ⁹ Joseph were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Benjamin were sealed twelve thousand.

9 After these things I beheld, and lo a great multitude, ⁷ which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, ⁸ stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with long white robes, and palms in their hands.

10 ⁹ And they cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation cometh of our God, that sitteth upon the throne, and of the Lamb.

11 And all the angels stood round about the throne, and about the elders, and the four beasts, and they fell before the throne on their faces, and worshipped God, 12 Saying, Amen: Praise, and glory, and wisdom, and thanks, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for evermore. Amen.

13 ¹⁰ And one of the elders spake, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in long white robes? and whence came they?

14 And I said unto him, Lord, thou knowest. And he said unto me, ¹¹ These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their long robes, and have made their long robes white in the blood of the Lamb.

15 Therefore are they in the presence of the throne of God, and serve him ¹² day and night in his temple, and he that sitteth on the throne will dwell ¹³ among them.

16 They

is spoken with respect, when a certain number is put for an uncertain. Confer this with verse 9.

⁹ He skipped Dan, and reckoneth Levi.

⁹ Of Ephraim, who was Joseph's other son, and had the birthright given him, whereof he is called Joseph.

¹⁰ Here the tribe of Levi is reckoned up in common with the rest, because all the Israelites were equally made priests with them in Christ by his priesthood, chap. 1. 6. and 5. 10. and Rom. 12. 1. and 1 Pet. 2. 9. The name of Dan is not mentioned, because the Danites long before forsaking the worship of God, were fallen away from the fellowship of God's people unto the part of the Gentiles, which evil many ages before Jacob foresaw, Gen. 49. 17. for which cause also there is no mention made of this tribe in the first book of the Chronicles.

⁷ See before upon the 4th verse.

⁸ As priests, kings, and glorious conquerors by martyrdom: which things are noted by their proper signs in this verse.

⁹ The praise of God celebrated first by the holy men in this verse, then by the heavenly angels in the two verses following.

¹¹ The exposition of the vision, wherein the angel telleth, first, the acts of the saints, that is, their sufferings and work of faith in Christ Jesus, in this verse. Secondly, their glory: both present, which consisteth in two things; that they minister unto God, and that God protecteth them, verse 15. and to come in their perfect deliverance from all annoyances, verse 16. and in participation of all good things which even the memory of former evils shall never be able to diminish, verse 17. The cause efficient, and which containeth all these things, is only one, even the Lamb of God, the Lord, the Mediator, and the Saviour Jesus Christ.

¹² He alludeth to the Levites, which served day and night, for else there is no night in heaven.

¹³ Or, upon them whereby is meant God's defence and protection, as it were toward them, who are as safe as men in the Lord's tents.

A. D. 96. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them, neither any heat.

17 For the Lamb, which is in the midst of the throne, shall govern them, and shall lead them unto the lively fountains of waters, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

C H A P. VIII.

1 After the opening of the seventh seal, 3 the saints prayers are offered up with odours. 6 The seven angels come forth with trumpets. 7 The four first blow, and fire falleth on the earth, 8 the sea is turned into blood, 10, 11 the waters wax bitter, 12 and the stars are darkened.

AND when he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven about half an hour.

2 And I saw the seven angels which stood before God, and to them were given seven trumpets.

3 Then another angel came and stood before the altar having a golden censer, and much odours was given unto him, that he should offer with the prayers of all saints upon the golden altar; which is before the throne.

4 And the smoke of the odours, with the prayers of the saints, went up before God, out of the angel's hand.

5 And the angel took the censer, and filled it with fire of the altar, and cast it into the earth, and there were voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, and earthquake.

6 Then the seven angels, which had the seven trumpets, prepared themselves to blow the trumpets.

¹ He returneth to the history of the seals of the book which the Lamb opened. The seventh seal is the next fore-signification, and a precise commandment of the execution of the most heavy judgments of God upon this wicked world, which fore-signification being understood by the seal, all things in heaven are silent, and in horror through admiration, until commandment of execution be severally given of God unto the ministers of his wrath. So he passeth unto the third member, of which I spake before in chap. 6. verse 1. which is of the execution of those evils wherewith God most justly determined to afflict the world.

² Now followeth the third branch of the common history, as even now I said: which is the execution of the judgments of God upon the world. This is first generally prepared unto the 6th verse: then by several parts expounded according to the order of those that administered the same, unto the end of the chapter following. Unto the preparation of this execution, are declared these things: first who are the administrators and instruments thereof in this verse. Secondly, what is the work both of the prince and angels, giving order for this execution, thence unto the 5th verse, and of his administrators in the 6th verse. The administrators of the execution are said to be seven angels: their instruments, trumpets, whereby they should, as it were, sound the alarm at the commandment of God. They are propounded seven in number; because it pleased God not at once to pour out his wrath upon the rebellious world, but at divers times; and by piece-meal, and in slow order, and as with an unwilling mind to exercise his judgments upon his creatures, so long called upon both by word and figures, if happily they had learned to repent:

³ Which appeareth before him as his ministers:

³ This is that great Emperor the Lord Jesus Christ, our King and Saviour, who both maketh intercession to God the Father for the saints, filling the heavenly sanctuary with most sweet odour, and offering up their prayers, as the calves and burnt sacrifices of their lips, in this verse: in such sort as every one of them (so powerful is that sweet favour of Christ, and the efficacy of his sacrifice) are held in reconciliation with God, and themselves made most acceptable unto him, verse 4. And then also out of his treasury, and from the same sanctuary, poureth forth upon the world the fire of his wrath, adding also divine tokens thereunto. and by that means (as of old the heralds of Rome were 7 So the first angel blew the trumpet, and there was hail and fire mingled with blood, and they were cast into the earth, and the third part of trees was burnt, and all green grass was burnt.

8 And the second angel blew the trumpet, and as it were a great mountain, burning with fire, was cast into the sea, and the third part of the sea became blood.

9 And the third part of the creatures, which were in the sea, and had life, died, and the third part of the ships were destroyed.

10 There the third angel blew his trumpet, and there fell a great star from heaven, burning like a torch, and it fell into the third part of the rivers, and into the fountains of waters.

11 And the name of the star is called wormwood: therefore the third part of the waters became wormwood, and many men died of the waters, because they were made bitter.

12 And the fourth angel blew the trumpet, and the third part of the sun was smitten, and the third part of the moon, and the third part of the stars, so that the third part of them was darkened: and the day was smitten, that the third part of it could not shine, and likewise the night.

13 And I beheld, and heard one angel flying through the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice, Woe, woe, woe to the inhabitants of the earth, because of the sounds to come of the trumpet of the three angels, which were yet to blow the trumpets.

CHAP.

went to do) he proclaimeth war against the rebellious world.

⁴ Our prayers are nothing worth unless that true and sweet favour of that only oblation be especially and before all things with them, that is to say, unless we being first of all justified through faith in his Son, be acceptable unto him.

⁶ The second execution upon the sea, in this verse; and all things that are therein, in the next verse.

⁷ The third execution upon the floods and fountains, that is, upon all fresh waters, in this verse: the effect whereof is, that many are destroyed with the bitterness of waters, in the verse following.

⁸ This is spoken by a metaphor, of the name of a most bitter herb, and commonly known: unless perhaps a man following those that note the derivation of words had rather expound it adjectively; for that which by reason of bitterness cannot be drunk, or which maketh the liquor into which it is poured more bitter than that any man can drink the same.

⁹ The fourth execution upon these lightsome bodies of heaven, which administer unto this interior world.

¹⁰ A lamentable prediction or foretelling of those parts of the divine execution which are yet behind, which also is a passage unto the argument of the next chapter. Of all these things in a manner, Christ himself expressly foretold in the 21st chapter St. Luke, ver. 24, &c. and they are common plagues generally denounced, without particular note of time.

C H A P IX.

1 The fifth angel bloweth his trumpet, 3 and spoiling locusts come out. 13 The sixth angel bloweth, 16 and bringeth forth horsemen, 20 to destroy mankind.

AND the fifth angel blew the trumpet, and I saw a star fall from heaven unto the earth, and to him was given the key of the bottomless pit.

2 And he opened the bottomless pit, and there arose the smoke of the pit, as the smoke of a great furnace, and the sun and the air were darkened by the smoke of the pit.

3 And there came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth, and unto them was given power, as the scorpions of the earth have power.

4 And it was commanded them that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree: but only those men which have not the seal of God in their foreheads.

² That is, that the angel of God glittering with glory, as a star fell down from heaven. Whether thou take him for Christ, who hath the keys of hell of himself, and by princely authority, chap. 1. verse 18. or whether for some inferior angel, who hath the same key permitted unto him, and occupieth it ministerially, or by office of his ministry here, and chap. 21. the word, falling, is taken, Gen. 14. 10. and 24. 46. and Heb. 6. 6.

³ The key was given to this star. For those powers of wickedness are thrust down into hell, and bound with chains of darkness: and are there kept unto damnation, unless God for a time do let them loose, 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude 6. and of this book, chap. 20. 21. the history of which chapters hath agreement of time with this present chapter.

⁴ By the bottomless pit, he meaneth the deepest darkness of hell.

⁷ Here that power of the devils is particularly described according to their actions and the effects of the same. Their actions are said to be bounded by the counsel of God: both because they hurt not all men, but only the reprobate (for the godly and elect, in whom there is any part of a better life, God guardeth by his decree) whom Christ shall not have sealed in this verse: and also because they neither had all power, nor at all times, no not over those that are their own, but limited in manner and time, by the prescript of God, verse 5. So their power to afflict the godly is none, and for the wicked it is limited in act and in effect by the will of God: for the manner was prescribed unto them that they should not slay, but torment the wretched world. The time is for five months, or for an hundred and fifty days, that is for so many years, in which the devils have indeed mightily perverted all things in the world: and yet without that public and unpunished licence of killing, which

5 And to them was commanded that they should not kill them, but that they should be vexed five months, and that their pain should be as the pain that cometh of a scorpion, when he hath stung a man.

6 Therefore in those days shall men seek death, and shall not find it, and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them.

7 And the form of the locusts was like unto horses prepared unto battle, and on their heads were as it were crowns, like unto gold, and their faces were like the faces of men.

8 And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions.

9 And they had habergeons like unto habergeons of iron, and the sound of their wings was like the sound of chariots, when many horses run unto battle.

10 And they had tails like unto scorpions, and there were stings in their tails, and their power was to hurt five months.

11 And afterwards they usurped, when the sixth angel had blown his trumpet, as shall be said upon verse 13. Now this space is to be accounted from the end of that thousand years mentioned chap. 20. 3. and that is from the popedom of that Gregory the VIIth. a most monstrous necromancer, who before was called Hildebrandus Senensis: for this man being made altogether of impiety and wickedness, as a slave of the devil, whom he served, was the most wicked firebrand of the world: he excommunicated the emperor Henry the IVth. went about by all manner of treachery to set up and put down empires and kingdoms as liked himself, and doubted not to set Rodolph the Swede over the empire instead of Henry before named, sending unto him a crown, with this verse annexed unto it:

“ Petra dedit Petro, Petrus diadema Rodolpho:”

That is,

The Rock to Peter gave the crown,
And Peter Rodolph doth renown.

Finally, he so finely bestirred himself in his affairs, as he miserably set all Christendom on fire, and conveyed over unto his successors the burning brand of the same: who, enraged with like ambition, never ceased to nourish that flame, and to enkindle it more and more: whereby cities, commonweals, and whole kingdoms, set together by the ears amongst themselves by most expert cut-throats, came to ruin, whilst they miserably wounded one another. This term of an hundred and fifty years, taketh end in the time of Gregory the IXth. or Hugolinus Anagninensis, (as he was before called) who caused to be compiled by one Raymond his chaplain and confessor, the body of decretals, and by sufferance of the kings and princes, to be published in the Christian world, and established for a law: for by this sleight at length the popes arrogated unto themselves licence to kill whom they would, whilst others were unaware: and without fear established a butchery out of many of the wicked canons of the decretals, which the trumpet of the fifth angel had expressly forbidden, and had hindered until this time. The effects of these bloody actions are declared upon the sixth verse: that the miserable world languishing in so great calamities, should willingly run together unto death, and prefer the same before life, by reason of the grievousness of the miseries that oppressed them.

⁷ The form of these hellish spirits and administrators is shadowed out by signs and visible figures in this sort: that they are very expert and swift: that wheresoever they are in the world, the kingdom is theirs: that they manage all their affairs with cunning and skill in this verse: that making shew of mildness and tender affection to draw on men withal, they most impudently rage in all mischief: that they are most mighty to do hurt, verse 8. that they are freed from being hurt of any man, as armed with the colour of religion and sacred authority of privilege: that they fill all things with horror, verse 9. that they are fraudulent: that they are venomous and extremely noisome, though their power be limited, verse 10. All which things are properly in the infernal powers, and communicated by them unto their ministers and vassals.

13 ¶ ¹⁰ Then the sixth angel blew the trumpet, ¹¹ and I heard a voice from the ^b four horns of the golden altar, which is before God,

14 Saying to the sixth angel, which had the trumpet, ¹² Loose the four angels, which are bound in the great river Euphrates.

15 ¹³ And the four angels were loosed, which were prepared at an hour, at a day, at a month, and at a year, to slay the third part of men.

16 And the number of horsemen of war were twenty thousand times ten thousand: for I heard the number of them.

17 And thus I saw the horses in a vision, and them that sat on them, having fiery habergeons, and of jacinth, and of brimstone, and the heads of the horses were as the heads of lions: and out of their mouths went forth fire, and smoke, and brimstone.

18 Of these three was the third part of men killed, that is, of the fire, and of the smoke, and ⁸ The order of powers of maliciousness: that they are subject to one infernal king, whom thou mayest call in English, The Destroyer: who driveth the whole world both Jews and Gentiles into the destruction that belongeth unto himself. And I cannot tell whether this name have respect unto the etymological interpretation of Hildebrand, by a figure often used in the holy scripture; which albeit it may otherwise be turned of the Germans (as the sense of compound words is commonly ambiguous) yet in very deed it signifieth as much as if thou shouldst call him, The fire-brand, that is, he that setteth on fire those that be faithful unto him.

⁹ A passage unto the next point and the history of the time following.

¹⁰ The sixth execution done upon the world by the tyrannical powers thereof, working in the four parts of the earth, that is, in most cruel manner executing their tyrannous dominion through the whole world: and killing the miserable people without punishment, which before was not lawful for them to do in that sort, as I shewed upon the fourth verse. This narration hath two parts: a commandment from God, in the 14th verse, and an execution of the commandment, in the verse following.

¹¹ The commandment given by Christ himself, who is governor over all.

^b He alludeth to the altar of incense, which stood in the court which the priests were in, over-against the ark of the covenant, having a vail betwixt them.

¹² As if he should have said, these hitherto have been so bound by the power of God, that they should not freely run upon all men as themselves lusted, but were stayed and restrained at that great flood of Euphrates, that is, in their spiritual Babylon (for this is a periphrasis of the spiritual Babylon, by the limits of the visible Babylon long since overthrown) that they might not commit those horrible slaughters, which they long breathed after. Now, go to, let loose those four angels, that is, ministers of the wrath of God, in that number that is convenient for the slaughtering of the four quarters of the world: stir them up, and give them the bridle, that, rushing out of that Babylon of theirs, which is the seat of the wicked ones, they may flee upon all the world: therein to rage, and most licentiously to practise their tyranny, as God hath ordained. This was done when Gregory the Ninth, by public authority, stablished for law his own decretals, by which he might freely lay trains for the life of simple men. For who is it that seeth not that the laws decretal most of them are snares to catch souls withal? Since that time (O good God) how great slaughters have been! how great massacres! All histories are full of them: and this our age aboundeth with most horrible and monstrous examples of the same.

¹³ The execution of the commandment is in two points: one, that those butchers are let loose, that out of their tower of the spiritual Babylon they might with fury run abroad through all the world, as well the chief of that crew which are most prompt unto all affairs, in this verse, as their multitudes both most copious, of which a number of the brimstone, which came out of their mouths. A. D. 96.

19 For their power is in their mouths, and in their tails: ¹⁴ for their tails were like unto serpents, and had heads wherewith they hurt.

20 ¹⁵ And the remnant of the men which were not killed by the plagues, repented not of the works of their hands, that they should not worship devils, and * idols of gold, and of silver, and of brass, and of stone, and of wood, which neither can see, neither hear nor go. * Pl. 115. 4. and 135. 15.

21 Also they repented not of their murder, and of their sorcery, neither of their fornication, nor of their theft.

C H A P. X.

1 Another angel appeareth clothed with a cloud, 2 holding a book, 3 and crieth out. 8 A voice from heaven commandeth John to take the book. 10 He eateth it.

AND I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud, and the rainbow upon his head, and his face was as the sun, and his feet as pillars of fire.

4 I

2 And

certain is named for a number infinite, verse 16. and in themselves by all means fully furnished to hide and to hurt, verse 17. as being armed with fire, smoke, and brimstone, as appeareth in the colour of this armour, which dazzleth the eyes of all men, and have the strength of lions to hurt withal, from which (as out of their mouth) the fire, smoke, and stinking darts of the Pope, are shot out, verse 18. The other point is, that these butchers have effected the commandment of God by fraud and violence, in the two verses following.

¹⁵ Now remaineth the event (as I said upon the first verse) which followed of so many and so grievous judgments in the most wicked world, namely, an impenitent confirmation of the ungodly in their impiety and unrighteousness, though they feel themselves most vehemently pressed with the hand of God: for their obstinate ungodliness is shewed in this verse: and their unrighteousness in the verse following. Hitherto hath been the general history of things to be done universally in the whole world: which, because it doth not so much belong to the church of Christ, is therefore not so expressly distinguished by certainty of time and other circumstances, but is woven, as they say, with a slight hand. Also there is none other cause why the history of the seventh angel is passed over in this place, than for that the same more properly appertaineth unto the history of the church. But this is more diligently set out according to the time thereof, chap. 11 and 16. as shall appear upon those places.

¹ Now Saint John passeth unto the other prophetic history, which is of the church of God, as I shewed, that this book should be distinguished, chapter 4, 1. This story reacheth hence unto the two and twentieth chapter. And this whole chapter is but a transition from the common history of the world unto that which is particular of the church. There are in this transition or passage, two preparations, as it were, unto the church story comprised in this whole chapter. One is the authority of Christ, revealing his mysteries, and calling his servant, unto the 7th verse. The other is Saint John's calling, proper unto this place, and repeated from before unto the end of this chapter. Authority is given unto this Revelation by these things: first, by the appearing from heaven in this habit and countenance, strong, ready, glorious, surveying all things by his providence, and governing them by his omnipotence, verse 1. Secondly, that he brought not by chance, but out of a book, this open Revelation, set forth unto the eye, to signify the same unto the sea, and land, as the Lord over all, verse 2. Thirdly, that he offered the same not whispering or muttering in a corner (as false prophets do) but crying out with a loud voice unto them which sleep, and with a lionish and terrible noise roused up the secure: the very thunders themselves giving testimony thereunto, verse 3. Lastly, for that he confirmed all by an oath, verse 5, 6, 7.

² Christ Jesus, see chapter 7. verse 2.

A. D. 96. 2 And he had in his hand a little book open, and he put his right foot upon the sea, and his left on the earth.

3 And cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth: and when he had cried, seven thunders uttered their voices.

4 And when the seven thunders had uttered their voices, I was about to write: but I heard a voice from heaven, saying unto me, Seal up those things which the seven thunders have spoken, and write them not.

5 And the angel which I saw stand upon the sea, and upon the earth, lift up his hand to heaven,

6 And swore by him that liveth for evermore, which created heaven, and the things that therein are, and the earth, and the things that therein are, and the sea, and the things that therein are, that time should be no more.

7 But in the days of the voices of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to blow the trumpet, even the mystery of God shall be finished, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets.

8 And the voice which I heard from heaven, spake unto me again, and said, Go, and take the little book which is open in the hand of the angel, which standeth upon the sea and upon the earth.

¹ Namely, a special book of the affairs of God's church: For the book that containeth things belonging unto the whole world is said to be kept with the Creator, chapter 5, verse 1. but the book of the church with the Redeemer: and out of this book is taken the rest of the history of this Apocalypse.

² A godly care is laudable, but must be joined with knowledge. Therefore nothing is to be taken in hand but by calling, which must be expected and waited for of the godly.

³ Keep them close.

⁴ This was a gesture used of one that sweareth, which men do now-a-days use.

⁵ Neither time itself, nor the things that are in time: but that the world to come is at hand, which is altogether of eternity, and beyond all times.

⁶ There shall never be any more time.

⁷ Whereof chap. 11. 15. and 16. 17.

⁹ A simple and plain declaration of the sign foregoing, witnessing the divine calling of Saint John, and laying upon him the necessity thereof.

¹⁰ The authority of the intended Revelation being declared, together with the necessity of that calling, which was particularly imposed upon Saint John: hereafter followeth the history of the estate of Christ his church, both confiding or warfaring, and overcoming in Christ. For both the true church of Christ is said to fight against that which is falsely so called, over the which Antichrist ruleth, Christ Jesus overthrowing Antichrist by the spirit of his mouth: and Christ is said to overcome most gloriously until he shall slay the Antichrist by the appearance of his coming, as the apostle excellently teacheth, 2 Thess. 2. 8. So this history hath two parts: one of the state of the church confiding with the temptations, unto the sixteenth chapter, the other of the state of the same church obtaining victory, thence unto the 20th chapter. The first part hath two members most conveniently distributed into their times, whereof the first containeth an history of the christian church for 1260 years, what time the gospel of Christ was as it were taken up from amongst men into heaven: the second containeth an history of the same church unto 9 So I went unto the angel, and said unto him, Give me the little book. And he said unto me, Take it, and eat it up, and it shall make thy belly bitter, but it shall be in thy mouth as sweet as honey.

10 Then I took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up, and it was in my mouth as sweet as honey: but when I had eaten it, my belly was bitter.

11 And he said unto me, Thou must prophesy again among the people and nations, and tongues, and to many kings.

C H A P. XI.

1 The temple is commanded to be measured. 3 The Lord stirreth up two witnesses, 7 whom the beast murdereth, 9 and no man burieth them. 11 God raiseth them to life, 12 and calleth them up to heaven. 13 The wicked are terrified, 15 by the trumpet of the seventh angel: the resurrection, 18 and judgment is described.

THEN¹ was given me a reed like unto a rod, and the angel stood by, saying, Rise and meet the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein.

2 But the court which is without the temple, the victory perfected. And these two members are briefly, though distinctly, propounded in this chapter; but are both of them more at large discoursed after in due order. For we understand the state of the church confiding, out of chapters 12 and 13. and of the same growing out of afflictions, out of the 14th, 15th, and 16th chapters. Neither did Saint John at unawares join together the history of these two times in this chapter, because here is spoken of prophecy, which all confesse to be but one just and immutable in the church, and which Christ commanded to be continual. The history of the former time reacheth unto the 14th verse: the latter is set down in the rest of this chapter. In the former are shewed these things: the calling of the servants of God in four verses: the conflicts which the faithful must undergo in their calling for Christ and his church, thence unto the tenth verse: and their resurrection, and receiving up into heaven, unto the fourteenth verse. In the calling of the servants of God are mentioned two things: the begetting and settling of the church, in two verses, and the education thereof, in two verses. The begetting of the church is here commended unto Saint John by sign and by speech: the sign is a measuring rod, and the speech a commandment to measure the temple of God, that is, to reduce the same unto a new form: because the Gentiles are already entered into the temple of Jerusalem, and shall shortly defile and overthrow the same utterly.

² Either that of Jerusalem, which was a figure of the church of Christ, or that heavenly exemplar, whereof verse 19. but the first liketh me better, and the things following do all agree thereunto. The sense thereof is, Thou seekest all things in God's house, almost from the passion of Christ, to be disordered: and that not only the city of Jerusalem, but also the court of the temple, is trampled under foot of the nations, and of prophane men, whether Jews or strangers: and that only the temple, that is, the body of the temple, with the altar, and a small company of good men which truly worship God, do now remain, whom God doth sanctify and confirm by his presence. Measure therefore this, even this true church, or rather the true type of the true church, omitting the rest, and so describe all things from me, that the true church of Christ may be as it were a little center, and the church of Antichrist as the circle of the center, every way in length and breadth compassing about the same, that by way of prophecy thou mayest so declare openly, that the state of the temple of God, and the faithful which worship him, that is, of the church, is much more straight than the church of Antichrist.

³ As if he should say, It belongeth nothing unto thee, to judge those which are without, 1 Corinth. 5. 12. which be innumerable: look unto those of the household only, or unto the house of the living God.

⁴ He speaketh of the outer court, which was called the people's court, because all men might come into that.

A. D. 96. temple, ^b cast out, and meet it not: for it is given unto the ⁴ Gentiles, and the holy city shall they tread under foot, ⁵ two and forty months.

³ But ⁶ I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall ⁷ prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days clothed in sackcloth.

⁴ These ⁸ are two olive trees, and two candlesticks, standing before the God of the earth.

⁵ And if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouths, and devoureth their enemies: for if any man will hurt them, thus must he be killed.

⁶ These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophesying, and have power over waters to turn them into blood, to smite the earth with all manner of plagues, as often as they will.

^b That is, counted to be cast out, which in measuring is refused as prophane.

⁴ To prophane persons, wicked and unbelievers, adversaries unto the church.

⁵ Or a thousand two hundred and threescore days, as is said in the next verse: that is, a thousand two hundred and threescore years, a day for a year, as often in Ezek. and Daniel, which thing I noted before, 2. 10. The beginning of these thousand two hundred and three core years we account from the passion of Christ, whereby (the partition-wall being broken down) we were made of two, one, Ephes. 2. 14. I say, one flock, under one shepherd. John 10. 16. and the end of these years precisely falleth into the popedom of Boniface the eighth, who a little before the end of the year of Christ one thousand two hundred ninety-four, entered the popedom of Rome, in the feast of Saint Lucia (as Bergomenis saith) having put in prison his predecessor Cælestinus, whom by fraud, under colour of oracle, he deceived: for which cause that was well said of him, "Intravit ut vulpes, regnavit ut leo, mortuus est ut canis." That is, "He entered like a fox, reigned like a lion, and died like a dog." For if from a thousand two hundred ninety four years thou shalt take the age of Christ which he lived on the earth, thou shalt find there remaineth just one thousand two hundred and threescore years, which are mentioned in this place and many others.

⁶ I had rather translate it "illud" than "illam"; "the temple," than "the city:" for God saith, I will give that temple, and commit it unto my two witnesses, that is, unto the ministers of the word, who are few indeed, weak and contemptible: but yet two, that is, of such a number as one of them may help another, and one confirm the testimony of another unto all men, that from the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be made good amongst men, 2 Cor. 13. 1.

⁷ They shall exercise their office enjoined by me, by the space of those thousand two hundred and sixty years, in the midst of afflictions, though never so lamentable, which is figuratively shewed by the mourning garment.

⁹ The power and efficacy of the holy ministry, and which is truly evangelical, is declared both in earth and in heaven, protecting the administrators thereof, and destroying the enemies, in this verse, virtue indeed divine, most mightily shewing itself forth in heaven, earth, and the sea, verse 6, as it is described, 2 Corinthians, 10. 4. according to the promise of Christ, Mark 16. 17. And this is the second place (as I said before) of the combats which the servants of God must needs undergo in the executing of their calling, and of the things that follow the same combats. In the combats or conflicts are these things, to overcome, in these two verses: to be overcome and killed, verse 7. After the slaughter follow these things, that the carcases of the godly are laid abroad, verse 8. being unburied, are made a matter of scorn, together of cursing and bitter execrations, verse 9. and that therefore gratulations are publicly and privately made, verse 10.

¹⁰ That is, when they have spent those thousand two hundred and sixty years, mentioned verse 2 and 3. in publishing their testimony according to their office.

^c When they have done their message.

¹¹ Of which, after chap. 13. &c. that beast is the Roman empire, made long ago of civil, ecclesiastical: the chief

7 ¹⁰ And when they have finished their ^c testimony, ¹¹ the beast that cometh out of the bottomless pit, shall make war against them, and shall ¹² overcome them, and kill them.

⁸ And their corpses shall lie in the ¹³ streets of the great city, which ^d spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, ¹⁴ where our Lord also was crucified

⁹ And they of the people, and kindreds, and tongues, and Gentiles shall, see their corpses ¹⁵ three days and an half, and shall not suffer their carcases to be put in graves.

¹⁰ And they that dwell upon the earth, ¹⁶ shall rejoice over them and be glad, and shall send gifts one to another: for these two prophets ¹⁷ vexed them that dwelt on the earth.

11 But

head whereof was then Boniface the eighth, as I said before: who lifted up himself in so great arrogance (saith the author of, Fasciculus temporum) that he called himself, Lord of the whole world, as well in temporary causes, as in spiritual: there is an extant of that matter, written by the same Boniface most arrogantly, shall I say or most wickedly; "Cap. unam sancta, extra de majoritate & obedientia." And in the sixth of the decretals (which is from the same author) many things are found of the same argument.

¹² He shall persecute most cruelly the holy men, and put them to death, and shall wound and pierce through with cursings both their names and writings. And that this was done to very many godly men, by Boniface, and others, the histories do declare, especially, since the time that the odious and condemned name amongst the multitude, first, of the brethren Waldenses or Lugdunenses, then also of the Fraticles, was pretended, that good men might with more approbation be massacred.

¹³ That is, openly at Rome, where at that time was a most great concourse of people, the year of Jubilee being then first ordained by Boniface unto the same end, in the year of Christ 1300. example whereof is read, chap. 1. "Extra, de pœnitentiis & remissionibus." So by one act he committed double injury against Christ, both abolishing his truth by the restoring of the type of the Jubilee, and triumphing over his members by most wicked superstition. O religious heart! Now, that we should understand the things of Rome, Saint John himself is the author, both after in the 17th chapter, almost throughout, and also in the circumscription, now next following, when he saith, it is that great city (as chap. 17, 18. he calleth it) and is spiritually termed Sodom and Egypt: and that spiritually (for that must here again be repeated from before) Christ was there crucified. For the two first appellations signify spiritual wickedness: the latter signifieth the shew and pretence of good, that is, of christian and sound religion. Sodom signifieth most licentious impiety and injustice. Egypt, most cruel persecution of the people of God: and Jerusalem signifieth the most confident glorying of that city, as it were in true religion, being yet full of falsehood and ungodliness. Now who is ignorant that these things do rather and more agree unto Rome than any other city. The commendations of the city of Rome, for many years past, are publicly notorious, which are not for me to gather together. This only I will say, that he long since did very well see what Rome is, who taking his leave thereof, used these verses:

"Roma, vale, vidi, satis est vidisse: revertar,

"Quam leno, meretrix, scurra, cincedus ero."

Now farewell, Rome, I have thee seen, it was enough to see. I will return when as I mean, bawd, harlot, knave to be.

^d After a more secret kind of meaning and understanding.

¹⁴ Namely, in his members, as also he said unto Saul, Acts 9. 5.

¹⁵ That is, for three years and a half: for so many years Boniface lived after his Jubilee, as Bergomenis witnesseth.

¹⁶ So much the more shall they by this occasion exercise the jollity of their Jubilee.

¹⁷ The gospel of Christ is the affliction of the world, and the ministry thereof a favour of death unto death to those that perish, 1 Cor. 2. 16.

A. D. 96. 11 ¹⁸ But after ¹⁹ three days and an half, ²⁰ the spirit of life coming from God, shall enter into them, and they ²¹ shall stand up upon their feet: and great fear shall come upon them which saw them.

12 And they shall hear a great voice from heaven, saying unto them, ²² Come up hither. And they shall ascend up to heaven in a cloud, ²³ and their enemies shall see them.

13 ²⁴ And the same hour shall there be a great earthquake, and the tenth part of the city shall fall, and in the earthquake shall be slain in number seven thousand: and the remnant were fore feared, ²⁵ and ^e gave glory to the God of heaven.

14 ²⁶ The second woe is past, and behold, the third woe will come anon.

15 ²⁷ And the seventh angel blew the trumpet, and there were great voices in heaven, saying, ²⁸ The kingdoms of the world are our Lord's, and his Christ's, and he shall reign for evermore.

16 ²⁹ Then the four and twenty elders, which sat before God on their seats, fell upon their faces, and worshipped God, ¹⁸ The third place, as I noted before, is of the rising again of the prophets from the dead, and their carrying up into heaven. For their resurrection is shewed in this verse: their calling and lifting up into heaven, in the verse following.

¹⁹ That is, what time God shall destroy that wicked Boniface.

²⁰ That is, the prophets of God shall in a sort rise again, not the same in person (as they say) but in spirit: that is, in the power and efficacy of their ministry, which St. John expressed before, verses 5 and 6. And so the prophecy that is spoken of Elias, is interpreted by the angel to be understood of John the Baptist, Luke 1:17. For the same Boniface himself, who sought to kill and destroy them, was by the fire of God's mouth (which the holy ministry sheweth and exhibiteth) devoured and died miserably in prison, by the endeavour of Sarra Columnensis, and Nogaretus a French knight, whom Philip the fair, king of France, sent into Italy, but with a very small power.

²² They were called by God into heaven, and taken out of this malignant world, into the heavenly church, which also lieth hidden here in the earth, to exercise their calling secretly: as of whom this wretched world was unworthy. Heb. 11:38. For the church of the wicked is by comparison called the earth, or the world: and the church of the godly, heaven: So in ancient times amongst the godly Israelites so amongst the Jews, in the days of Manasses and other kings, when the earth refused the heirs of heaven. we read that they lay hidden as heaven in the earth.

²³ Yet could they not hinder the secret ones of the Lord (as the Psalmist called them, Psalm 83:4.) but they that went on forward in his work.

²⁵ They were indeed broken with present astonishment of mind, but did not earnestly repent as they ought to have done.

^e Glorified God by confessing his name.

²⁶ He passeth unto the second history, which is the second part of this chapter. St. John calleth these the second and third woe, having respect unto Chap. 9:12.

17 Saying, We give thee thanks, Lord God Almighty, which art, and which wast, and which art to come: for thou hast received thy great might, and hast obtained thy kingdom.

18 ³⁰ And the Gentiles were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldst give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and to them that fear thy name, to small and great, and shouldst destroy them which destroy the earth.

19 Then the temple of God was ³¹ opened in heaven, and there was seen in his temple the ark of his covenant: and there were lightnings, and voices, and thunderings, and earthquake, and much hail.

²⁹ The narration hath two parts an acclamation of the heavenly creatures in this verse, and both an adoration by all the elders, verse 16. and also a most ample thanksgiving, verse 17, 18. The sense of the acclamation is: Now the Lord is entered on his kingdom, and hath restored his church, in which, most mightily recovered from the profanation of the Gentiles, he may glorify himself. Namely, that which the Lord ordained, when first he ordained his church, that the faith of the saints doth now behold as accomplished.

³⁰ As before, 7:11. This giving of thanks is altogether of the same content with the words going before.

³² This is the confirmation of the next prophecy foregoing, by signs exhibited in heaven, and that of two sorts, whereof some are visible, as the passing away of the heaven, the opening of the temple, the ark of the covenant appearing in the temple, and testifying the glorious presence of God, and the lightnings: others apprehended by ear and such dull sense, which bear witness in heaven and earth to the truth of the judgments of God.

Hitherto hath been the general prophecy, comprehended in two parts, as I shewed upon chap. 11. Now shall be declared the first part of this prophecy, in this and the next chapter, and the latter part in the 14th, 15th, and 16th chapter. Unto the first part, which is of the conflict or militant church, belong two things. The beginning and the progress of the same in conflicts and Christian combats. Of which two, the beginning or upspring of the church is described in this chapter, and the progress thereof in the chapter following. The beginning of the Christian church we define to be from the first moment of the conception of Christ, until that time wherein this church was as it were weaned and taken away from the breast or milk of her mother: which is the time when the church of the Jews with their city and temple was overthrown by the judgment of God. So we have in this chapter the story of 69 years and upwards. The parts of this chapter are three. The first, is the history of the conception and bearing in womb, in four verses. The second, an history of the birth, from the 5th verse unto the 12th. The third is of the woman that had brought forth, unto the end of the chapter. And these several parts have every one their conflicts. Therefore in that first part are two things contained, one, the conception and bearing in womb, in two verses: and another of the laying in wait of the dragon against that should be brought forth, in the next two verses. In the first point are these things, the description of the mother, verse 1. and the dolors of childbirth, verse 2. all shewed unto John from heaven.

¹ A type of the true holy church which then was in the nation of the Jews. This church (as is the state of the holy church catholic) did in itself shine about with glory given of God, trod under feet mutability and changeableness, and possessed the kingdom of heaven as the heirs thereof.

A. D. 96. and the moon was under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars.

2 And she was with child, and cried travailling in birth, and was pained ready to be delivered.

3 And there appeared another wonder in heaven: 4 for behold a great red dragon having seven heads, and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads:

4 7 And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and cast them to the earth. And the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, 9 to devour her child, when she had brought it forth.

5 10 So she brought forth a man child, which should rule all nations with a rod of iron, and that her child was taken up unto God and to his throne.

6 12 And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and threescore days.

7 And there was a battle in heaven, 14 Michael and his angels fought against the dragon, and the dragon fought and his angels.

8 15 But they prevailed not, neither was their place found any more in heaven.

9 And the great dragon, that old serpent, called the devil and Satan, was cast out, which deceiveth all the world: he was even cast out to the earth, and his angels were cast out with him.

10 Then I heard a loud voice in heaven, saying, 16 Now is salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night.

11 But they overcame him by that blood of the lamb, and by that word of their testimony, and they loved not their lives unto the death.

12 Therefore rejoice, ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Woe to the inhabitants of the earth, and of the sea: for the devil is come down unto you, which hath great wrath, knowing that he had but a short time.

13 And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which had brought forth the man child.

14 18 But to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the presence of the serpent.

4 K

15 And

A. D. 96.

3 For this is that barren woman that brought not forth, of which Habbakuk 45. 1. and Gal. 4. 27. she cried out for a good cause, and was tormented at that time, when in the judgement of all men she was near unto death, and in a manner ready to give up the ghost, by reason of her weakness and poverty.

4 That is, the devil or Satan (as is declared verse 9.) mighty angry, and full of wrath.

5 Thereby to withstand those seven churches spoken of, that is, the catholic church, and that with kingly furniture and tyrannical magnificence: signified by the crowns set upon his heads, as if the same without controversy belonged unto him by the proper right: as also he boasted unto Christ, Matt. 4. 9. See after upon chap. 13. 1.

6 More than are the horns of the lamb, or than the churches are: so well furnished doth the tyrant brag himself to be unto all manner of mischief.

7 After the description of Satan followeth this action, that is, his battle offered unto the church, partly to that which is visible, wherein the wheat is mingled with the chaff, and the good fish with that which is evil; a good part thereof, though in appearance it shined as the stars shine in heaven, he is said to be thrust down out of heaven, and to pervert: for if it were possible he would pervert even the elect, Matt. 24. 24. and partly, to the elect members of the holy catholic church, in the second part of this verse. Many therefore of the members of this visible church, saith Saint John, he overthrew, and triumphed upon them.

8 He withstood that elect church of the Jews, which was now ready to bring forth the Christian church, and watched for that she should bring forth. For the whole church and whole body is compared unto a woman: and a part of the church unto that which is brought forth, as we have noted at large upon Cant. 7. 6.

9 Christ mystical (as they call him) that is, the whole church, consisteth of the person of Christ as the head, and of the body united therunto by the Spirit, so is the name of Christ taken, 1 Cor. 12. 12.

10 The second history of this church delivered of a child: in which first the consideration of the child born, and of the mother, is described in two verses: secondly, the battle of the dragon against the young child, and the victory obtained against him in three verses following: last of all is sung a song of victory, unto the twelfth verse. Now Saint John, in consideration of the child born, noteth two things: for he describeth him, and his station or place in this verse.

11 That is Christ the head of the church joined with his church (the beginning root and foundation whereof is the same Christ) endowed with kingly power, and taken up into heaven out of the jaws of Satan (who as a serpent did bite him upon the cross) that, sitting upon the celestial throne, he might reign over all.

12 The church of Christ which was of the Jews, after his assumption into heaven, hid itself in the world as in a wilderness, trusting in the only defence of God, as witnesseth Saint Luke in the Acts of the Apostles.

13 Namely, the apostles and servants of God ordained to feed with the word of life the church collected both of the Jews and Gentiles, unless that any man will take the word "alerent" impersonally, after the use of the Hebrews, instead of "aleretur:" but I like the first better. For he hath respect unto those two prophets, of whom, chap. 11. 3. As for the meaning of the 1260 days, look the same place.

14 Christ is the prince of angels, and the head of the church, who beareth that iron rod, verse 5. See the notes upon Daniel, chapter 12. 1. In this verse a description of the battle, and of the victory in the two verses following. The Psalmist had respect unto this battle, Psalm 68. 19. and Paul, Eph. 4. 8. and Col. 2. 15.

15 The description of the victory, by denying of one thing in this verse, and by affirming the contrary in the next verse. As that Satan gained nothing in heaven, but was by the power of God thrown down into the world whereof he is the prince, Christ himself and his elect members standing still by the throne of God.

16 They were cast out so, that they were never seen any more in heaven.

16 The song of victory or triumph, containing, first, a proposition of the glory of God, and of Christ, shewed in that victory. Secondly, it containeth a reason of the same proposition, taken from the effects, as that the enemy is overcome in battle, in this verse, and that the godly are made conquerors (and more than conquerors, Rom. 8. 37.) verse 11. Thirdly, a conclusion, wherein is an exhortation unto the angels, and to the saints: and unto the world a prophecy of great misery, and of destruction, procured by the devil against mankind, lest himself should shortly be miserable alone, verse 12.

17 He is said, in the Hebrew tongue, to love his life, that esteemeth nothing more precious than his life: and on the other side, he is said not to love his life, who doubteth not to hazard it, wheresoever need requireth.

17 The third part: an history of the woman delivered; consisting of two members, the present battle of Satan against the church of the Jewish nation, in four verses: and the battle intended against the seed thereof, that is, against the church of the Gentiles, which is called holy, by reason of the gospel of Christ, in the two last verses.

18 That is, being strengthened with divine power: and taught by oracle, she fled swiftly from the assault of the devil, and from the common destruction of Jerusalem, and went into a solitary city beyond Jordan, called Pella, as Eusebius telleth in the fifth chapter of the third book of his ecclesiastical history: which place God had commanded her by revelation.

19 Into that place which God had appointed for her.

19 That is, for three years and an half: so the same speech is taken, Dan. 7. 25. This space of time is reckoned in manner from that last and most grievous rebellion of the Jews, unto the destruction of the city and temple,

A. D. 95. 15² And the serpent cast out of his mouth water after the woman, like a flood, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood.

16² But the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood which the dragon had cast out of his mouth.

17²² Then the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went and made war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.

18²³ And I stood on the sea sand.

CHAP. XIII.

1 The beast with many heads is despised, 12 which draweth the most part of the world to idolatry. 13 for their defection or falling away, began in the twelfth year of Nero, before the beginning whereof many fore- signs and predictions were shewed from heaven, as Josephus writeth, lib. 7. cap. 12. and Hegippus, lib. 5. cap. 41. amongst which this is very memorable, that in the feast of Pentecost not only a great sound and noise was heard in the temple, but also a great voice was heard of many out of the sanctuary, which cried out unto all, Let us depart hence. Now three years and a half after this defection was begun of the Jews and those wonders happened, the city was taken by force, the temple overthrowed, and the place forsaken of God: and this compass of time St. John noted in this place.

25 That is, he inflamed the Romans and nations, that they persecuting the Jewish people with cruel arms, might by the same occasion invade the church of Christ, now departed from Jerusalem, and out of Judea. For it is an usual thing in scripture, that the raging tumults of the nations should be compared unto waters.

26 That is, there was offered in their place other Jews, unto the Romans and nations raging against that people; and it came to pass thereby, that the church of God was saved whole from that violence, that most raging flood of persecution, which the dragon vomited out, being altogether spent in the destruction of these other Jews.

27 Being set on fire by this means, he began to be more mad, and because he perceived that his purpose against the Christian church of the Jews remnant was come to nought, he resolv'd to fall upon her seed, that is, the church gathered also by God of the Gentiles, and the holy members of the same. And this is that other branch, as I said upon the thirteenth verse, in which the purpose of Satan is shewed, verie 17. and his attempt, verie 18.

28 That is, a most mighty tempest that he rushed upon the whole world (whose prince he is) to raise the floods, and provoke the nations, that they might with their furious billows toss up and down, drive here and there, and finally destroy the church of Christ, with the holy members of the same. But the providence of God resisted his attempts, that he might favour the church of the Gentiles, yet tender, and as it were green. The rest of this story of the dragon is excellently prosecuted by Saint John hereafter in the 20th chapter. For here the dragon endeavouring to do mischief, was by God cast into prison.

29 The apostle having declared the springing up of the Christian church, and the estate of the church from which ours taketh her beginning, doth now pass unto the story of the progress thereof, as I shewed in the entrance of the former chapter. And this history of the progress of the church, and the battles thereof, is set down in this chapter, but distinctly in two parts, one is of the civil Roman empire, unto verie 10. another of the body ecclesiastical or propheticall, thence unto the end of the chapter. In the former part are shewed these things: First, the state of that empire, in four verses: then the acts thereof, in three verses: after the effect, which is exceeding great glory, verie 8. And last of all is commended the use, and the instruction of the godly against the evils that shall come from the same, verie 9, 10. The history of the state containeth a most ample description of the beast, first intire, verie 1, 2. and then restored after hurt, verie 3, 4.

30 On the sand whereon stood the devil, practising new tempests against the church, in the verie next beforegoing: what time the empire of Rome was endangered by domesticall dissensions, and was mightily tossed, having ever and anon new heads and new emperors. See in the 17th chapter, and verie 8.

31 Having the same instruments of power, providence, and most expert government, which the dragon is said to

The other beast rising out of the earth, 15 giveth power unto him. A. D. 96.

AND I saw a beast rise out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns were ten crowns, and upon his head the name of blasphemy.

2 And the beast which I saw was like a leopard, and his feet like a bear's, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and the dragon gave him his power and his throne, and great authority.

3 And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death, but his deadly wound was healed, and all the world wondered and followed the beast.

4 And have had in the 12th chapter, and the 13th verie.

4 We read in the twelfth chapter, and third verie, that the dragon had seven crowns set upon seven heads, to denote the thief avoucheth himself to be proper Lord and Prince of the world, but this beast is said to have ten crowns set upon several, not heads, but horns: because the beast is beholden for all unto the dragon, verie 2. and doth not otherwise reign than by law of subjection given y him, namely, that he employ his horns against the church of God. The speech is taken from the ancient custom and form of dealing in such case: by which they that were absolute kings, did wear the diadem upon their heads: but their vassals, and such as reigned by grace from them, wore the same upon their hoods: for so they might commodiously lay down their diadems, when they came into the pretence of their sovereigns: as also the elders are said when they adored God which sat upon the throne, to have cast down their crowns before him, chap. 4. ver. 10.

5 Contrary to that which God of old commanded should be written in the head-piece of the high priest, that is, "Sanctitas Jehovæ," "Holiness unto the Lord." The name of blasphemy imposed by the dragon, is, (as I think) that which Saint Paul saith in the second chapter of his second Epistle to the Thessalonians, the fourth verie: "He sitteth as God, and boasteth himself to be God." For this name of blasphemy both the Roman emperors did then challenge unto themselves, as Suetonius and Dion do report of Caligula and Domitian: and after them the Popes of Rome did with full mouth profess the same of themselves, when they challenged unto themselves sovereignty in holy things: of which kind of sayings the sixth book of the Decretals, the Clementines, and the Extravagants, are very full. For these men were not content with that which Anglicus wrote in his Poetria, (the beginning whereof is, "Papa stupor mundi," "The Pope is the wonder of the world.") "Nec Deus es, nec homo, sed neuter es inter utrumque:" "Thou art not God, nor art thou man, but neuter mixt of both:" as the gloss witnesseth upon the sixth book: But they were bold to take to themselves the very name of God: and to accept it given of others: according as almost an hundred and twenty years since, there was made for Sixtus the fourth, when he should first enter into Rome in his dignity papal, a pageant of triumph, and cunningly fixed upon the gate of the city he should enter at, having written upon it this blasphemous verie:

"Oraculo vocis mundi moderaris habenas,
"Et merito in terris crederis esse Deus."

That is,

By oracle of thine own voice, the world thou govern'st all;
And worthily a God on earth men think and do thee call.

These and six hundred the like, who can impute unto that modesty whereby good men of old would have themselves called the servants of the servants of God? Verily either this is a name of blasphemy, or there is none at all.

6 Swift as the leopard; easily clasping all things, as the bear doth with his foot; and tearing and devouring all things with the mouth, as doth the lion.

7 That is, he lent the same unto the beast to use, when he perceived that himself could not escape, but must needs be taken by the hand of the angel, and cast into the bottomless pit, chapter 20. yet did not he abandon the same utterly from himself, but that he might use it as long as he could.

8 This is the other place that appertaineth to the description of the beast of Rome: that, besides that natural dignity,

A. D. 96. 4 And they worshipped the dragon which gave the power unto the beast: and they worshipped the beast, saying, Who is like unto the beast! who is able to war with him!

5 ⁹ And there was given unto him a mouth, that spake great things and blasphemies, and power was given unto him, ¹⁰ to do two and forty months.

6 And he opened his mouth unto blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name, ¹¹ and his tabernacle, ¹² and them that dwell in heaven.

7 And it was given to him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them, and power was given him over every kindred, and tongue, and nation.

8 Therefore all that dwell upon the earth, shall worship him, ¹³ whose names are not written in the book of life of that Lamb which was slain from the beginning of the world.

A. D. 96.

9 ¹⁴ If any man have an ear, let him hear.

10 If any lead into captivity, he shall go into captivity: * if any kill with a sword, he must be killed by a sword: here is the patience and the faith of the saints.

* Gen. 9. 6. Matt. 26. 52.

11 ¹⁵ And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth, ¹⁶ which had two horns like the lamb, but he spake like the dragon.

12 ¹⁷ And he did all that the first beast could do before him, and he caused the earth, and them which dwell therein, ¹⁸ to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

13 ¹⁹ And he did great wonders, so that he made dignity, and amplitude of the Roman empire, which was shadowed in the two former verses, there was added this also as miraculous, that one head was wounded, as it were, unto death, and was healed again, as from heaven, in the sight of all men. This head was Nero the emperor, in whom the race of the Cæsars fell from the imperial dignity, and the government of the commonwealth was translated unto others: in whose hands the empire was so cured, and recovered unto health, as it seemed unto all so much the more deeply rooted and grounded fast than ever before. And hence followed those effects which are next spoken of: First, an admiration of certain power, as it were sacred and divine, sustaining the empire, and governing it: Secondly, the obedience and submission of the whole earth, in this verse: Thirdly, the adoration of the dragon, and most wicked worshipping of devils, confirmed by the Roman emperors: Lastly, the adoration of the beast himself, which grew into so great estimation, as that both the name and worship of a god was given unto him, verse the fourth. Now there were two causes which brought in the minds of men this religion: the shew of excellency, which bringeth with it reverence: and the shew of power invincible, which bringeth fear. Who is like (say they) unto the beast! Who shall be able to fight with him!

⁹ The second member, containing an history of the acts of the beast, as I said verse 1. The history of them is concluded in two points: the beginning, and the manner of them. The beginning is the gift of the dragon, who put and inspired into the beast both his impiety against God, and his immanity and injustice against all men, especially against the godly, and those that were of the household of faith, verse the fifth. The manner of the acts or actions done, is of two sorts, both impious in mind, and blasphemous in speech against God, his church, and the godly, verse the sixth: and also most cruel and injurious in deeds even such as were done of most raging enemies, and of most insolent and proud conquerors, verse the 7th.

¹⁰ Namely, his actions, and manner of dealing. As concerning those two and forty months, I have spoken of them before in the twelfth chapter, and second verse.

¹¹ That is, the holy church, the true house of the living God.

¹² That is, the godly, in several, who hid themselves from his cruelty. For this bloody beast surcharged those holy souls most falsely with those innumerable accusations for the name of Christ, as we read in Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Arnobius, Minutius, Eusebius, Augustine, and others: which examples the latter times followed most diligently, in destroying the flock of Christ: and we in our own memory have found by experience, to our incredible grief. Concerning heaven, see in the eleventh chapter, and in the twelfth verse.

¹³ That is, such as are not from everlasting elected in Christ Jesus. For this is that Lamb slain, of which chapter the fifth, verse the sixth. These words I do, with Aretas, distinguish in this manner: "Whose names are not written from the laying of the foundation of the world, in the book of life of the Lamb slain." And this distinction is confirmed by a like place hereafter, chapter 17. 8.

¹⁴ The conclusion of this speech of the first beast, consisting of two parts. An exhortation to attentive audience, in this verse: and a foretelling, which partly containeth threatenings against the wicked, and partly comforts for those which in patience and faith shall wait for that glorious coming of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, verse the tenth.

¹⁵ The second member of the vision, concerning the ecclesiastical dominion, which in Rome succeeded that which was politic, and is in the power of the corporation of false prophets, and of the forgers of false doctrine. Wherefore the same beast, and the same body or corporation, is called by Saint John by the name of false prophet, chapter 16. verse 13 and 19. verse 20. The form of this beast is first described in this verse, then his acts in the verses following: and the whole speech is concluded in the last verse. This beast is by his breed a son of the earth (as they say) obscurely born, and by little and little creeping up out of his abject state.

¹⁶ That is, in shew he resembled the Lamb (for what is more mild or more humble than to be the servant of the servants of God?) but indeed he played the part of the dragon, and of the wolf, Matt. 7. 15. For even Satan changeth himself into an angel of light, 2 Cor. 11. 14. and what should his honest disciples and servants do?

¹⁷ The history of the acts of this beast containeth in sum three things, hypocrisy, the witness of miracles, and tyranny: of which the first is noted in this verse, the second in the three verses following, the third in the sixteenth and seventeenth verses. His hypocrisy is most full of leasing, whereby he abuseth both the former beast and the whole world: in that albeit he hath by his cunning, and as it were by lime, made of the former beast a most miserable skeleton, or anatomy, usurped all his authority unto himself, and most impudently exerciseth the same in the sight and view of him: yet he carrieth himself so, as if he honoured him with most high honour, and did in very good truth cause him to be revered of all men.

¹⁸ For unto this beast of Rome, which of a civil empire is made an ecclesiastical hierarchy, are given divine honours, and divine authority so far, as he is believed to be above the scriptures, which the gloss upon the decretals declareth by this devilish verse:

"Articulos solvit, synodumque facit generalem."

That is,

He changeth the articles of Faith, and giveth authority to general councils.

Which is spoken of the Papal power. So the beast is by birth, foundation, seat, and finally substance, one: only the pope hath altered the form and manner thereof, being himself the head both of that tyrannical empire, and also of the false prophets: for the empire hath he taken unto himself, and thereunto hath added this cunning device. Now these words, "whose deadly wound was cured," are put here for distinction sake, as also sometimes afterwards: that even at that time the godly readers of this prophecy might by this sign be brought to see the things as present: as if it were said, that they might adore this very empire that now is, whose head we have seen in our own memory to have been cut off, and to be cured again.

¹⁹ The second point of the things done by the beast, is the credit of great wonders or miracles, and pertaining to the strengthening of this impiety: of which signs some were given from above, as it is said, that fire was sent down from heaven by false sorcery, in this verse. Others were shewed here below in the sight of the beast, to establish idolatry, and deceive souls: which part St. John setteth forth, beginning (as they say) at that which is last, in this manner: First, the effect is declared in these words: "He deceiveth the inhabitants of the earth." Secondly, the common manner of working, in two sorts: one of miracles, "For the signs which were given him to do in the presence of the beast:" the other of the words added to the signs, and teaching the idolatry by those signs, "Saying unto the inhabitants of the earth, that they should make an image unto the

A. D. 96. made fire to come down from heaven on the earth, in the sight of men, 12 And deceived them that dwell on the earth by the signs which were permitted him to do in the sight of the beast, saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make the ²² image of the ²¹ beast which had the wound of a sword, and did live.

15 ²² And it was permitted to him to give a ² spirit unto the image of the beast, so that the image of the beast should speak, and should cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast, should be killed.

16 ²³ And he made all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive ²⁴ a ³ mark in their right hand or in their foreheads:

17 And that no man might ²⁵ buy or sell, save he that had the ²⁵ mark or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

18 ²⁷ Here is wisdom. Let him that hath wit, count the number of the beast: for it is the ²⁸ number of a man, and his number is six hundred threescore and six. A. D. 96.

C H A P. XIV.

1 The Lamb standeth on mount Sion, 4 with his chiefe worshippers. 6 One angel preacheth the gospel, 8 another foretelleth the fall of Babylon: 9 the third warneth that the beast be avoided. 13 A voice from heaven pronounceth them happy who die in the Lord. 16 The Lord's sickle is thrust into the harvest, 18 and into the vintage.

THEN I looked, and lo, a Lamb ¹ stood on mount Sion, and with him ² an hundred forty the beast, which, &c." Thirdly, a special manner is declared: "That it is given unto him to put life unto the image of the beast:" and that such a kind of quickening, that the same both speaketh by answer unto those that ask counsel: it, and also pronounceth death against all those that do not obey nor worship it: all which things oftentimes by false miracles, through the procurement and inspiration of the devil, have been effected and wrought in images. The histories of the Papists are full of examples of such miracles, the most of them reigned, many also done by the devil in images, as of old in the serpent, Gen. 3. 1. By which examples is confirmed not the authority of the beast, but the truth of God and these prophecies.

²² That is, images, by enallage or change of the number: for the worship of them ever since the second council of Nice, hath been ordained in the church by public credit and authority, contrary to the law of God.

²³ In the Greek, the word is of the dative case, as much to say, as unto the worship, honour and obeying of the beast, for by this maintenance of images, this pseudoprophetic beast doth mightily profit the beast of Rome, or whom long ago he received them. Wherefore the same is hereafter very fitly called the image of the beast, for that images have their beginning from the beast, and have their form or manner from the will of the beast, and have their end and use fixed in the profit and commodity of the beast.

²⁴ And of this miracle of the images of the beast, (that is, which the beast hath ordained to establish idolatry) which miraculously speak, and give judgment, or rather marvellously, by the fraud of the false prophets, the Papists books are full fraughted.

²⁵ To give life, as Jannes and Jambres imitated the wonders that Moses wrought.

²⁶ The third place is a most wicked and most insolent tyranny, as was said before, usurped over the persons of men, in this verse: and over their goods and actions, in the next verse. For he is said both to bring upon all persons a tyrannous servitude, so that as bond-slaves they might serve the beast: and also to exercise over all their goods and actions a peculiar like abuse of indulgences and dispensations (as they term them) amongst their friends, and against others, to use most violent interdictions, and to shoot out curings, even in natural and civil, private and public contracts, wherein all good faith ought to have place.

²⁷ That is, their Chrism, by which in the sacrament (as they call it) of confirmation, they make servile unto themselves, the persons and doings of men, signing them in their forehead and hands, and as for the sign left by Christ (of which chap. 7. 3.) and the holy sacrament of baptism, they make as void. For whom Christ hath joined unto himself by baptism, this beast maketh challenge unto them by his greasy chrism, which he doubteth not to prefer before baptism, both in authority and in efficacy.

²⁸ The mark of the name of the beast.

²⁹ That is, have any traffic or intercourse with men, but they only which have this anointing and consecrating of clerical tonsure, as they call it. Read Gratian "De consecratione, distinctione tertia, c. 5. omnes spiritus, &c." of these matters.

pontifical knowledge, and of the law (as they call it) canonical, and hath not as it were made up in account and cast the number of the mysteries thereof: for in these things consisteth the number of that name of the beast. And this is excellently set forth in the next verse.

³¹ That is, in this number of the beast consisteth that popish wisdom, which unto them seemeth the greatest of all others. In these words St. John expoundeth that saying, which went before of the number of the beast, what it hath above his mark or cognifance and his name. These things, saith St. John, the mark and the name of the beast, do easily happen unto any man, but to have the number of the beast, is wisdom: that is, only the wise and such as have understanding, can come by that number: for they must be most illuminate doctors that attain thereunto, as the words following do declare.

³² How great and of what denomination this number of the beast is, by the which the beast accounteth his wisdom, St. John declareth in these words, Dost thou demand how great it is? it is so great, that it occupieth the whole man: he is always learning, and never cometh to the knowledge thereof: he must be a man indeed that doth attain unto it. Askest thou of what denomination it is? verily it standeth of six throughout, and perfectly riseth of all the parts thereof in their several denominations (as they term them:) it standeth of six by unit, tens, hundreds, &c. so as there is no one part in the learning and order pontifical, which is not either referred unto the head, and, as it were, the top thereof, or contained in the same: so fitly do all things in this hierarchy agree one with another, and with their head. Therefore that cruel beast Boniface the VIIIth. doth commend by the number of six, those decretals which he perfected, in the proem of the sixth book: "Which book (saith he) being to be added to five other books of the same volume of decretals, we thought good to name Sextum, the sixth: that the same volume, by addition thereof, containing a senary, or the number of six books (which is a number perfect) may yield a perfect form of managing all things, and perfect discipline of behaviour." Here therefore is the number of the beast, who poureth from himself all his parts, and bringeth them all back again unto himself by his discipline in most wise and cunning manner. If any man desire more of this, let him read the gloss upon that place, I am not ignorant that other interpretations are brought upon this place: but I thought it my duty, with the good favour of all, and without the offence of any, to propound my opinion in this point. And for this cause especially, for that it seemed unto me neither profitable, nor like to be true, that the number of the beast, or of the name of the beast, should be taken as the common sort of interpreters do take it. For this number of the beast teacheth, giveth out, imprinteth, as a public mark of such as be his, and esteemeth that mark above all others, as the mark of those whom he loveth best. Now those other expositions seem rather to be far removed from this property and condition of that number: whether you respect the name Latinus, or Titan, or any other. For these the beast doth not teach, nor give forth, nor imprint, but most diligently forbiddeth to be taught, and audaciously denieth: he approveth not these, but reproveth them, and hateth them that think so of this number, with an hatred greater than that of Vatinius.

³³ The history of the church of Christ being finished for more than a thousand and three hundred years, at which time Boniface VIII. lived, as before hath been said: there remaineth the rest of the history of the conflicting or militant

A. D. 96. forty and four thousand, having his Father's name written in their foreheads.

2 And I heard a voice from heaven as the sound of many waters, and as the sound of a great thunder: and I heard the voice of harpers, harping with their harps.

3 And they sung as it were a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders: and no man could learn that song, but the hundred forty and four thousand which were bought from the earth.

4 These are they which are not defiled with women, for they are virgins: these follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth: these are bought from men, being the first fruits unto God, and to the Lamb.

5 And in their mouths was found no guile: for they are without spot before the throne of God.

6 ¶ Then I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having an everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people,

7 ¶ Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him: for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

8 And there followed another angel, saying: * Babylon that great city is fallen; it is fallen: for she made all nations to drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.

9 ¶ And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or on his hand,

10 The same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, yea, of the pure wine which is poured into the cup of his wrath, and he shall be tormented in fire and brimstone before the holy angels, and before the Lamb.

11 And the smoke of their torment shall ascend evermore: and they shall have no rest day nor night, which worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the print of his name.

12 ¶ Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus.

13 Then I heard a voice from heaven, saying unto me, Write, The dead which die in the Lord, are fully blessed. Even so saith the Spirit: for they rest from their labours; and their works follow them.

14 ¶ And I looked, and behold, a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sitting like unto tant church, from thence unto the time of the last victory, in three chapters. For first of all, as the foundation of the whole history is described, the standing of the Lamb with his army and retinue in five verses, after his worthy acts which he hath done, and yet doth in most mighty manner, whilst he overthroweth Antichrist with the spirit of his mouth, in the rest of this chapter, and in the two following. Unto the description of the Lamb, are propounded three things, his situation, place and attendance: for the rest are expounded in the former visions, especially upon the fifth chapter.

2 As ready girt to do his office (as Acts 7. 56.) in the midst of the church, which aforetime mount Zion did prefigure.

3 As before; 7. 2. This retinue of the Lamb is described first by divine mark (as before 7. 2.) in this verse. Then by divine occupation, in that all and every one in his retinue most vehemently and sweetly (verse 2.) do glorify the Lamb with a special song before God and his elect angels: which song flesh and blood cannot hear, nor understand, ver. 3. Lastly, by their deeds done before, and their sanctification in that they were virgins pure from spiritual and bodily fornication, that is, from impiety and unrighteousness, that they followed the Lamb as a guide unto all goodness, and cleaved unto him: that they are holy unto him, as of grace redeemed by him: that in truth and simplicity of Christ they have exercised all these things, sanctimony of life, the direction of the Lamb, a thankful remembrance of redemption by him: finally (to conclude in a word) that they are blameless before the Lord, ver. 4, 5.

4 The other part (as I said on the first verse) is of the acts of the Lamb, the manner whereof is delivered in two sorts, of his speech and of his facts. His speeches are set forth unto the 13th verse of this chapter, and his facts unto the sixteenth chapter. In the speech of the Lamb, which is the word of the gospel, are taught in this place these things: The service of the godly, consisting inwardly of reverence towards God; and outwardly of the glorifying of him: the visible sign of which is adoration, ver. 7. The overthrowing of wicked Babylon, ver. 8. and the fall of every one of the ungodly which worship the beast, ver. 9, 10, 11. Finally, the state of the holy servants of God, both present, ver. 11. and to come, most blessed, according to the promise of God, ver. 13.

5 This angel is a type or figure of the good and faithful servants of God, whom God especially from that time of Boniface VIII. hath raised up to the publishing of the gospel of Christ, both by preaching and by writing. So God first, near unto the time of the same Boniface, used Peter Castellorius an Italian: after Arnold, de Villa Nova, a Frenchman, then Occam, Dante, Petrarch, after that, Johannes de Rupe Cesa, a Franciscan: after again, John Wickliffe an Englishman, and so continually one or another unto the restoring of the truth, and enlarging of his church.

6 That is, Babylon is destroyed by the sentence and judgment of God: the execution whereof St. John describeth; chap. 18. And this voice of the ministers of Christ hath continued since the time that Babylon (which is Rome) hath by deliberate counsel and manifest malice oppugned the light of the gospel offered from God:

7 Of her fornication, whereby God was provoked to wrath.

8 That is, shall not worship God alone, but shall transfer his divine honour unto this beast, whether he do it with his heart, or counterfeiting in shew. For he (saith Christ) that denieth me before men, him will I deny before my Father and his angels, Matt. 10. 32. And this is that voice of the holy ministry, which at this time is very much used of the holy and faithful servants of God. For having now sufficiently found out the public obstinacy of Babylon, they labour not any longer to thunder out against the same: but to save some particular members by terror (as St. Jude speaketh) and to pluck them out of the public flame: or else by vehement commiseration of their estate to lead them away; they set before them eternal death, into which they rush unawares, unless in good time they return unto God: but the godly which are of their own flock, they exhort unto patience, obedience, and faith in the Lord Jesus, and charge them to give light by their good example, of good life unto others.

9 The patience, sanctification, and justification, by faith: the consequence whereof are rest, felicity, and glory eternal in the heavenly fellowship of God and his angels.

10 That is, for the Lord.

11 By works, is meant the reward which followeth good works.

12 The second part of this chapter, as I said verse 1. Of the acts and doings of Christ, in overthrowing of Antichrist and his church by the Spirit of his divine mouth: seeing that having been called back by word both publicly and privately unto his duty, and admonished of his most certain ruin, he yet ceaseth not to maintain and protect his own adherents, that they may do him service; and to afflict the godly with most barbarous persecutions. Of those things which Christ doth there are two kinds; one common or general in the rest of this chapter, another particular against that savage and rebellious beast and his worshippers, chapter 15, 16. That common kind is the calamity of wars, spread abroad through the whole earth; and filling all things with blood, and that without respect of any person. This is figured or shadowed out in two types of the harvest and vintage. Since the time that the light of the gospel began to shine out, and since prophecy or preaching by the grace of God was raised up again, how horrible

A. D. the Son of man, ¹¹ having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a ¹² sharp sickle.

¹⁵ ¹³ And another angel came out of the temple, crying with a loud voice to him that sat on the cloud, * Thrust in thy sickle and reap: for the time is come to reap: for the harvest of the earth is ripe.

¹⁶ And he that sat on the cloud, thrust in his sickle on the earth, and the earth was reaped.

¹⁷ ¹⁴ Then another angel came out of the temple, which is in heaven, having also a sharp sickle.

¹⁹ And the angel thrust in his sharp sickle on the earth, and cut down the vines of the vineyard of the earth, and cast them into that great wine-press of the wrath of God.

²⁰ And the wine-press was trodden without the city, ¹⁵ and blood came out of the wine-press unto the horse bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs.

CHAP. XV.

¹ The seven angels having the seven last plagues. ³ They that conquered the beast, praise God. ⁶ To the seven angels, ⁷ seven vials full of God's wrath are delivered.

horrible wars have been kindled in the world! how much human flesh hath been thrown to the earth by this divine reaping! how much blood (alas for woe) hath overflowed for these hundred years! almost! all histories do cry out, and this our age (if ever before) is now in horror by reason of the rage of that sickle which Antichrist calleth for. In this place is the first type that is of the harvest.

¹² Declaring his merceness by his colour, like unto that which is in the white or milky circle of heaven.

¹³ As one that shall reign from God, and occupy the place of Christ in this miserable execution.

¹⁴ That is, a most fit and commodious instrument of execution, destroying all by hewing and thrusting through: for who may stand against God?

¹⁵ Christ giveth a commandment in this verse, and the angel executeth it in the next verse.

¹⁶ The other type (as I said verse 14.) is the vintage: the manner whereof is one with that which went before; if thou except this, that the grape-gathering is more exact in seeking out every thing than is the harvest labour. This is therefore a more grievous judgment, both because it succeedeth the other, and because it is understood to be executed with great diligence.

¹⁷ That is, overflowed very deep, and very far and wide: the speech is hyperbolic or excessive, to signify the greatness of the slaughter. And these be those pleasant fruits forsooth of the contempt of Christ, and desiring of Antichrist rather than him, which the miserable, mad, and blind world doth at this time reap.

¹⁸ This is that other place of the acts of Christ, as I noted before, 14. 14. Now therefore is shewed a singular work of the judgment of God belonging to the overthrow of Antichrist and his forces, of which divine work the preparation is described in this chapter, and the execution in the next. The preparation is first set down generally, and in type, in this verse: and is after particularly set forth in the rest of the chapter.

¹⁹ Of which chapter 8, 9. in pouring forth the plagues of the world: for even these plagues do for the most part agree with those.

²¹ This part of the vision alludeth unto the sea, or large vessel of brass, in which the priests washed themselves in the entrance of the temple: for in the entrance of the heavenly temple (as it is called verse 5.) is said to have

A. D. I saw another sign in heaven, great and marvellous, seven ² angels, having the seven last plagues: for by them is fulfilled the wrath of God.

² ³ And I saw ⁴ as it were a glassy sea, mingled with fire, and ⁵ them that had gotten victory of the beast, and of his image, and of his mark, and of the number of his name, ⁶ stand at the glassy sea, having the harps of God.

³ And they sung ⁷ the song of Moses the ² servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, ⁸ Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty: just and true are thy ⁹ ways, King of saints.

⁴ * Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name! for thou only art holy, and all nations shall come and worship before thee: for thy judgments are made manifest.

⁵ ⁹ And after that, I looked, and behold, the temple of the tabernacle of testimony was open in heaven.

⁶ And the seven angels came out of the temple, which had the ¹⁰ seven plagues, clothed in ¹¹ pure and bright linen, and having their breasts ¹² girded with golden girdles.

⁷ And one of the ¹³ four beasts gave unto the seven angels seven golden vials full of the wrath of God, which liveth for evermore.

⁸ And the temple was full of the smoke of the glory of God and of his power, ¹⁴ and no man was able to enter into the temple, till the seven plagues of the seven angels were fulfilled.

been a sea of glass, most lightome and clear unto the commodity of choice mixed with fire, that is, as containing the treasury of the judgments of God, which he bringeth forth and dispenseth according to his own pleasure: for out of the former the priests were cleansed of old: and out of this the ungodly are destroyed now, chap. 46.

⁵ That is, the godly martyrs of Christ, who shall not give place even in miracles unto that beast: of these see before, chap. 13. 17. and 14. 9, 10.

⁶ Glorifying God, from the particular observation of the weapons and instruments of God's wrath, floating in the sea of glass.

⁷ That song of triumph, which is in Exod. 15. 2.

⁸ So is Moses called for honour's sake, as it is set forth, Deut. 34. 10.

⁹ This song hath two parts: one a confession, both particular, in this verse, and general, in the beginning of the next verse: another, a narration of causes belonging to the confession, whereof one kind is eternal in itself, and most present unto the godly, in that God is both holy, and alone God: another kind is future, and to come, in that the elect taken out of the Gentiles (that is, out of the wicked ones and unbelieving, as chap. 11. 2.) were to be brought unto the same state of happiness, by the magnificency of the judgment of God, in the next verse.

¹⁰ Thy doings.

¹¹ The second part of the narration (as was noted verse 2.) wherein first the authority of the whole argument and matter thereof is figured, by a fore-running type of a temple opened in heaven, as chap. 11. 19. namely, that all those things are divine and of God, that proceed from thence, in this verse. Secondly, the administrators or executors come forth out of the temple, verse 6. Thirdly, they are furnished with instruments of the judgments of God, and weapons fit for the manner of the same judgments, ver. 7. Finally, they are confirmed by testimony of the visible glory of God, in the last verse. A like testimony whereunto was exhibited of old in the law, Exod. 40. 34.

¹² That is, commandments to inflict those seven plagues. Here is the figure called Metonymia.

¹³ Which was in old time a sign of the kingly or princely dignity.

¹⁴ This girding was a sign of diligence, and the girdle of gold was a sign of sincerity and trustiness, in taking in charge the commandments of God.

¹⁵ Of these before, chap. 4. 7.

¹⁶ None of those seven angels might return, till he had performed fully the charge committed unto him, according to the decree of God.

2 and 17 The angels pour out the seven vials of God's wrath given unto them, and so divers plagues arise in the world, 18 to terrify the wicked, 19 and the inhabitants of the great city.

AND I heard a great voice out of the temple, saying to the seven angels, Go your ways, and pour out the seven vials of the wrath of God upon the earth.

2 And the first went and poured out his vial upon the earth: and there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men which had the mark of the beast, and upon them which worshipped his image.

3 And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea, and it became as the blood of a dead man: and every living thing died in the sea.

4 And the third angel poured out his vial upon the rivers and fountains of waters, and they became blood.

5 And I heard the angel of the waters say, Lord, Thou art just, which art, and which wast: and holy, because thou hast judged these things.

6 For they shed the blood of the saints and prophets, and therefore hast thou given them blood to drink: for they are worthy.

7 And I heard another out of the sanctuary say, Even so, Lord God Almighty, true and righteous are thy judgments. A. D. 96.

8 And the fourth angel poured out his vial on the sun, and it was given to him to torment men with the heat of fire,

9 And men boiled in great heat, and blasphemed the name of God, which hath power over these plagues, and they repented not to give him glory.

10 And the fifth angel poured out his vial upon the throne of the beast, and his kingdom waxed dark, and they gnawed their tongues for sorrow, 11 And blasphemed the God of heaven for their pains, and for their sores, and repented not of their works.

12 And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river Euphrates, and the water thereof dried up, that the way of the kings of the East should be prepared.

13 And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of that dragon, and out of the mouth of that beast, and out of the mouth of that false prophet.

14 For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, to go unto the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty.

15 (* Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk nakedly, and men see his filtness)

16 And

* Ch. 3. 3.
Matt. 24. 44.
Luke 12. 39.

¹ In the former chapter was set down the preparation unto the work of God: here is delivered the execution thereof. And in this discourse of the execution is a general commandment in this verse; then a particular recital in order of the execution done by every of the seven angels; in the rest of the chapter. This special execution against Antichrist and his crew doth in manner agree unto that which was generally done upon the whole world, chap. 8 and 9, and belongeth (if my conjecture fail me not) unto the same time. Yet herein they do differ one from another, that this was particularly effected upon the princes and ring-leaders of the wickedness of the world; the other generally against the whole world being wicked. And therefore these judgments are figured more grievous than those.

² The history of the first angel, whose plague upon the earth is described almost in the same words with that sixth plague of the Egyptians, Exod. 9. 9. But it doth signify a spiritual ulcer, and that torture or butchery of conscience; seared with an hot iron, which accuseth the ungodly within, and both by truth of the word (the light whereof God hath now so long shewed forth) and by bitterness stirreth up and forceth out the sword of God's wrath.

³ See chap. 13. 16.

⁴ The history of the second angel, who troubleth and molesteth the seas, that he may stir up the conscience of men sleeping in their wickedness, see chap. 8. 8.

⁵ It was turned into rotten and filthy blood, such as is in dead bodies.

⁶ The story of the third angel striking the rivers in this verse, who proclaiming the justice of God, commendeth the same by a most grave comparison of the sins of men with the punishment of God: which is common to this place, and that which went before. Wherefore also this praising is attributed to the angel of the waters, a name common to the second and third angels, according as both of them are said to be sent against the waters, albeit the one of the sea, the other of the rivers, in two verses.

⁷ A confirmation of the praise foregoing, out of the sanctuary of God, whether immediately by Christ, or by some one of his angels, for Christ also is called another angel, chap. 7. 2, 3, 8. and 12. 1.

⁸ The story of the fourth angel who throweth the plague upon the heaven and upon the sun, of which, Luke 21. 26. the effects whereof are noted two: the one peculiar, that it shall scorch men with heat in this verse; the other proceeding accidentally from the former, that their fury shall so much the more be enraged against God in the next verse, when yet (O wonderful mercy and patience of God!)

all other creatures are first stricken often and grievously by the hand of God before mankind, by whom he is provoked: as the things foregoing do declare.

¹⁰ The story of the sixth angel, divided into his act, and the event thereof. The act is, that the angel did cast out of his mouth the plague of a most glowing heat, wherewith even the greatest floods, and which most were wont to swell and overflow (as Euphrates) were dried up, by the counsel of God in this verse. The event is, that the mere madness wherewith the wicked are enraged, that they may scorn the judgments of God, and abuse them furiously to serve their own turn, and to the executing of their own wicked outrage.

¹¹ The bond of the spiritual Babylon, and to the fortress of the same, chap. 9. 14.

¹² So the church of the ungodly, and kingdom of the beast, is said to be left naked, all the defences thereof in which they put their trust, being taken away from it.

¹³ That is, that even they which dwell further off, may with more commodity make haste unto that sacrifice which the Lord hath appointed.

¹⁴ That is, every of them bent their whole force, and conspired that by wonders, word, and work, they might bring into the same destruction, all kings, princes, and potentates of the world, cursedly bewitched of them by their spirits, and teachers of the vanity and impurity of the beast that committed fornication with the kings of the earth. And this is a right description of our times.

¹⁵ Croaking with all importunity, and continually day and night provoking and calling forth to arms, as the trumpets and furies of war, as is declared in the next verse.

¹⁶ That is, the devil, as chap. 11. 5.

¹⁷ Whereof chap. 13. 1.

¹⁸ That is, of that other beast, of which chap. 13. 11. for so is he called also, chap. 19. 20. and 20. 10.

¹⁹ A parenthesis for admonition, in which God warneth his holy servants, who rest in the expectation of Christ, always to address their minds unto his coming, and to look unto themselves, that they be not shamefully made naked and circumvented of these unclean spirits, and so they be miserably unprepared at the coming of the Lord, so Matt. 4. 29. and 25. 13.

A. D. 5-- 16 And they gathered them together into a place called in Hebrew, ²² Armageddon.

17 ⁶ And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the ²² air: and there came a loud voice out of the temple of heaven from ²² the throne, saying, ²² It is done.

18 ⁶ And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings, and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, even so mighty an earthquake.

19 And the great city was divided into three parts: and the cities ²² of the nations fell: and that great ²² Babylon came in remembrance before God, ²² to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath.

20 And every isle fled away, and the mountains ²² were not ²² found.

21 And there fell a great hail, like ²² talents, out of heaven upon the men, and men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail: for the plague thereof was exceeding great.

CHAP. XVII.

1 That great whore is described, 2 with whom the

¹² Namely, the angel, who holily, according to the commandment of God, was to do sacrifice: notwithstanding that the impure spirits do the same wickedly, as servants, not unto God, but unto the beast that hath seven heads.

²² That is (to say nothing of other expositions) the mountain itself, or mountain places of Megiddon. Now it is certain by the holy scriptures, that Megiddon is a city and territory in the tribe of Manasse, bordering upon Issachar and Acher, and was made famous by that lamentable overthrow of king Josias, whereof 2 Kings 22. 30. and 2 Chron. 35. 22. and Zach. 12. 11. In this mountain country God saith by figure, or type, that the kings of the people which serve the beast, shall meet together: because the Gentiles did always cast that lamentable overthrow in the teeth of the church of the Jews, unto their great reproach: and therefore were persuaded that that place should be most fortunate unto them (as they speak) and unfortunate unto the godly. But God here pronounceth, that the reproach of the church, and confidence of the ungodly, shall by himself be taken away, in the self-same place where the nations persuaded themselves they should mightily exult and triumph against God and his church.

²² The story of the seventh angel unto the end of the chapter, in which first is shewed, by sign and speech, the argument of this plague, in this verse, and then is declared the execution thereof in the verses following.

²² From whence he might move the heaven above, and the earth beneath.

²² That is, from him that sitteth on the throne, by the figure called Meronymia.

²² That is, Babylon is undone, as is shewed verse 19. and in the chapters following. For the first onset (as I might say) of this denunciation is described in this chapter: and the last, containing a perfect victory, is described in those that follow.

²² Now is declared the execution (as is said in verse 27.) and the thing that shall last come to pass in heaven and in earth, before the overthrow of the beast of Babylon: both generally, verse 18. and particularly in the cursed city, and such as have any familiarity therewith, in the three last verses.

²² The seat or standing place of Antichrist.

²² Of all such as cleave unto Antichrist, and fight against Christ.

²² That harlot, of whom in the next chapter following. Now this phrase, "to come into remembrance," is, after the common use of the Hebrew speech, borrowed from men, and attributed unto God.

²² That is, were seen no more, or were no more extant. A borrowed Hebraism.

²² Appeared not, which the Hebrews utter after this sort, were not, Gen 5. 24.

²² The manner of the particular execution, most evidently testifying the wrath of God by the original and greatness thereof: the event thereof is the same with that which is in chap. 9. 13. and that which hath been mentioned in this chapter, from the execution of the fourth angel kings of the earth committed fornication. 6 She is drunken with the blood of saints. 7 The mystery of the woman, and the beast that carried her, expounded. 11 Their destruction. 14 The Lamb's victory.

A. D. 56.

THEN ¹ there came one of the seven angels which had the seven vials, and talked with me, saying unto me, Come: I will shew ² thee the ² damnation of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters, ² With whom have committed fornication the kings of the earth, and the inhabitants of the earth are drunken with the wine of her fornication.

³ So he carried me away into the wilderness in the Spirit, and I saw a woman sit upon a ³ scarlet-coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, which had seven heads and ten horns.

⁴ And ⁴ the woman was arrayed ⁵ in purple and scarlet, and gilded with gold, and precious stones, and pearls, and had ⁵ a cup of gold in her hand full of abomination, and filthiness of her fornication.

5 And hitherto, that is to say, an incorrigible pertinacy of the world in their rebellion, and an heart that cannot repent, verse 9 and 11.

¹ The state of the church militant being declared, now followeth the state of the church overcoming, and getting victory, as I shewed before in the beginning of the tenth chapter. This state is set forth in four chapters. As in the place foregoing I noted, that in that history the order of time was not always exactly observed, so the same is to be understood in this history, that it is distinguished according to the persons of which it treateth, and that in the several stories of the persons is severally observed in the time thereof. For first is delivered the story of Babylon destroyed in this and the next chapter (for this Babylon, out of all doubt, shall perish before the two beasts and the dragon.) Secondly, is delivered the destruction of both the two beasts, chap. 19. And lastly of the dragon, chap. 18. In the story of the spiritual Babylon are distinctly set forth the state thereof in this chapter, and the overthrow done from God, chap. 18. In this verse, and that which followeth, is a transition or passage unto the first argument, consisting of the particular calling of the prophet (as often heretofore) and a general proposition.

² That is, that damnable harlot, by a figure, called hyppalage. For Saint John as yet had not seen her. Although another interpretation may be borne, yet I like this better.

² The sentence that is pronounced against this harlot.

³ Henceforth is propounded the type of Babylon, and the state thereof, in four verses. After, a declaration of the type, in the rest of this chapter. In the type are described two things; the beast (of whom chapter 13) in the third verse, and the woman that sitteth upon the beast, ver.

4. 5. 6. The beast in process of time hath gotten somewhat more than was expressed in the former vision. First, in that it is not read before, that he was apparelled in scarlet, a robe imperial, and of triumph. Secondly, in that that this is full of names of blasphemy: the other carried the name of blasphemy only in his heads. So God did teach that this beast is much increased in impiety and injustice, and doth in this last age triumph in both these more insolently and proudly than ever before.

^b A scarlet colour, that is, with a red and purple garment: and surely it was not without cause that the Romish clergy were so much delighted with this colour.

⁴ That harlot, the spiritual Babylon, which is Rome. She is described by her attire, profession, and deeds.

⁵ In attire most glorious, triumphant, most rich, and most gorgeous.

⁶ In profession, the nourisher of all, in this verse, and teaching her mysteries unto all, verse 5. setting forth all things most magnificently: but indeed most perniciously besotting miserable men with her cup, and bringing upon them a deadly giddiness.

5⁷ And in her forehead was a name written, A mystery, ⁸ that great Babylon, that mother of whoredoms and abominations of the earth.

6⁹ And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus, ¹⁰ and when I saw her, I wondered with great marvel.

7¹¹ Then the angel said unto me, Wherefore marvellest thou? I will shew thee the mystery of that woman, and of that beast that beareth her, which hath seven heads and ten horns.

8¹² The beast that thou hast seen, ¹³ was, and is not, and ¹⁴ shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and shall go into perdition, and they that dwell on the earth shall wonder (whose names

⁷ Deceiving with the title of religion, and publick inscription of mystery: which the beast in times past did not bear.

⁸ An exposition, in which Saint John declareth what manner of woman this is.

⁹ In manner of deeds: She is red with blood, and sheddeth it most licentiously, and therefore is coloured with the blood of the saints: as, on the contrary part, Christ is set forth imbrued with the blood of his enemies, Isa. 63. 1.

¹⁰ A passage unto the second part of this chapter, by occasion given of Saint John, as the words of the angel do shew in the next verse.

¹¹ The second part or place, as I said, verse 1. The narration of the vision promised in the verse following. Now there is delivered first an narration of the beast and his story, unto the 14th verse. After, of the harlot, unto the end of the chapter.

¹² The story of the beast hath a triple description of him. The first is a distinction of this beast from all that ever have been at any time: which distinction is contained in this verse. The second is a delineation or a painting out of the beast by things present, by which he might even at that time be known of the godly: and this delineation is according to his heads, verse 12, 13, 14. This beast is that empire of Rome, of which I spake chap. 13. 11. according to the mutations and changes whereof, which then had already happened, the Holy Ghost hath distinguished and set out the same. The apostle distinguisheth this beast from all others in these words: "The beast which thou sawest, was, and is not." For so I expound the words of the apostle for the evidency sake, as I will further declare in the notes following.

¹³ The meaning is, that beast which thou sawest before, (chap. 13. 1.) and which yet thou hast now seen, was (was, I say) even from Julius Cæsar in respect of beginning, rising up, station, glory, dominion, manner, and stock: from the house of Julius: and yet is not now the same, if they look unto the house and stock: for the dominion of this family was translated unto another, after the death of Nero; from that other unto a third; from a third unto a fourth; and so forth, was varied and altered by innumerable changes. Finally, the empire is one, as it were one beast: but exceedingly varied by kindreds, families, and persons. It was therefore, saith Saint John, in the kindred or house of Julius: and now it is not in that kindred, but translated unto another.

¹⁴ As if he should say, Also this same that is, shall shortly not be: but shall ascend out of the depth, or out of the sea (as was said, chap. 13. 1.) that is, shall be a new stock from amongst the nations without difference, and shall in the same state go unto destruction, or run and perish: and so shall successively new princes or emperors come and go, arise and fall, the body of the beast remaining still, but tossed with so many and often alterations as no man can but marvel that this beast was able to stand and hold it out, in so many mutations; verily, no empire that ever was tossed with so many changes, and as it were with so many tempests of the sea, ever continued so long.

¹⁵ That is, as many as have not learned the providence of God, according to the faith of the saints, shall marvel at these grievous and often changes: when they shall consider the self same beast, which is the Roman empire, to have been, and not to be, and to be, and still molested with perpetual mutation, and yet in the same to stand and continue. This, in mine opinion, is the most simple exposition of this place confirmed by the event of the things themselves. Although the last change also, by which the empire, that before was civil, became ecclesiastical, is not obscurely signified in these words, of which two, the first exercised cruelty upon the bodies of the saints: the other also upon their souls: the first by human order and policy, the other under the colour of the law of God, and of religion, ragged and imbrued itself with the blood of the godly.

are not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world) ¹⁵ when they behold the beast that was, and is not, and yet is.

9¹⁶ Here is the mind that hath wisdom. The ⁶ seven heads ¹⁷ are seven mountains, whereon the woman sitteth: ¹⁸ they are also seven kings.

10¹⁹ Five are fallen, ²⁰ and one is, ²¹ and another is not yet come: and when he cometh, he must continue a short space.

11²² And the beast that was, and is not, is even ²³ the eighth, and is ²⁴ one of the seven, ²⁵ and shall go into destruction.

12 And

¹⁶ An exhortation, preparing unto audience by the same argument, with that of Christ: "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." Wherefore for mine own part, I had rather read in this place, "Let there be here a mind, &c." So the angel passeth fully unto the second place of this description.

¹⁷ Very children know what the seven-hilled city is, which is so much spoken of, and whereof Virgil thus reporteth; "And compasseth seven towers in one wall:" that city it is, that when John wrote these things, had rule over the kings of the earth. It was and is not, and yet it remaineth to this day, but it is declining unto destruction.

¹⁸ This is the painting-out of the beast by things present (as I said before) whereby St. John endeavoured to describe the same, that he might be both known of the godly in that age, and be further observed and marked of the posterity afterwards. This delineation hath one type, that is, his heads, but a double description or application of the type: one permanent, from the nature itself, the other changeable, by the working of men. The description permanent, is by the seven hills, in this verse, the other that flecteth, is from the seven kings, verse 10, 11. And here it is worthy to be observed, that one type hath sometimes two or more applications, as seemeth good to the Holy Ghost to express, either one thing by divers types, or divers things by one type. So I noted before of the seven spirits, chap. 1. 4. Now this woman that sitteth upon seven hills, is the city of Rome, called in times past of the Grecians, ἑπτὰ-κόρα, i. e. of seven tops or crests, and of Varro septiceps, i. e. of her seven heads (as here) or seven heads, and of others, septemcollis, i. e. standing upon seven hills.

¹⁹ The beginning of these kings or emperors, is almost the same with the beginning of the church of Christ, which I shewed before, chap. 11. 1. Namely, from the year 25. after the passion of Christ, what time the temple and church of the Jews was overthrown. In which year it came to pass, by the providence of God, that that saying, "The beast was, and is not," was fulfilled before the destruction of the Jews, immediately following, came to pass. That was the year from the building of the city of Rome 809, from which year Saint John both numbered the emperors which hitherto had been, when he wrote these things, and foretelleth of two others next to come: and that with this purpose, that when this particular prediction or foretelling of things to come should take effect, the truth of all other predictions in the church might be the more confirmed. Which sign God of old mentioned in the law, Deut. 18. and Jeremiah confirmeth, chap. 28. 8.

²¹ Flavius Domitian, son of the first Vespasian. For in the latter end of his days Saint John wrote these things, as witnesseth Irenæus, lib. 5. adversus hæreses.

²² Nerva: the empire being now translated from the family of Flavius. This man reigned only one year, four months, and nine days, as the history writers do tell.

²³ This is spoken by the figure Synecdochæ, as much as to say, as that head of the beast, which was, and is not, because it is cut off, and Nerva in so short time extinguished. How many heads there were, so many beasts there seemed to be in one. See the like speech in the third verse of the thirteenth chapter.

²⁴ Nerva Trajanus, who himself in divers respects is called here the seventh and the eighth.

²⁵ Though in number and order of succession he be the eighth, yet he is reckoned together with one of these heads, because Nerva and he were one head. For this man obtained authority together with Nerva, and was consul with him, when Nerva left his life.

²⁵ Namely,

A. D. 96. 12 ²² And the ten horns, which thou sawest, are ²³ ten kings, which yet have not received a kingdom, but shall receive power, as kings, ²⁴ at one hour, with the beast.

13 ²⁵ These have one mind, and shall give their power and authority unto the beast.

14 These shall fight with the ²⁶ Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them: ²⁷ for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings: and they that are on his side, called, and chosen, and faithful.

15 ²⁸ And he said unto me, The waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, ²⁹ are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues.

16 And the ten ³⁰ horns which thou sawest upon the beast, are they that shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire.

17 ³¹ For God hath put in their hearts to fulfil his will, and to do with one consent for to give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God be fulfilled.

18 And that woman which thou sawest, is that ³² great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth.

CHAPTER XVIII.

2 The terrible destruction of Babylon is set out. 11.

¹ Namely, to molest with persecutions the churches of Christ, as the histories do accord, and I have briefly noted chap. 2. 10.

² The third piece of this description, as I said verse 8 is a prophetic prediction of things to come, which the beast should do, as in the words following Saint John doth not obscurely signify, saying, "Which have not yet received the kingdom, &c." For there is an Antithesis or opposition between the ten kings and those that went before. And first, the persons are described in this verse, then their deeds in the two verses following.

³ That is, arising with their kingdoms out of the Roman seats: at such times as that political empire began by the craft of the Popes greatly to fall.

⁴ Namely, with that second beast, whom we called before a false prophet, which beast, ascending out of the earth, got unto himself all the authority and power of the first beast, and exerciseth the same before his face, as was said, chapter 14. 11, 12. For when the political empire of the West began to grow downwards, there both arose those ten kings, and the second beast took the opportunity offered, to usurp unto himself all the power of the former beast. These kings long ago many have numbered, and described to be ten, and a great part of the events plainly testifyeth the same in this our age.

⁵ That is, by consent and agreement, that they may conspire with the beast, and depend upon his beck. Their story is divided into three parts, counsels, acts, and events. The counsels some of them consist in communicating of judgments and affections: and some in communicating of power, which they are said to have given unto this beast, in this verse.

⁶ With Christ and his church, as the reason following doth declare, and here are mentioned the facts and events, which followed for Christ his sake, and for the grace of God the Father towards those that are called elect, and are his faithful ones in Christ.

⁷ This is the other member of the enarration, as I said, verse 7. belonging unto the harlot, shewed in the vision, verse 3. In this history of the harlot these three things are distinctly propounded: what is her magnificency, in this verse, what is her fall, and by whom it shall happen unto her, in the two verses following: and lastly, who that harlot is, in the last verse. This place, which by order of nature should have been the first, is therefore made the last, because it was more fit to be joined with the next chapter.

⁸ That is, as unconstant and variable as are the waters. Upon this foundation sitteth this harlot as queen; a vain person, upon that which is vain.

¹⁰ A reason rendered from the chief efficient cause, which is the providence of God, by which alone Saint John by inversion of order affirmeth to have come to pass, both that 16, 18 The merchants of the earth, who were enriched with the pomp and luxuriousness of it, weep and wail: 20 But all the elect rejoice for that just vengeance of God. A. D. 96.

AND ¹ after these things, I saw another ² angel come down from heaven, having great power, so that the earth was lightened with his glory.

2 And he cried out mightily with a loud voice, ³ saying, * It is fallen, it is fallen, Babylon ⁴ that great city, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of all foul spirits, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird. ⁵ Ch. 14. 8. ⁶ Jer. 51. 9.

3 For all nations have drunken of ⁷ wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich of the abundance of her pleasures.

4 ⁸ And I heard another voice from heaven say, ⁹ Go out of her, my people, that ye ¹⁰ be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.

5 For her sins are ¹¹ come up into heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities.

6 Reward

the kings should execute upon the harlot that which pleased God, and which he declared in the verse next before going: and also that by one consent and counsel, they should give their kingdom unto the beast, &c. verse 13, 14. for as these being blinded have before depended upon the beck of the beast that listeth up the harlot, so it is said, that afterward it shall come to pass, that they shall turn back, and shall fall away from her, when their hearts shall be turned into better state by the grace and mercy of God.

¹² That is, Rome, that great city, or only city (as Justinian calleth it) the king and head whereof was then the Emperor, but now the Pope, since that the condition of the beast was changed.

¹³ The second place (as I said before, chap. 17. 1.) of the history of Babylon, is of the woful fall and ruin of that whore of Babylon. This historical prediction concerning her is threefold. The first a plain and simple foretelling of her ruin, in three verses. The second a figurative prediction by the circumstances, thence unto the 20th verse. The third a confirmation of the same by sign or wonder, unto the end of the chapter.

¹⁴ Either Christ, the eternal word of God the Father (as often elsewhere) or a created angel, and one deputed unto this service, but thoroughly furnished with greatness of power, and with light of glory, as the ensign of power.

¹⁶ The second prediction, which is of the circumstances of the ruin of Babylon: of these there are two kinds: one going before it, as that beforehand the godly are delivered, unto the ninth verse: the other following upon her ruin: namely, the lamentation of the wicked, and rejoicing of the godly, unto the twentieth verse.

¹⁷ Two circumstances going before the ruin, are commanded in this place: one is, that the godly depart out of Babylon: as I mentioned, chap. 12. to have been done in time past, before the destruction of Jerusalem; this charge is given here, and in the next verse. The other is, that every one of them occupy themselves in their own place in executing the judgment of God, as it was commanded the Levites of old, Exod. 32. 27. and that they sanctify their hands unto the Lord, verse 6, 7, 8.

¹⁸ Of this commandment there are two causes: to avoid the contagion of sin, and to shun the participation of those punishments that belong thereunto.

¹⁹ He useth a word which signifieth the following of sins one after another, and rising one of another in such sort, that they grew at length to such an heap, that they came up even to heaven.

A. D.
96.

6 ⁷ Reward her, even as she hath rewarded you, and give her double according to her works: and in the cup that she hath filled to you, fill her the double.

7 Inasmuch as she glorified herself, and lived in pleasure, so much give ye to her torment and sorrow: for she saith ^b in her heart, I sit being a queen, and am ^c no widow, and shall ^d see no mourning.

8 Therefore shall her plagues come at ^e one day, death, and sorrow, and famine, and she shall be burnt with fire: for that God which condemneth her, is a strong Lord.

9 And ⁸ the kings of the earth shall bewail her, and lament for her, which have committed fornication, and lived in pleasure with her, when they shall see that smoke of that her burning.

10 And shall stand afar off for fear of her torment, saying, Alas, alas, that great city Babylon, that mighty city: for in one hour is thy judgment come.

11 ⁹ And the merchants of the earth shall weep and wail over her: for no man buyeth their ware any more.

12 The ware of gold, and silver, and of precious stones, and of pearls, and of fine linen, and of purple, and of silk, and of scarlet, and of all manner of thyne wood, and of all vessels of ivory, and of all vessels of most precious wood, and of brass, and of iron, and of marble,

13 And of cinnamon, and odours, and ointments, and frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and servants, and souls of men.

14 (¹⁰ And the ^f apples that thy soul lusted after, are departed from thee, and all things which were fat and excellent, are departed from thee, and thou shalt find them no more)

15 The merchants of these things which were waxed rich, shall stand afar off from her, for fear of her torment, weeping and wailing,

16 And saying, Alas, alas, that great city that was clothed in fine linen and purple and scarlet, and gilded with gold, and precious stones, and pearls.

17 ¹¹ For in one hour so great riches are come

⁷ The provocation of the godly, and the commandment of executing the judgments of God, stand upon three causes, which are here expressed: the unjust wickedness of the whore of Babylon, in this verse; her cursed pride, opposing itself against God, which is the fountain of all evil actions, verse 7. and her most just damnation by the sentence of God, verse 8.

^b With herself.

^c I am full of people, and mighty.

^d I shall taste of none.

^e Shortly, and at one instant.

⁸ The circumstances following the fall of Babylon, or the consequent thereof (as I distinguished them verse 4.) are two: namely, the lamentation of the wicked, unto the 19th verse, and the rejoicing of the godly, verse 20. This most sorrowful lamentation, according to the persons of them that lament, hath three members: the first whereof is, the mourning of the kings and mighty men of the earth, in two verses: the second is, the lamentation of the merchants that traffick by land, unto the 19th verse: The third is, the wailing of those that merchandise by sea, verse 16, 17, 18. In every of those the cause and manner of their mourning is described in order, according to the condition of those that mourn, with observation of that which best agreeth unto them.

⁹ The lamentation of those that trade by land, as I distinguished immediately before.

¹⁰ An apostrophe, or turning of the speech by imitation: used for more vehemence, as if those merchants, after the manner of mourners, should in passionate speech speak unto Babylon, though now utterly fallen and over-to desolation. And every ship-master, and all the people that occupy ships, and ship-men, and whosoever traffick on the sea, shall stand afar off, 18 And cry, when they see that smoke of that her burning, saying, What city was like unto this great city!

19 And they shall cast dust on their heads, and cry, weeping, and wailing, and say, Alas, alas, that great city, wherein were made rich all that had ships on the sea by her costliness: for in one hour she is made desolate.

20 ¹² O heaven, rejoice of her, and ye holy apostles and prophets: for God hath punished her, to be revenged on her for your sakes.

21 ¹³ Then the mighty angel took up a stone like a great millstone, * and cast it into the sea, ^{Jer. 51.63.} saying, With such violence shall that great city Babylon be cast, and shall be found no more.

22 ¹⁴ And the voice of harpers, and musicians, and of pipers, and trumpeters, shall be heard no more in thee: and no craftsman, of whatsoever craft he be, shall be found any more in thee: and the sound of a millstone shall be heard no more in thee.

23 And the light of a candle shall shine no more in thee: and the voice of the bridegroom and of the bride shall be heard no more in thee: for thy merchants were the great men of the earth, and with thine enchantment were deceived all nations.

24 And in her was found the ¹⁵ blood of the prophets, ¹⁶ and of the saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth.

C H A P. XIX.

¹ The heavenly company praise God for avenging the blood of his servants on the whore. ⁹ They are written blessed, that are called to the Lamb's supper. ¹⁰ The angel will not be worshipped. ¹¹ The mighty King of kings appeareth from heaven. ¹⁹ The battle, ²⁰ wherein the beast is taken, ²¹ and cast into the burning lake.

AND ¹ after these things I heard a great voice of a great multitude in heaven, saying, thrown. So Isaiah 12. 9. and in many other places.

^f By this is meant that season which is next before the fall of the leaf, at what season fruits ripen, and the word signifieth such fruits as are longed for.

¹¹ The manner of mourning used by them that trade by sea.

¹² The other consequent upon the other ruin of Babylon, is the exultation or rejoicing of the godly in heaven and in earth, as was noted verse 9.

¹³ The third prediction, as I said verse 1. standing of a sign, and the interpretation thereof: the interpretation thereof is in two sorts, first, by a simple propounding of the thing itself, in this verse, and then by declaration of the events, in the verses following.

¹⁴ The events are two: the one of them opposite unto the other, for amplification sake. There shall be, saith he, in Babylon, no mirth nor joy at all, in this and the next verse, but all heavy and lamentable things, from the bloody slaughters of the righteous, and the vengeance of God coming upon it for the same.

¹⁵ That is shed by bloody massacres, and calling for vengeance.

¹⁶ That is, proved and found out, as if God had appointed a just inquiry concerning the impiety, unnaturalness, and injustice of these men.

¹⁷ This chapter hath in sum two parts: one transitory, or of passage unto the things that follow, unto the tenth verse: another historical, of the victory of Christ gotten against both the beasts, unto the end of the chapter: which I said was the second history of this argument, chap. 17. 1.

The

A. D. 96. ing, ¹ Hallelujah, salvation, and glory, and honour, and power ² to the Lord our God.

² For true and righteous ³ are his judgments: for he hath condemned that great whore which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath avenged the blood of his servants, ⁴ sent by her hand.

³ And again they said, ⁵ Hallelujah: and that her smoke rose up for evermore.

⁴ And the four and twenty elders, and the four beasts fell down, and worshipped God that sat on the throne, saying, Amen, Hallelujah.

⁵ ⁶ Then a voice came out of the ⁷ throne, saying, Praise our God, all ye his servants, and ye that fear him, both small and great.

⁶ And I heard ⁸ like a voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of strong thunderings, saying, Hallelujah: for the Lord that God that Almighty one, ⁹ had reigned.

⁷ Let us be glad and rejoice, and give glory to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath ¹⁰ made herself ready.

⁸ And to her was granted, that she should be arrayed with ¹¹ pure fine linen and shining: for the fine ¹² linen is the ¹³ righteousness of saints.

⁹ ¹⁴ Then he said unto me, Write, ¹⁵ Blessed are they which are called unto the Lamb's supper. And he said unto me, These words of God are true.

¹⁰ ¹⁶ And I fell before his feet, ¹⁷ to worship him: but he said unto me, See thou do it not: for I am thy fellow servant, and one of thy brethren, which have the ¹⁸ testimony of Jesus, Worship ¹⁹ God: for the testimony of ²⁰ Jesus is the spirit of ²¹ prophecy.

¹¹ ²² And I saw ²³ heaven open, and behold a white horse, and he that sat upon him was called faithful and true, and he judgeth and fighteth righteously.

¹² And his eyes ²⁴ were as a flame of fire, and on his head ²⁵ were many crowns: and he had a name written, that no man knew but himself.

¹³ And he was clothed with a garment dipt in blood, and his name was called THE WORD OF GOD.

¹⁴ ²⁶ And the hosts which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed with fine linen white and pure.

¹⁵ ²⁷ And out of his mouth went out a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the heathen: for he shall ²⁸ rule them with a rod of iron: for ²⁹ he it is that treadeth the wine-press of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God.

¹⁶ ³⁰ And he hath upon his garment, and upon his thigh a name written, ³¹ THE KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS.

¹⁷ ³² And I saw an angel stand in the ³³ sun, who cried with a loud voice, saying to all the fowls that did fly by ³⁴ the midit of heaven, Come, and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God, ¹⁸ That ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of high captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of all free men, and bond men, and of small and great.

¹⁹ ³⁵ And I saw the beast, and the kings of the

The transition hath two places, one of praising God for the overthrow done unto Babylon, in four verses: and another likewise of praise and prophetic, for the coming of Christ unto his kingdom, and his most royal marriage with his church, thence unto the tenth verse. The former praise hath three branches, distinguished after the ancient manner of those that sing epithalamia, that is, an invitation or provocation, in two verses: responsa, a response or answer in the third verse: and conclusio, a close or joining together in harmony: all which I thought good of purpose to distinguish in this place, lest any man should with Porphyrius, or other like dogs, object unto Saint John, or the heavenly church, a childish and idle repetition of speech.

² The proposition of praise, with exhortation, in this verse, and the cause thereof, in the next verse.

³ The song of the antiphony or response, containing an amplification of the praise of God, from the perpetual and most certain testimony of his divine judgment, as was done at Sodom and Gomorrah, Gen. 19.

⁴ The second place of praise, as I said, verse 1. which first is commanded from God in this verse: and then is in most ample manner pronounced of the creatures, both because they see that kingdom of Christ to come, which most they desire, verse 6. also because they see that the church is called forth to be brought home into the house of her husband by holy marriage, unto the fellowship of his kingdom, verse 7. 8. Wherefore Saint John is commanded to write in a book the Epiphonema, or acclamation joined with a divine testimony, verse 9.

⁵ Out of the temple from God, as 11. 19.

⁶ Without the temple ⁷ heaven.

¹⁰ This is a gift given by the husband for marriage sake, and a most choice ornament which Christ bestoweth upon us, as upon his spouse.

¹¹ Good works, which are lively testimonies of faith.

¹² Namely, the angel, as appeareth by the next verse.

¹³ The particular history of this verse is brought in by occasion, and as it were besides the purpose, that St. John might make a public example of his own infirmity, and of the modest sanctimony of the angel, who both renounced for himself the divine honours, and recalled all the servants of God unto the worship of him alone: as also 22. 8.

¹⁴ Which are commanded to bear witness of Jesus.

¹⁵ For Jesus is the mark that all the prophecies shoot at.

¹⁶ The second place of this chapter (as I said verse 1.) is of the victory gotten by Christ against both the beasts: in which first, Christ is described as one ready to fight, unto the sixteenth verse; then is shewed the battle to be begun, thence unto the eighteenth verse. Lastly, is set forth the victory, unto the end of the chapter. In this place do shine forth most excellent properties of Christ as our heavenly judge and revenger, according to his person, company, effects and names.

¹⁷ Properties belonging to his person, that he is heavenly, judge, faithful, true, just, in this verse, searching out all things, ruling over all, to be-searched out of none, verse 12. the triumphant, and the very essential word of God, verse 13.

¹⁸ The company or retinue of Christ, holy, innumerable, heavenly, judicial, royal, and pure.

¹⁹ The effects of Christ prepared unto battle, that with his mouth he striketh the Gentiles, ruleth and destroyeth.

²⁰ The name agreeing unto Christ, according to the former properties, expressed after the manner of the Hebrews.

²¹ The second member, as I said verse 11. A reproachful calling forth of his enemies unto battle: in which not themselves (for why should they be called for h of the King of the world, or provoked being his subjects? for that were not comely) but in their hearing the birds of the air are called to eat their carcases.

²² That is, openly, and in sight of all, as Num. 25. 4. and 2 Sam. 12. 11.

²³ That is, through this inferior heaven, and which is nearer unto us: an Hebrew phrase.

²⁴ The third member (as was said verse 11.) of the victory obtained by Christ. Unto this appertaineth two things: his buckling with the least and his forces, in this verse: and the event most magnificent, described after the manner of men, in the verses following. All these things are plain.

A. D. 96. the earth, and their hosts gathered together to make battle against him that sat on the horse, and against his army.

20 But the beast ²¹ was taken, and with him that false prophet that wrought miracles before him, whereby he deceived them that received the beast's ²² mark, and them that worshipped his image. These both were alive cast into a lake of fire burning with brimstone.

21 And the remnant were slain with the sword of him that sitteth upon the horse, which cometh out of his mouth, and all the fowls were filled full with their flesh,

C H A P. XX.

1 The angel 2 bindeth Satan for a thousand years. 8 Being loosed, he stirreth up Gog and Magog, that is, prey and open enemies against the saints, 11 but the vengeance of the Lord cutteth off their infidelity. 12 The books are opened, by which the dead are judged.

AND I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key ² of the bottomless pit, and a great chain in his hand.

2 And he took the dragon, that old serpent, which is the devil and Satan, and he bound him ³ a thousand years:

3 And cast him into the bottomless pit, and he shut him up, and sealed the door upon him, that he should deceive the people ⁴ no more, till the thousand years were fulfilled: for after that he must be loosed for ⁵ a little season.

²¹ Namely, that beast with seven heads, of which before chap. 13. 1. and 17. 3.

²² That is, that beast with two heads, of which 13. 11. Look more, chap. 16. 14.

¹ Now followeth the third place of the propheticall history, which is of the victory whereby Christ overcame the dragon, as I noted, chap. 7. 1. This place must necessarily be joined with the end of the twelfth chapter, and be applied unto the just understanding thereof. This chapter hath two parts, one of the dragon overcome, unto the tenth verse: the other of the resurrection and last judgment, unto the end of the chapter. The story of the dragon is double: First, of the first victory, after which he was bound by Christ, unto the sixth verse. The second is of the last victory, whereby he was thrown down into everlasting punishment, thence unto the sixteenth verse. This first history happened in the first time of the Christian church, when the dragon, thrown down from heaven by Christ, went about to molest the new birth of the church in the earth, chap. 12. 17, 18. For which cause I gave warning, that this story of the dragon must be annexed unto that place.

² That is, of hell, whither God threw down the angels which had sinned, and bound them in chains of darkness to be kept unto damnation, 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude 6.

⁴ Namely, with that public and violent deceit which he attempted before, chap. 12. and which after a thousand years (alack for woe!) he most mightily procured in the Christian world.

⁵ Which being once expired, the second battle and victory shall be, of which, ver. 7, 8.

⁶ A description of the common state of the church of Christ in earth, in that space of a thousand years, for which the devil was in bonds: in which first, the authority, life, and common honour of the godly is declared, ver. 4. Secondly, newness of life is preached unto others by the gospel, after that space, ver. 5. Finally, he concludeth with 4 ⁶ And I saw ^a seats: and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them, and I saw the souls of them that were ⁸ beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which ⁹ did not worship the beast, neither his image, neither had taken his mark upon their foreheads or on their hands: and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.

5 ¹¹ But the rest of the dead men ¹¹ shall not live again, until the thousand years be finished: this is the first resurrection.

6 Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: for on such the ¹² second death hath no power: but they shall be the priests of God and of Christ, ¹³ and shall reign with him a thousand years.

7 ¹⁴ And when the ¹⁵ thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison,

8 ¹⁶ And shall go out to deceive the people, which are in the four quarters of the earth: even ¹⁷ Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle, whose number is as the sand of the sea. *Ezek. 39. 2.

9 And they went up into the ^b plain of the earth, and they compassed the tents of the saints about, and the beloved city: but ¹⁷ fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them.

10 ¹⁸ And the devil that deceived them, was cast into a lake of fire and brimstone, where that beast and that false prophet are, and shall be tormented even day and night for evermore.

11 ¹⁹ And I saw a great ²² white throne, and

4 N one

pit. and, ver. 7.

⁴ For judgment was committed to them, as to members joined to the head: not that Christ's office was given over to them.

⁷ This was a type of the authority of the good and faithful servants of God in the church, taken from the manner of men.

⁸ Of the martyrs which suffered in those first times.

⁹ Of the martyrs which suffered after both the beasts were now risen up, chap. 15. for there these things are expounded.

¹⁰ Whosoever shall lie dead in sin, and not know the truth of God.

¹¹ They shall not be renewed with that newness of the life by the enlightening of the gospel of the glory of Christ. For this is the first resurrection, by which the souls of the dead do rise from their death, in the second resurrection their bodies shall rise again.

¹² That whereby both body and soul, that is, the whole man, is addicted and delivered unto eternal death, see chap. 2. 11.

¹³ A return unto the intended history, by resuming the words which are in the end of the fourth verse.

¹⁴ The second history, of the latter victory of Christ, as was said ver. 1. In which are summarily described the work, overthrow, and eternal punishment of Satan.

¹⁵ Of which I spake, ver. 2. Then therefore shall be given unto him liberty to rage against the church, and to molest the saints for the sins of men: unto whom the faithful shall have associated themselves more than was meet, tasting with them of their impurity of doctrine and life.

¹⁶ The work, or act of Satan (which is the first member, as I distinguished in the verse foregoing) to deceive the whole world, even unto the uttermost nations thereof: to arm them against the people of God, in this verse; and to besiege and oppress the church, with his whole strength, in the verse following.

^b As if he said, Inasmuch that the whole face of the earth, how great soever it is, was filled.

¹⁷ The wrath of God, consuming the adversaries, and overthrowing their enterprises, Heb. 10. 27. And this is the second member mentioned ver. 7. the overthrow of Satan.

¹⁸ The third member, eternal destruction against those that are overcome: as I noted in the same place.

¹⁹ The second part of this chapter, in which is described the judge, in this verse, and the last judgment in the verse following.

²² That is, a tribunal-seat most prince-like and glorious: for so doth the Greek word also signify.

A. D. 96. 13 On the East part there were three gates, and on the North side three gates, on the South side three gates, and on the West side three gates.

14 And the wall of the city had ¹² twelve foundations, and in them the names of the Lamb's twelve apostles.

15 ¹³ And he that talked with me, had a golden reed, to measure the city withal, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof.

16 ¹⁴ And the city lay ^b four square, and the length is as large as the breadth of it: and he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs: and the length, and the breadth, and the height of it are equal.

17 And he measured the wall thereof, an hundred forty and four cubits, by the measure of man, that is, of the ^c angel.

18 ¹⁵ And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the city was pure gold, like unto clear gla's.

19 And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones: the first foundation was jasper: the second of sapphire: the third of a chalcedony: the fourth of an emerald:

20 The fifth of a sardonix: the sixth of a sardius: the seventh of a chrysolite: the eighth of a beril: the ninth of a topaz: the tenth of a chrysoloprasus: the eleventh of a jacinth: the twelfth an amethyst.

21 And the twelve gates were twelve pearls, and every gate is of one pearl, and the ^d street of the city is pure gold, as shining gla's.

22 And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it.

• Isa. 60. 19. 23 * ¹⁶ And the city hath no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it: for the glory of God did light it: and the Lamb is the light of it.

• Isa. 60. 3. 24 * And the people which are saved, shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth shall bring their glory and honour unto it.

• Isa. 60. 11. 25 * And the gates of it shall not be shut by day: for there shall be no night there.

¹² That is, foundation stones, according to the number of the gates, as is shewed, verse 19.

¹³ A transition unto a more exquisite description of the parts of the church, by finding out of the measure of the same, by the angel that measured them.

¹⁴ The measure and form most equal, in two verses.

^b A four-square figure hath equal sides, and outright corners, and therefore the Grecians call by this name those things that are steady, and of continuance, and perfect.

^c He addeth this, because the angel had the shape of a man.

¹⁵ The matter most precious and glittering, which the presence of God maketh most glorious.

^d By street, he meaneth the broadest place of the city.

¹⁶ The second form of particular description (as I said, verse 12.) from foreign and outward accidents, which are these. Light from God himself, in this verse: glory from men, verse 24. perfect security from all harm, verse 25. Finally, such truth and incorruption of glory, verse 26. as can bear and abide with it: nothing that is inglorious, verse the last.

¹ Here is absolved and finished the description of the celestial church (as I shewed before, chap. 21. 12.) by the effects in five verses, and then this book is concluded in the rest of the chapter. The effects proceeding from God, who dwelleth in the church, are these: the everlasting grace of God, in this verse, the eternal living of the godly, as chap. 2. 7. the eternal fruits which the godly bring forth unto God, themselves and others, verse 2. freedom and immunity from all evil, God himself taking pleasure in his servants, and they likewise in their God, verse 3. The beholding and sight of God, and sealing of the faith-

26 And the glory and honour of the Gentiles shall be brought unto it. A. D. 96.

27 And there shall enter into it none unclean thing, neither whatsoever worketh abomination or lyes: but they which are written in the Lamb's * book of life.

C H A P. XXII.

* Ch. 3. 5. and 20. 12. Phil. 4. 3.

1 The river of the water of life is shewed, 2 and the tree of life: 6, 7 Then followeth the conclusion of this prophecy, 8 where John declareth, that the things herein contained, are most true. 13 And now the third time repeateth these words, All things come from him who is the beginning and the end.

AND he shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as chrystal, proceeding out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb.

2 In the midst of the street of it, and of either side of the river, was the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and gave fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree serv'd to heal the nations with.

3 And there shall be no more curse, but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it, and his servants shall serve him.

4 And they shall see his face, and his name shall be on their foreheads.

5 * And there shall be no night there, and they need no candle, neither light of the sun: for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign for evermore. • Isa. 60. 19.

6 ² And he said unto me, These words are faithful and true: and the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to shew unto his servants the things which must shortly be fulfilled.

7 Behold, I come shortly. Blessed is he that keepeth the words of the prophecy of this book.

8 And I am John, which saw and heard these things: and when I had heard and seen, * I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel which shewed me these things. • Chap. 19.

9 But he said unto me, See thou do it not: for I am thy fellow servant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the words of this book: worship God.

10 ³ And he said unto me, ⁺ Seal not the words ful from all eternity, vers: 4. the light of God, and an everlasting kingdom and glory, verse 5.

² This whole book is concluded and made up by a confirmation and a salutation. The confirmation hath three places: the words of the angel unto the 15th verse; the words of Christ, verse 16, 17. and the obtestation made by St. John from divine authority, thence unto the 20th verse. By the speech of the angel this prophecy is confirmed unto the 8th verse, and then he speaketh of the use of this book in the verses following. The prophecy is first confirmed by the angel from the nature thereof, that it is faithful and true: Secondly, from the nature of the efficient cause: both principal, which is God; and instrumental, which is the angel in this verse. Thirdly, from the promises of God concerning his coming to effect all these things, and concerning our salvation, verse 7. Fourthly, from the testification of St. John himself, verse 8. The rest of the speech of the angel tending to the same end. St. John interrupted or broken off by his unadvised act of worshipping him, in the same verse which the angel forbidding, teacheth him that adoration must be given not to him, but only to God: as for himself, that he is of such nature and office, as he may not be adored: which thing also was in like manner done, chap. 16. verse 10.

³ The angel returneth to his former speech: in which he teacheth the use of this book both towards ourselves, in this and the next verse: and in respect of God for declaration of his truth, thence unto the 15th verse.

⁴ That is, propound this prophecy openly unto all, and conceal no part of it: The contrary whereunto is commanded, Isa. 8. 6. and Dan. 8. 26.

A. D. words of the prophecy of this book: for the 56. time is at hand.

11 ⁵ He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he that is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still.

12 ⁶ And behold, I come shortly, and my reward is with me, * to give to every man according as his work shall be.

13 I am ² Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.

14 Blessed are they that do his commandments, that their right may be in the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.

15 For without shall be dogs, and enchanters, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth or maketh lyes.

16 ¹ I Jesus have sent mine angel, to testify unto you these things in the churches: I am the root and the generation of David, and the bright morning star.

⁵ An objection prevented. But there will be some that will abuse this occasion unto evil, and will wrest this scripture unto their own destruction, as Peter saith. What then saith the angel? the mysteries of God must not therefore be concealed, which it hath pleased him to communicate unto us. Let them be hurtful unto others, let such be more and more vile in themselves whom this scripture doth not please: yet others shall be further confirmed thereby unto righteousness, and true holiness. The care and reformation of these may not be neglected, because of the voluntary and malicious offence of others.

⁶ The second place belonging unto the use of this book, as I said verse 10. Also (saith God by the angel) though there should be no use of this book unto men: yet it shall be of this use unto me, that it is a witness of my truth unto my glory, who will come shortly, to give and execute just judgment in this verse: who have taught that all these things have their being in me, in the 13th verse, and have denounced blessedness unto my servants in the church, verse 14. and reprobation unto the ungodly, verse 15.

⁷ The blessedness of the godly set down by their title and interest thereunto, and their fruit in the same.

⁸ The second place of confirmation (as I said verse 6.) is the speech of Christ ratifying the vocation of St. John, and the authority of his calling and testimony, both from the 17 And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. A. D. And let him that heareth say, Come: and let 96. him that is athirst, come: and * let whosoever * 16. 55. 1. will, take of the water of life freely.

18 ⁹ For I protest unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book:

19 And if any man shall diminish of the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from those things which are written in this book.

20 ¹⁰ He which testifieth these things, saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

21 ¹¹ The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

condition of his own person, being God and man, in whom all the promises of God are Yea and Amen, 2 Cor. 1. 20. and also from the testification of other persons, by the acclamation of the Holy Ghost, who here is, as it were, an honourable assistant of the marriage of the church as the spouse, and of every of the godly as members: and finally, from the thing present, that of their own knowledge and accord, they are called forth unto the participation of the good things of God, verse 17.

⁹ The obtestation of St. John (which is the third place of the confirmation, as was noted verse 6.) joined with a curse of execration to preserve the truth of this book intire and uncorrupted in two verses.

¹⁰ A divine confirmation or sealing of the obtestation, first, from Christ avouching the same, and denouncing his coming against all those that shall put their sacrilegious hands hereunto: then from St. John himself, who by a most holy prayer calleth Christ to take vengeance of them.

¹¹ The salutation apostolical, which is the other place of the conclusion, as I said verse 6. and is the end almost of every epistle: which we wish unto the church, and to all the holy and elect members thereof, in Christ Jesus our Lord, until his coming to judgment. Come, Lord Jesus, and do it. Amen, again Amen.

T H E E N D .

A BRIEF TABLE of the Interpretation of the Proper Names which are chiefly found in the Old Testament, wherein the First Number signifieth the Chapter, the Second the Verse.

Whereas the wickedness of time, and the blindness of the former age hath been such, that all things altogether have been abused and corrupted, so that the very right names of divers of the holy men named in the scriptures have been forgotten, and now seem strange unto us; and the names of infants, that should ever have some godly advertisements in them, and should be memorials and marks of the children of God received into his household, have been hereby also changed and made the signs and badges of idolatry and heathenish impiety: we have now set forth this table of the names that be most used in the Old Testament, with their interpretations, as the Hebrew importeth, partly to call back the godly from that abuse, when they shall know the true names of the godly fathers; and what they signify, that their children now named after them, may have testimonies by their very names, that they are within that faithful family that in all their doings had ever God before their eyes, and that they are bound by these their names to serve God from their infancy, and have occasion to praise him for his works wrought in them, and their fathers; but chiefly to restore the names to their integrity, whereby many places of the scriptures, and secret mysteries of the Holy Ghost, shall better be understood. We have meddled rarely with the Greek names, because their interpretation is uncertain, and many of them are corrupted from their original; as we may also see these Hebrew names, set in the margin of this table, which have been corrupted by the Grecians. Now for the other Hebrew names that are not here interpreted, let not the diligent reader be careful: for he shall find them in places most convenient amongst the annotations; at least so many as may seem to make for any edification, and understanding of the scriptures.
